PASKOLA.
(Trade Mark.)
A FLESH FORMING FOOD.
(Artificially Digested.)

To pale, thin, and emaciated people: This food will make you fat, robust, and strong. People who take it gain five and even ten pounds in a month. It stops the wasting in consumptive cases and causes them to become fleshy. Paskola is far better than Cod Liver Oil in this respect, without its repulsive taste. You can buy it at any drug store. Send your name to The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Reade St., New York, and get their interesting pamphlet.

"How to the Singer Comes the Song!"

How to the singer comes the song?
At times of joy, alone;
A wordless tone
Caught from the crystal gleam of ice-bound trees;
Or from the violet-perfumed breeze;
Or the salt smell of seas
In sunlight weltering many an emerald mile;
Or the keen memory of a lovelit smile.

Thus to the singer comes the song:
Gazing at crimson skies
Where burns and dies
On day's wide hearth the calm, celestial fire;
The poet with a wild desire
Strikes the impassioned lyre,
Takes into turned sound the flaming sight,
And ushers with new song the ancient night.

How to the singer comes the song?
Bowed down by ill and sorrow
On every morrow,
The unworded pain breaks forth in heavenly singing;
Not all too late sharp solace bringing
To broken spirits winging
Through mortal anguish to the unknown rest—
A lyric balm for every wounded breast.

How to the singer comes the song?
How to the summer fields
Come flowers? How yields
Darkness to happy morn? How doth the night
Bring stars? Oh, how do love and light
Leap at the sound and sight
Of her who makes this dark world seem less wrong—
Life of my life, and soul of all my song!
—Richard Watson Gilder, in December Century.

WHEN THE TIME CAME.

"Oh, if Dick would only do something!" sighed Millicent, very softly, to herself. "I do believe if it were nothing more than getting run over by a carriage—a very light carriage with nobody in it, so he would not really be hurt much—then papa would be so pleased he would let us marry each other, after all. But Dick won't. I'm afraid he'll never do anything. He never has." And then she looked over at Dick, who sat very meekly on the other side of the room twirling his gloves listlessly, and she pouted.

"I suppose you are pouting at me?" said Dick.

"Yes," she answered.

"I'm sorry," he continued. "I suppose it's so because I don't amount to anything?"

"Of course it is, Dick," she answered.

"Well, what in the world can I amount to?" asked Dick, dejectedly. "I cannot go and make a fortune, for I am rich already. I can't found a great family, because ours has been as good a one for centuries as a fellow can wish, and, besides, that would take too long. I haven't the talent to be an artist. I haven't brains enough to be a professional man. Every one agrees on that. I am too small to be a soldier. And if I went into business, it would only be a question of time before I'd lose my money instead of making any. They all agree on that, too. All I can be is a gentleman, and no one seems to care anything about a gentleman. I believe your father would like me better if I were an adventurer."

"Oh no, he wouldn't," interrupted Millicent. "But the Colonel would like to see you once in a while without such awfully good clothes on. Papa has had a hard struggle in this world, and he doesn't seem to have any confidence in any one who has not had. He is always talking about the duty a man owes to the world to do something for it."

"I would be willing to do anything for the world I could, Millicent, but I don't know what to do, and I don't believe I could do it if I did know."

"I believe if you had got angry and called him names when he refused to let me marry you, he would have turned right around and said yes. But all you did was to pick up your hat and gloves, and bow very politely, and say good evening, and walk out. That's no way to handle papa; he needs an iron hand, and he gets it occasionally from his only daughter, too." Here Millicent shook her head emphatically.

"But I respect your father too much, Milly, to say anything mean to him, and if I had, then he wouldn't have let me come to see you any more, and that would have been more than I could stand."

"You're not like other men, Dick."

"No, I'm afraid not. I suppose that's why they call me a dude. But I'm not a dude; I'm not silly. I can't get my clothes soiled, no matter how I try, and as I never seem to wear them out, I haven't got any that look like old ones. The fact is, I can't help looking like what I am—a boy who has been brought up in a kid glove. If I wore blue jeans and a flannel shirt they'd always look new."

"I'm afraid no one would fight with me, I'm so small," he answered.

"Papa was awfully delighted with the butcher's boy and the grocery boy the other day when they got into a fight in our back yard. It frightened me; but the Colonel went out and gave them each a dollar and laughed all the rest of the afternoon about it."

"I might get the boxing-master at the club to give me a black eye; I don't suppose it would hurt very much. But if I did, the colonel would find out that I didn't get it in a fight, and he would think that I had been trying to deceive him."

"Dick," said Millicent seriously, "I wonder if you are afraid?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Afraid of the dark or danger, or anything like that, for instance. I'm afraid of the dark."

"No," answered Dick; "I don't think I am afraid of the dark. I don't know about anything else, for I don't believe I ever had anything to be afraid of."

Millicent sighed again very softly to herself. It was rather a hard state of affairs. Here was the man she wanted to marry; just the kind of a man she, with her impetuous ways, could get along with beautifully; a boy whom she had known all her life; whose father had been her father's friend; whose mother had been her dead mother's friend, and a man, too, whom she loved—and always had—since she was a little girl in short dresses and he a boy in knee trousers, and they could not get married because in the eyes of her father he didn't amount to anything. What did she care? Was he brave and manly? The question gave her an inspiration. It wouldn't be much of a trial, but it would at least be a little bit of fun; all they had done in all their courtship was to sit in opposite sides of the parlor and talk to each other. She rose and went out into the hall. Dick eyed her as she went out, but he never questioned anything she did, so he said nothing. She walked back to the stairs leading to the basement and looked down. Everything was satisfactorily dark. The light in the lower hall had been turned out, and from this she knew that the servants had gone to bed. It was nearly midnight she noticed by the dining-room clock. With a satisfied smile she walked on tiptoe and with a great pretence of fright back to the parlor.

"Dick," she said in a whisper that seemed quite terrified, "I heard some one down stairs, and I'm afraid it's a burglar. Would you just as lief go and see?"

"With pleasure," he said, in that calmly polite way he never forgot.

She smiled as she noticed that he carried his gloves in his hand just as he would on the street, and felt unconsciously of his necktie to see if it was adjusted correctly. Dick walked to the head of the back stairs while she remained in the parlor peering out, half hidden by the portiere. He leaned far over and listened intently.

"Do you hear anything?" she asked in a whisper.

"Yes," he answered.

"Like a man sawing," he answered.

She had hard work to prevent herself from laughing outright. She had been in the identical spot where Dick now stood but a moment before, and she knew that the basement was as still as a grave. It was his frightened imagination; that was all. She would see the thing out. Perhaps Dick was afraid after all. She whispered again.

"Do you want a revolver?" she asked.

"No," he answered. "I would not know what to do with it if I had one." Then she saw him disappear down the stairs.

She went back into the parlor and picked up his hat. She smiled as she noticed how new it looked, just like everything else he had. Then she tried it on, and stood before the glass wondering if it wouldn't make a pretty riding hat. She remembered that if any other man was to come back into the parlor and find her with his hat on her head, he would promptly demand a kiss, after the good old custom. But Dick—no, Dick would never think of such a thing, or dare to do it if he did. Presently she wondered why he was gone so long. He wasn't afraid of the dark, after all. He must have decided on a very thorough search. She wished her father would come down stairs and discover that Dick had at least done that much in the world. But no; she could hear her father walking up and down the room immediately above her, thinking of all sorts of things that he called important, but which did not interest her at all. She was just beginning to feel lonely, and to wish that Dick would get through and come back, when she heard a dull sound as though something heavy had fallen in the kitchen. There was silence for a moment after that, and then she heard a great crashing of glass, and heard Dick calling lustily for the police. Her heart leaped up into her throat. She wanted to call to him to came back to her, as he loved her, but she could not utter a word. She ran to the front window in her fear, and threw it open. A stockily built fellow, who looked gigantic in the half light of the street lamps, was just making his escape through the gate and down the street, while right underneath her, barcheaded, but still with his immaculate gloves in his hand, ran Dick after him, still calling at the top of his voice for a policeman. She saw them go, forty feet apart, down the street at the best speed they could make. She saw them disappear from the light of one street lamp and come out into the light of another twice, and then she saw the stockily built fellow wheel quickly around; she saw a little sharp line of flame; she heard a loud report; and then—she fainted.

It was but half an hour later that a cab drove up to the Colonel's door, and Dick alighted—not the immaculately clad Dick that he usually was, but Dick with a bloody handkerchief tied around his head, and with much dirt on his trousers, and his necktie all awry, and with no gloves at all. He did not have to ring at the door, for it was opened ere he was half-way up the front steps by the Colonel himself, who came out with his great grizzled hand outstretched toward him.

"I came back to get my hat and overcoat," Dick began to apologize.

"No, you didn't," said the Colonel, shaking his hand heartily. "You came back to see Millicent. Did you get the fellow?"

"We'll attend to him to-morrow," said the Colonel. "In the meantime come in and see your sweetheart. She fainted; and I'll tell you right here that if you expect to wear a hat away from this house to-night, it will have to be one of mine, for she has hugged that one of yours ever since the alarm was given, and it's rather out of shape."

Millicent, still very pale, was reclining in an easy chair when Dick entered, and a maid was rubbing her temples. She looked very much as though she wanted to cry. Undoubtedly she had been crying.

"Good evening, Milly," said Dick.

"Oh, Dick! did he hurt you?" she asked.

"He hit me over the head with something down in the kitchen just as I discovered him. But don't worry; the doctor said it wouldn't amount to anything."

And then of course, Millicent did cry. And Dick stood staring at her and looking very foolish, and very much as though, as usual, he did not know what to do. And probably he would still be standing there if the Colonel, in his gruff voice, hadn't said to him:

"Go over and kiss her, my boy. Don't you see that's what she wants?"

"But I'm all blood and dirt," apologized Dick.

"Blood and dirt!" roared the colonel. "Blood and dirt! You ought to be proud of it. Why, you're the first member of your line who has had any blood and dirt on him since your great-grandfather was wounded at Bunker Hill. Go and kiss her."

And Dick did, and it seemed to him that fortune had suddenly concluded to shower on him all her blessings, when he heard the Colonel saying, as he went out of the room: "I'll give you two just half an hour to decide when you are going to get married, and then you must say good night."—Harpre's Weekly.

"A-BOUNDIN' AND A-BUTTIN'."

Among our real estate assessors a year or two ago was one named Dennis McElhinney. On his rounds he came to the habitation of his friend, Michael Mulcahy.

"Good morn', Michael!" says McElhinney.

"Good mornin' Dinnis!" returns Mulcahy.

"Then be aisy wid me, Dinnis."

"I'll be aisy, Mike. I'll put yez down for $10 a fut. Dat will be t'irty times tin is t'ree hundred for de lot and twinty fur de goat."

"Phwat!" cries Mulcahy.

"De goat's not rale estate!"

"It is so under the new law!"

"Go 'way wid yez!"

"I can prove it to yez," says the assessor, drawing out his instructions. "Rade that, will yez? Assiss it at its proper valuation per front foot, all property boundin' an abuttin' on both sides of the strate. Many's the time I've seen your goat a-boundin' an a-buttin' on both sides of the strate. Twinty dollars fur de goat, Mike." — New York Herald.

"What's all this noise?" he demanded, very irritably. "It sounds as if a shade was shaking the bars of his cage and trying to get out and do somebody."

The deputy warden of Hades came for ward to explain.

"It's the oldest inhabitant, sir," he said. "He has just been listening to some university extension lectures on Darwinism and I guess he doesn't enjoy being made a monkey of."—Detroit Tribune.

A Contented Fellow.

I jest can't tell
How the corn'll sell;
But I still keep the crops a-growin';
I jest can't know,
How the wind'll blow,
If we'll have warm weather,
Or hail, or snow;
I jest can't tell,
So I jest lay low,
And the old world keeps a-goin'!

I jest can't say
If the hives will pay:
But the roses—they keep blowin';
An' the bees—they buzz
Like they knowed what wuz!
An' still make honey
(That's the way they does!)
I jest can't say—
So I go my way,
An' the old world keeps a-goin'!

I jest take all—
From the spring to fall,
Like it comes—with the Lord's bestowin';
If there's bread to eat
It is powerful sweet!
An' I ain't less thankful
When I'm short on meat!
I jest take all,
Till the roll's complete,
An' the old world keeps a-goin'!

DEVELOPING A MODEL MAIDEN.

A sensible mother, whose only child at one time was in great danger of being spoiled, was telling me of the rules by which this small maiden lives, and as she has now grown into a lovely girl of seven, whose busy fingers and active brain are a marvel in their way, away to health and mind, they may not come amiss.

This little maid is awakened at 7, in summer at six. She sleeps in a room where sunshine plays for several hours every day. It is upholstered in cretonne and has rugs thrown upon a floor covered with matting. She does her lessons here, so has a little desk where her note paper and pens are kept in perfect order. In fact, she must keep her own room in order. A shelf for her own books is arranged at a convenient height, and a large low wardrobe is provided for storing dolls and toys. A small room has been fixed as a play room.

As soon as Celestine, as I shall call her, awakes she has a sponge bath; standing in her big tin tub, she rubs herself in quite a professional manner, for her mamma says exercise is good for her, and although the fortunate little girl has a maid, she performs the sacred rites of the toilet almost unassisted.

For breakfast she has fruit, an orange, baked apple or some grapes, oat-meal, toast, and eggs and milk. After breakfast there is a walk to school, a private school, where few pupils, sunny class-rooms and a great attention to physical exercise influenced her mother's choice more than the course of study. Here the day begins with light dumb-bell exercise, and marching and "striking attitudes," as Celestine says.

The studies are enough, but no intelligent child is "pushed"—they learn fast enough. At 12 the small maiden walks home to lunch. This meal is generally of roast beef, chops or chicken, boiled potatoes, and a simple dessert.

After lunch there is an hour's recreation—and many amusements for rainy days have been devised by nurse and mother, and then an hour's or perhaps only a half hour's nap. During the afternoon there are lessons in music, and sewing to be done for the dolls, letters to be written, gifts for birthdays and anniversaries, etc., for uncles and aunts, and mamma and the friends. Also there are calls to be made and visits to receive, for every detail of life is observed in miniature by this well-brought up little girl.

At 5 30 she has dinner; it is only a supper, but consists of bread and milk and sometimes custard or cornstarch.

At 7.30 she goes to bed and is asleep at 8. Her whole life was a blur, as her mamma says, when she was only five, simply because there was no regularity and because everybody spoiled her. She is now growing from a nervous, frail child into a very healthy and well-bred little maiden, and all because of the simple, ordinary life she leads. As she is intelligent, active, and serious, her mother has her mind, and especially her body, kept busy with many things. She has been taught to wash her doll's clothes and to starch and iron them. She can cook, and she has shown a class of mob-capped little girls how to thread a needle and wear a thimble.

And she is very happy, has no time for tempers and moods, and though only an "infant unique," is not being spoiled.—New York Advertiser.

WHAT THE CHINESE EAT.

A member of the English Parliament, Florence O'Driscoll, has a lively paper in the November number of The Century describing life and street-scenes in Canton. Mr. O'Driscoll says:

The food purveyors made a most striking display; the fruiterers exposed on flat trays bananas, pineapples, melons, figs, pears (the latter beautiful to the sight but hard and tasteless), together with many Chinese fruits whose shapes and tastes were familiar to me, but whose names I knew not. Some of these fruits were most artistically peeled, pine-apple peeling being quite an art. A great variety of vegetables was offered for sale. Among them were the white shoots of the bamboo, which seemed to be a favorite article of diet. But to what use, indeed, may not this wonderful grass be put? From it Chinamen make almost everything conceivable: hats, cloaks, sheets, carpets, roofs, buildings, baskets, chairs, carrying-poles, fishing-tools—the list might be prolonged ad infinitum. And then they eat it as well.

Preserving ginger in many forms was a noticable trade. The roots were washed and left in water, as an English cook treats potatoes before boiling them. A number of men and women holding a two-pronged fork in each hand sat around a table with the tubs of peeled ginger beside them: they picked ginger roots out of the water, and, laying them on the table, pierced them all over very rapidly with both forks until quite soft. The pierced roots were then put into another tub, where they were boiled in syrup. The ginger went through various other minor processes, until eventually it was packed in the earthenware jars in which it is sold in European shops. The whole process was certainly a clean one, and the smell of the aromatic root in preparation was both grateful and pleasant.

In the bakers' shops I saw nothing corresponding to our European loaf: solid-looking little yellow patties, slabs of flabby brown cakes, emblematic of concentrated dyspepsia; scomes, or an equivalent, apparently of fried batter; and great flakes of milk white, slippery-looking paste not above an eighth of an inch thick—to be rolled up and deftly sliced with a cleaver-shaped tool into long strings like macaroni. These foods were to be seen everywhere in the city, but nothing light and open. To my eyes the breadstuffs seemed sad, solemn, sodden, and bilious.

Strawber—"You look as if you had been laid up, old man." Singerly—"I have been. I announced my engagement last week." Strawber—"Why should that lay you up?" Singerly—"I announced it to her father." —Life.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 4, 1895.

LOCAL NOTICES.

They say W. R. Milligan, the shoe dealer, is selling ladies' rubbers cheaper than other dealers can buy them. 25 cents a pair is the price of the kind we are talking about.

PALMER NEWS.

Communion at the churches next Sunday morning.

All the schools of the town resumed sessions again Wednesday.

Miss Cook has decided not to reopen her kindergarten until the spring term.

Walter Shaw is the new messenger boy at the Western Union telegraph office.

Mrs. H. F. Warren of Milford, N. H., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Northrop.

Mrs. S. Ellis has returned to Palmer to live, and has rooms at J M. Converse's.

The Ladies' Tuesday Social Club will meet next Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. L. E. Chandler.

Mrs. H B. Knox and daughter Gertrude of Providence, R I., are the guests of Mrs. L E. Chandler.

Charles Clark, formerly a member of the Congregational church choir, now of New York, was in town over Sunday.

The annual meeting of St. Paul's Universalist parish will be held in the parlors of the church next Monday evening.

Mrs. Ella Johnson of Norwich, Ct., who has been the guest of her brother, Albert Bogue, has returned to her home.

J. W. Weeks, Jr., formerly of Palmer, has sold the Hotel Savoy at Springfield, of which he has been proprietor for some time.

The W C. T. U. will hold its annual meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Misses Effie and Anna Shaw entertained a party of young people at their North Main street home Monday evening in honor of their guest, Miss Jillson of Worcester.

The ice is about 10 inches thick on the ponds, and if the weather continues cold the rest of this week the ice dealers will commence harvesting their crop next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bogue spent New Year's with Mrs. Bogue's parents at Mittineague. Miss Marguerite Young returned with them and is now their guest.

The sleighing has been all that could be asked for this week, and has been improved by about everyone who owned, could beg or hire anything in the shape of horseflesh and runners.

Some unknown friends have presented St. Paul's Universalist church with a large black walnut case for the storing of music, several pictures for the chapel and a large mirror for the vestibule,

Ten continued drunk cases were due in the district court Monday morning for adjustment. One had been settled by the death of the defendant, and the others were continued to various dates.

James Knox will be the janitor of the Business and Social Club's rooms in Holden's block hereafter, and will be at the rooms the greater part of the time, especially in the afternoon and evening.

Miss C. L. Peebles, who has had charge of Mrs. L. E. Carpenter's millinery department, returned to her home in Lowville, N. Y., today, but will return to Palmer again at the beginning of the spring season.

The senior circle of King's Daughters of the Congregational church has elected the following officers for the ensuing six months: President, Mrs. D. L. Bodfish; treasurer, Miss Carrie Roper; secretary, Miss Julia A. Allen.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church made choice of these officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. L. E. Child; vice president, Mrs. J. A. Palmer; treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Shaw; secretary, Mrs. J. C. Wing.

At the Baptist church next Sunday evening Rev. J. H. MacDonald of Newton Center will speak on the mission of young people's societies in the Baptist church. All who are interested in young people are cordially invited to be present.

The ladies of the Congregational church held a social in the church parlors Wednesday evening, when supper was served by Mrs. G. A. Bills, Mrs. W. H. Brainerd, Mrs. G. H. Fisherdick, Mrs. Joseph King, Mrs. J. A. Palmer and Mrs. John Smith.

Alvah Thayer, living near Fosket's Mills, fell from his sleigh on Main street Wednesday afternoon and it was at first thought he was dead, but it proved to be only an attack of heart trouble, to which he is subject. He was taken to the Converse House and Dr. Holbrook summoned, and was taken home later in the afternoon.

The Sunday school of the Baptist church elected these officers last Sunday: Superintendent, Charles Peck; assistant superintendent, Arthur Wells; treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Fitch; secretary, Miss Lillian Kempton; assistant secretary, Fred Walker; librarian, L. W. Washburn; musical director, E. B. Taylor.

At the meeting of the Men's Sunday Evening Club of the Congregational church Sunday evening the constitution was changed so that hereafter the officers will hold for six months instead of three. These officers were chosen for the coming six months: President, J. C. Wing; vice president, D. L. Bodfish; treasurer, G. H. Hastings; secretary, H. N. Sedgwick.

The first letter from our Boston correspondent relating to the sessions of the Legislature will be found in another column. These will appear weekly, and as they are written by one who is on the ground and has an intimate knowledge of the men and affairs about which he writes, our readers will be kept well posted on the doings of both branches of the Great and General Court during its session.

The number of deaths in town during the past year was 138, against 162 in 1893. Of this number 67 were females and 71 males. There were 35 deaths of children under one year of age; between one and five years 13; between 5 and 10, 1; between 10, and 20, 5; between 20 and 30, 7; between 30 and 40, 6; between 40 and 50, 1; between 50 and 60, 4; between 60 and 70, 5; between 70 and 80, 7; between 80 and 90, 6; over 90, 1.

The first of the farmers' institutes under the auspices of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural society will be held in the district court room in this village next Tuesday, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. The subject for discussion will be "The Cultivation of the Grasses," and the speaker will be Elbridge Cushman of Lakeville. Everybody is invited to attend. Dinner will be served at Pierce's restaurant for 25 cents per plate.

The Quaboag Literary Circle was favored with a good attendance last Friday evening, and the exercises were particularly interesting. Miss Bessie Royce read a portion of Longfellow's "Theologian's Tale," W. A. Lawson read the selections of the Round Table, Rufus Stimson by invitation read an analysis and review of Schiller's tragedy, "The Maid of Orleans," and F. B. Pope read a paper on "The Norman Conquest." The next meeting occurs Jan. 18th.

The atmosphere Tuesday morning, and in fact all day, was wonderfully clear. Objects could be seen with great distinctness at long distances, and sounds were conveyed a long way. The exhaust of the engine at the No. 2 mill in Thorndike could be distinctly heard in this village all day, so plainly that many thought it must be an engine near by in the village, some even thinking that it was the fire engine which had been called into requisition for some duty and they had not known it.

The special trains which have been run by the merchants to Three Rivers, Thorndike and Monson for the accommodation of their patrons during the past few weeks have been so well patronized that there is some talk of continuing them at some future time, but under a slightly different plan. It is proposed to run a free round-trip train from the villages to Palmer, leaving for Palmer about 6.40 and leaving Palmer on the return trip about 8 30, and it is not unlikely that the project may develop into a monthly train on some such basis.

At the annual meeting of the Palmer Bicycle club Tuesday evening these officers were elected: President, A. J. Adams; vice president, F. L. Gunn; treasurer, F. U. Wetmore; secretary, Fred Lacouline; directors, Frank Thayer, F. L. Gunn, A. J. Adams, E. Tufts and H. A. King. The resignation of W. F. Waite as a member of the club was presented and accepted. The report of the treasurer showed a good balance in the treasury after all bills were paid. The club has recently placed a pool table in its rooms for the use of members.

District Deputy Grand Master F. R. Sistare of Springfield installed the following officers of Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows Wednesday evening: N. G., M. M. Thomas; V. G., L. R. Holden; treasurer, C. T. Brainerd; secretary, G. H. Bray; permanent secretary, L. G. Parkhurst; conductor, C. A. Royce; warden, E. E. Kendall; O. G., W. S. Whiting; I. G., E. F. Shaw; R. S. N. G., C. E. Fuller; L. S. N. G., J. Hutchinson; R. S. V. G., H. C. Morgan; L. S. V. G., E. J. Fuller; R. S. S., Frank Lamb; L. S. S., W. A. Harran; chaplain, R. Russell. A collation was served after the installation.

The regular monthly meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club was held Wednesday evening and four new members elected. It was voted to throw the rooms open for the inspection of the public next Tuesday evening, the delay in this matter having been made necessary by the unfinished state of the rooms, several of the doors having only just been hung. It was also voted to throw the rooms open for the use of the ladies in the families of the members on one afternoon and evening a week, Wednesdays, to commence with the 16th of this month. The annual meeting of the club will be held next Wednesday evening.

The week of prayer will be observed in the Congregational church next week, and meetings will be held every evening but Saturday. There will be a short sermon or Bible reading each evening, followed by an after meeting. The subjects will be as follows:

SUNDAY evening, "A Prayer for Churches and Christians." Eph. 3:14-19.
TUESDAY, "A Prayer for the Christless and Wandering." Ezek. 37:9.
WEDNESDAY, "A Prayer for Children and Youth." 1 Kings 17:17-23.
THURSDAY, "A Prayer for the Family and Home." Luke 8:41.
FRIDAY, "A Prayer for Christian Organizations and Institutions." Ps. 80:14, 15

A session of the probate court was held in Springfield Wednesday, and among the business transacted was the following: Wills approved of Caroline B. Morris, late of Hampden, Frances G. Olmstead and Elizabeth L. McIntire executrices; Fanny Bradford, late of Monson, Sarah E. Bradford executrix; Anna M. Colton, late of Palmer, Stephen G. Shaw and Nancy J. Loomis executors. Administration granted in the estates of—Fidelia Tirrell, late of Ludlow, Charles A. Haynes administrator; Dennis W. McNamara, alias Dennis W. Mack, late of Palmer, Bridget McNamara administratrix. John W. Fay was appointed guardian of John and Denis Moriarty of Monson, minors.

The fine sleighing of the past week has brought out the fast horses on Main street, and some pretty exhibitions of speed have been seen. Dr. Ellery, J. H. Woolrich, Dr. Holbrook, Nelson Whiton and G. W. Ely had horses out Monday afternoon, besides which there were G. C. Flynt and Ralph Clifford of Monson. There were some exciting contests, but "Dick," driven by Nelson Whiton, proved to be as good as any of them, in spite of his 20 years. C. E Fuller and Dr. Smith of Bondsville joined the ranks Tuesday, and H. P. Holden's "Roscoe" was also out. Wednesday there was also some good racing. Yesterday afternoon Palmer horses went to Monson to try conclusions on the streets of that place.

Mrs. Mary Chinouard of Monson was before the district court yesterday for an assault on Herbert C. Wright. Wright was arrested last October for an attempt to rape the 7-years-old daughter of Mrs. Chinouard. The little girl was so badly frightened that it was extremely difficult to get her testimony, but the grand jury found a bill against Wright. He was released on Monday, the case having been placed on file, and on Tuesday appeared in Monson, where he accosted the little girl the first time he saw her. This aroused the quick temper of the indignant mother, and she went for Wright with her fists, and although he is much the heavier and stronger of the two, gave him a good drubbing, the marks of which were plainly visible on his face as he came into court. Mrs. Chinouard admitted having done the pounding, but owing to Wright's record and the circumstances of the case, sentence was postponed until the 31st of January.

Next week will be observed as a week of prayer at St. Paul's Universalist church, with the following programme:

SUNDAY, Jan. 6. 1895, 10.45 a. m. Preaching by the Pastor, topic,—Prayer. 7.00 p. m. Y. P. C. U. Service. "Our Answer to God." Isa. vi: 8. 8.30 p. m. Home Half-hour for Meditation. Prayers "For Churches and Christians." Eph. iii: 14-21.
MONDAY, Jan. 7, 8.45 p. m. Home Half-hour for Meditation. Prayers "For Christian Work and Workers." Hal. iii: 2.
TUESDAY, Jan. 8, 7.30 p. m. (1.) Praise Service. (2.) Prayers "For Christless and Wandering." Ezek. xxxvii: 9. (3.) Preaching by Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren.

FRIDAY, Jan. 11, 7.30 p. m. (1.) Praise Service. (2.) Prayers "For the Organizations and Institutions of the church." Psa. lxxx: 14-15. (3.) Preaching by T. C. Druley of Stafford.
SATURDAY, Jan. 12, 8.30 p. m. Home Half-hour for Meditation. Prayers "For Missions and Missionaries." John xvii: 18-25.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held last evening, when reports were read from every department of church work. The amount contributed during the past year for benevolencies of all kinds was over $1500. These officers were c osen for the present year: Clerk, O. P. Allen; deacon for one year, W. A. Breckenridge; for two years, C. W. Bennett; three years, J. B. Shaw, four years, G. H. Hastings; treasurer, J. H. Tuthill; advisory, Rev. F. E. Jenkins, W. A. Breckenridge, C. W. Bennett, J. B. Shaw, G. H. Hastings, O. P. Allen, L. H. Gager, Miss Anna Fisherdick, Mrs. C. E. Hunt, Mrs. Joseph Kenerson, J. H. Tuthill; auditor, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; executive committee, J. B. Shaw, H. G. Loomis, L. H. Gager; superintendent of Sunday school, L. H. Gager; assistant, J. C. Wing; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. J. B Shaw; superintendent of home department, A. W. Thayer; treasurer and secretary, F. B. Pope; librarian, Miss Julia Allen; organist, Miss Lottie Bray.

The annual meeting of the Second Baptist Church was held on Monday evening beginning with a social reunion at 4 and supper at 6 o'clock. At the roll call 46 members responded in person, 14 through friends and 11 by letter. The treasurer's report was very gratifying, showing a balance of $71.83 on hand with all bills paid, while a year ago there was an empty treasury and a debt of $110 These officers were elected for the ensuing year: Clerk and treasurer, C. B. Fiske; collector, N. W. Chandler; executive committee, C. B. Fiske, C. E. Fuller, E. B. Taylor, John H. Shaw, C. E. A. Peck; prudential committee in addition to the deacons and clerk, L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. J. C. Rich, Mrs. W. J. Smith; baptismal committee, A. E. Fitch, G. H. Justin, Mrs. C. E. Fuller, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. W. J. Smith; auditing committee, J. J. Prentiss, A. E. Fitch; soliciting committee, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst, Mrs. E. G. Buss, Mrs. A. E. Fitch, Mrs. G. M. Atkins.

State Primary School Notes.

Dr. Sarah J. Williams is spending a week with her parents in New York.

Superintendent Wheeler gave a turkey supper to the carpenters and their wives last night, as the new barn is completed and the carpenters have finished their work.

Dr. Peters of Boston examined the herd of cows at the school Saturday, and found all, with the exception of three, in a very fine condition. One was ordered killed and found to be badly affected with tuberculosis. The other two were not ordered killed, but Superintendent Wheeler had one slaughtered which was found to be in a healthy condition.

PALMER CENTER.

Rufus and Cyrus Stimson returned to college Wednesday.

Mrs. Samuel Brown is recovering from a very successful operation performed by Drs. Desmarais and Hendee.

A history class has been formed with Henry Stimson, president; Emma Lent, secretary and treasurer; Mabel Brown, musical director.

BONDSVILLE.

Mr. Will Watson of New Haven was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell this week.

A party of young folks took a sleigh ride to a sociable at Turkey Hill Wednesday, and had a most enjoyable time.

Mr. Childs of Lowell, who has taken the position made vacant by Agent Getchell, commenced his duties New Year's day, and has moved his family here.

The Epworth League Convention of group 6 of the Springfield district at the M. E. church last Friday was very interesting, and the address by Rev. E. P. Herrick of Springfield was listened to by the audience with rapt attention.

Charles E. Getchell, who has been agent of the Boston Duck Co. the last five years, has resigned his position and will make his home in Brockton this winter. He was presented Monday by the employes of the mills and shop with a Knight Templar watch charm and an ebony gold-headed cane as testimonials of regard.

THREE RIVERS.

B. F. Hovey is quite ill this week.

Miss Louise White is quite ill this week.

Fred Turner of Vermont has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Talbert this week.

J. Cedilotte of Leverett is taking charge of the New London station during the absence of Fred Hillman, who is quite ill.

Dr. Bliss, who has been suffering from typhoid fever at the Amherst hospital, is still quite ill, and his friends feel anxious about his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murdock entertained a number of people on New Year's day, including Mr. and Mrs. A R. Murdock of South Belchertown, Mrs. Lucy Knowlton, Mrs. Andrews and Miss Maud Murdock of Thorndike.

Charles Haynes's saw mill is approaching completion, and when finished will be a great improvement to his property on Main street. Several persons have been drawing logs to the lumber yard during this week, and Mr. Haynes thinks he will be able to commence work in two or three weeks.

Last Monday evening, at a special meeting of the A. O. U. W., the following officers were elected: Master, E. F. Shaw; foreman, J. W. Needham; overseer, P. A. Forte; financier, John Wilson; receiver, H. J. Eaton; recorder, S. P. Gauthier; guide, Daniel Manning. H. R. Paine is past master, and the installation will take place next Tuesday evening.

Prosper Howard celebrated his 95th birthday yesterday, surrounded by about 20 of his friends and acquaintances, from Springfield and other places. Mr. Howard is a remarkably vigorous man for his years, as he is still able to attend to the interests of his property and frequently takes long walks around town. Many of his neighbors were delighted yesterday to see him in such good health as they called to extend their congratulations, and everyone in the neighborhood hopes that Mr. Howard will celebrate many as happy anniversaries as the occasion of yesterday proved to be.

THORNDIKE.

Mrs. Charles Mooers is visiting in Orange with Mrs. Charles Gibbs.

L. L. Harris and A. G. Garant of Springfield spent Sunday in town.

M. F. Kelliher returned this week to Amherst college to resume his studies.

Mrs. C. E. Getchell of Bondsville is the guest of Mrs. C. H. Hobbs this week.

Miss Nellie Murphy is expected home this week from her visit with friends in Enfield.

Now that there is fine sleighing, there will no doubt be a number of sleigh ride parties while it lasts.

The Thorndike Co. has been very busy this week shipping the goods which were sold about a week ago at auction.

New Year's passed off very pleasantly; not much drunkenness was seen about town, and the usual quietness prevailed.

Mrs. William Graves and family of Clinton have been the guests of her mother, Mrs. John Molloy, during the past week.

Several from this place will go to West Warren this evening to attend the entertainment and dance given by the A. O. H.

N. F. Dutton and Mr. Kurshnan of Cleveland, Ohio, have been the guests of Mrs. G. A. Murdock of Main street this week.

William Connelly, who has been quite ill the past week, has been removed to the home of Mrs. James Hutchinson, where he is being cared for.

A fine monument is soon to be placed in the Catholic cemetery to the memory of the late John Molloy, who was one of the oldest Irish inhabitants of the town. Mr. Godfrey of Ware will do the work.

The rink was well patronized on Saturday evening, and those present enjoyed a very pleasant time. The same programme will be carried out to-morrow evening. The Columbian Band will furnish music.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Robinson were given a pleasant surprise by a large number of their friends at their home on Church street Saturday evening, who left the newly married couple a sum of money.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, JANUARY 2, 1895.

This year's assembling of the Legislature is of more interest than any of recent years on account of the historical associations which are aroused by the transfer of the House from the old hall to the new one. The change was fittingly marked by a set oration by Representative Roe of Worcester upon the erection of the present State House and its occupancy in 1797. It was a subject which involved a great deal of research to fill a little space, and Mr. Roe was by general consent the fit man of the house to undertake the task. He told of the erection of the present front, of its general aspect within, which is far different from what it is to-day. Then he gave an exceedingly interesting biographical sketch in outline of some prominent members of the House of 1797, finding that no fewer than 38 of its 189 members had the same surnames as members of the House of 1895, and also, a very curious fact, James H. Mellen, who has been a member of the House so long that "the memory of man kenneth not to the contrary," was a member in 1797,—though not from Worcester. Mr. Roe finished his speech with an eloquent plea for preserving the present front, with the many historic associations which are gathered around it.

Much has been said within a few days about the historic wooden codfish which hangs in the present hall of the House, and some people have been disposed to cast it aside as of no account. But the House will cherish sacredly this memento of the greatness of the early New England fisheries and of the sturdy character of the men who went from the rocky shores of Cape Ann and from the sandy wastes of Cape Cod to pursue the wealth of the sea in every quarter of the globe, amassing wealth and training up a hardy race of mariners. Dr. Roberts of Chelsea is author of an order, which has been adopted, for the appointment of a committee of three to prepare a history of the emblem which hangs in the hall of the House, and the disposition of the members, judging by private conversation, is to make sure that the codfish is given an honorable and permanent abiding place in the new hall of the House.

But the glories and beauties of the present, no less than the memorable history of the past, have dazzled the eyes of the members, both old and new, this week. The State House extension is a structure of amplitude and magnificence far beyond anything to be seen in the old part, and ahead of anything in any public building in Boston, unless the corridor of the new Suffolk county court house be excepted. The acme of this splendor is, of course, the new hall of the House, and it would be easy to write thousands of words to bring out the details of the artistic and historical and architectural merits which are to be found at every point,—saving always the press gallery, where convenience for work has been sacrificed to the architecture, and the reporters are not nearly as well off as in the narrow quarters in their present gallery. But the public will be better provided for, and the accommodations for the members are more spacious and numerous than in the present hall, so it is to be hoped they, at least, will not grumble.

In both form and color the hall is a wide departure from the old hall. As to form, it is an ellipse in general outline, and not as handsome as the old one. Let the same artists be given free rein with the decorations of the old hall, its superior excellence of form, with its beautiful dome and its classic colonade of Corinthian columns on each of the four sides, its ornaments in relief and broad cornices, would speedily be apparent. But, in plain white as it is, it must stand modestly and with downcast head in the presence of its brilliant and haughty new rival. The color of the new is of a light yellow and blue combined for the plastered part of the walls and for the high-arched ceiling, which takes the place of the dome as far as possible. This part is divided in panels with historic and artistic ornaments, and the whole is very warm and harmonious in tone. The lower part of the hall, as high as the galleries, is finished in California mahogany or prima vera, a handsome white wood, while the front railings of the galleries are marine carvings of the same, ending in lions' heads. Massive pilars support the front of the public gallery. Tall electroliers are arranged at several points along the front of the galleries, and high on the wall above the speaker opposite the galleries. Further light is obtained from electric lights high in the ceiling, arranged in the form of an ellipse, and the whole is brilliantly lighted whenever desired.

In the middle of the ceiling is a vast skylight whose prevailing tint is green. In its center is the state coat of arms of the Commonwealth, while around it, at intervals, are the names of the 14 counties of the state, Worcester, Suffolk, Essex and Middlesex being given the places of honor. The carpet is of dark navy blue, with ornamental figures in an ecru tint. All combines to make a harmonious whole, while the reception room and reading rooms adjoining are also of a richness of color to dazzle the eye of the new member. It is a great deal of magnificence for the Puritan state of Massachusetts. Will the Legislature maintain Puritan excellence of ideals in these surroundings?

Superintendent of Schools Miss Clara A. Wood, and Miss Edith L. Wood returned last Friday evening from their home in Springfield, where they spent the holiday vacation.

The entertainment given by the Fitzpatrick family of Ware at Memorial Hall Monday evening, for the benefit of St. Patrick's church, was well attended and much enjoyed.

Among the real estate transfers published in Wednesday's Union was: "Monson—George C. Squires of Monson to Erwin H. Temple and others of Hampden, land and building in Monson.

William McAuliff, while drilling with the steam drill on a car at the quarry, fell to the ground and received a cut on the head. Dr. Fuller dressed the wound, taking several stitches.

A party of young people who planned to skate the old year out and the new year in concluded that the weather was too cold and the skating too poor, so returned home at about eleven o'clock.

The body of Miss O'Day was brought here from Hillsboro, N. H., Wednesday for burial in St. Patrick's cemetery. It will be remembered Miss O'Day, who formerly lived here, was blind. She was a sister of Mrs. John Moriarty.

Mr. Johnson, who formerly worked for Lorenzo Hutchinson, but moved to Vermont a few months ago, has recently met with a very serious accident. While engaged in chopping a tree fell on him, badly crushing one of his legs.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ada D. Bliss of Somerville to Arthur H. Metcalf of New Haven, Ct. Miss Bliss is well known in Monson, being a frequent visitor at the home of her grandfather, Daniel Leonard.

Measles continue to prevail, and some severe cases are reported. William Nason and Miss Bertha Underwood, who have been quite sick, are on the gain; the children of Dr. Rand, Raymond Aldrich, Grace Ferry, the family of James Savage, Charlie Lewis and others are nearly well.

Gallery tickets are on sale for the concert and ball next Tuesday evening, and a large attendance is expected. It is whispered that the costumes of many of the ladies who will take part in the dancing are to be quite elaborate. The class met for the last lesson Tuesday evening.

The funeral of Mrs. Clementine Coutour, who died of heart disease Saturday, was held at St. Patrick's church Monday, and the burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery. Mrs. Coutour was 19 years of age, and had been married but six months. Her parents are doubly afflicted, as her sister has recently died, and in much the same way.

Communion and reception of members at the Methodist church next Sunday morning. Contrary to custom, Mr. Marble will not preach in the evening; Herr Buechler of Boston will conduct the service instead, and will address the people on "Worship in Song." Prof. Buechler will also be present at the morning service and Sunday school, and will lead the singing.

The Windsor Club has elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, W. J. Ricketts; vice president, H. M. Bacon; treasurer, S. H. Newton; secretary, H. G. Wentworth; directors, Frank Shaw, R. Clifford, O. P. Holdridge, in addition to the president, treasurer and secretary. The club is in a very flourishing condition, having the largest membership in its history. Committees were chosen to arrange for a whist party, pool tournament and sleigh ride.

Past Commander Henry H. Wood will install the following officers of Marcus Keep Post, No. 155, G. A. R., next Monday evening: Commander, Dr. George E. Fuller; senior vice commander, John C. Aldrich; junior vice commander, George A. Harvey; quartermaster, William J. Ricketts; adjutant, Captain George H. Foskit; surgeon, W. Leander Rood; chaplain, Wilbur M. Fay; officer of the day, Lowell L. Wilcox; officer of the guard, John McKenna.

District Deputy Edward W. Wall of Wilbraham, and suite, installed the following officers of the Monson Lodge, No. 210, I. O. O. F., last evening: N. G., George W. Adams; V. G., Harrison Howe; R. Darling; R. S. S., R. C. Millar; L. S. S., William Woodward; Chaplain, C. F. Clough; P. G., Edward H. Graves.

The Monson branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, which meets in Temperance Hall, Day's block, every Tuesday evening and the first Sunday of each month, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, John T. Casey; vice president, Timothy Shea; recording secretary, John McNerny; financial secretary, John Guion; treasurer, John Dunn; sergeant-at-arms, Jerry Lyons. The county president, John W. Glynn of Springfield, will install these officers sometime during the month.

Mrs. Frank A. Bills and George E. Grout left Saturday evening for Milwaukee, in response to a message announcing the death of Nellie E., wife of Charles E. Grout. Mrs. Grout was a native of Durand, Illinois. She died of typhoid fever, leaving a daughter twelve years old. Mr. Grout spent his youth in Monson, leaving here in 1860, and for a number of years has been an engineer on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. He, with his family, visited Monson four years ago.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was the largest and most enthusiastic held for several years. After the supper and roll call the annual reports were read and the following officers chosen for the current year: Church committee, Rev. James Tufts, J. W. Hall, F. E. Morris, Mrs. W. N. Flynt, Mabelle Anderson; treasurer, E. F. Morris; clerk, Mrs. C. C. Keep; auditor, Dr. P. W. Soule; superintendent of Sunday school, E. F. Morris; assistant superintendents, Charles C. Keep, Mrs. Charles Carpenter, Lucretia H. Walker; secretary, Lyman C. Flynt; librarian, F. D. Rogers. The meeting adjourned to Thursday evening, Jan. 17th.

The work of remodeling the vestibule and making other improvements in St. Patrick's church was finished yesterday. Two partitions which were put into the vestibule a number of years ago, making it in three sections, have been removed, and a more convenient stairway leading to the choir gallery has been put in and painted. A new confessional and vestment case has been added. The woodwork outside has been panted, with the exception of the steeple, which will be done in the spring. The exterior of the parochial residence has been painted, and the kitchen and dining room handsomely grained in live oak. The doors throughout the house have been restained.

Mrs. William N. Flynt entertained her Sunday school class of ladies on New Year's day, as has been her custom for a number of years. Mrs. Flynt is a most charming hostess, and it is a great pleasure to be invited to her home. This was the twelfth annual reception to the class, and all but one were present. This is quite a famous class, having been originated 32 years ago by Mrs. Flynt's brother, George Converse, who was its teacher until he left town. Mrs. Flynt's brother-in-law, C. W. Holmes, Jr., then took the class, he turning it over to its present teacher when he was made superintendent of the Sunday school 12 years ago. Some of the original members of 32 years ago are still attending.

The annual meeting of the Monson Creamery Association was held at Memorial Hall last Saturday afternoon, with a fair attendance. The following officers were elected: Superintendent and treasurer, Freelon L. Ball; clerk, Horace D. Moulton; directors, Horace Bumstead, Oliver A. Bliss, Joseph H. Carpenter, Mark Noble and Fred L. Hitchcock. The report shows a good business for the year, although the dry weather has made some difference. There were 266,000 spaces of cream received, and 42,140 pounds of butter made. The average price received at the creamery per pound was 27 cents. Highest price paid for cream was 4 cents per space; lowest 2 7-10 cents; average for the year, 3¼ cents. Balance in the treasury $96.

The week of prayer services at the Methodist church began with the watch meeting Monday evening. The meeting opened at 8 o'clock with a praise and prayer service conducted by Rev. W. H. Marble, followed by preaching at 9 o'clock by Rev. F. S. Hatch of the Congregational church, after which was a recess. This was followed by the study of the Sunday school lesson, topic: "The Beheading of John the Baptist." Then came an experience meeting, topic: "When and How Converted." And last came the consecration service. Sixteen persons stayed until the meeting closed. Tuesday evening the regular class meeting was held. Wednesday evening Rev. F. J. Hale of Bondsville preached, and last evening Rev. W. H. Dockham of West Warren preached.

Monson talent was well represented at the Epworth League convention held at Bondsville last Friday. Rev. William H. Marble read a paper on "Essentials of Success in League work," Prof. Arthur N. Burke one on "Our Prayer Meetings," and Prof. Morse one on "Our Business and Social Meetings."

At the meeting of Monson Grange, held Wednesday evening, the following officers were installed by Henry A. Rindge: Master, Omar Pease; overseer, Omer E. Bradway; lecturer, Mrs. Charles C. Keep; steward, Myron Blanchard; chaplain, A. Haskell White; treasurer, George M. Severy; secretary, Edwin M. White; assistant steward, Charles C. Keep; gate-keeper, Bert L. Leach; Pomona, Mrs. Wilson M. Tucker; Ceres, Mrs. A. Haskell White; Flora, Mrs. Bert L. Leach; lady steward, Mrs. Alonzo M. Beebe.

To Dr. George E. Fuller we are indebted for the following weather report: The coldest day in 1894 was Feb. 5th, when the thermometer registered 18°. The warmest days were July 13th and 19th, when the record was 96°. The total snowfall for 1894 was 75 inches, against 94 inches for 1893. The total precipitation of rain was only 28.49 inches, but little over half the average precipitation for Monson; in 1893 it was 46.49 inches. The average temperature for the year was 46.34°; the average temperacure for Monson for 14 years has been 46.91°, the year 1894 having been a little colder than the average. The coldest year in 14 years was 1885, when the average was 44.75°; the warmest in 14 years was 1881, when the average was 49.96°; so that a trifle over 5° will cover the variation for the past 14 years. The average temperature in Monson for the three winter months 25.89°, and for the summer three months 68.21°. The average for the winter months of 1894 was 23.10°, and the average for the summer months was 67.92°, so that relatively last winter and last summer were colder than the average.

The Palmer horsemen were invited to try conclusions with Monson yesterday afternoon, and several of them accepted. H. P. Holden drove down with "Roscoe," Nelson Whiton had A. T. Wing's "Dick," and Dr. Ellery was in the stretch with his black pacer. Every fast horse in Monson was harnessed and booted, and the local owners of horseflesh prepared to give the Palmer men a warm reception. Although Main street had been harrowed and rolled, the footing was rough, but the street was level, and there was no high ridges to drive over. There were so many horses out in the early afternoon that it was hard to tell who had the most speed, and all seemed to be doing fairly well. "Roscoe," with a mark last season of 2.12½, was considered so far above anything in Monson that the local drivers did not intend to compete with him, but he refused to work and was easily beaten by several horses. R. M. Reynolds's horse managed to get the lead and kept it nearly every time, but after several ineffectual attempts to get the others to try to catch him, he was taken to his stable. After several ineffectual attempts had been made to get "Roscoe" to going he was driven home by Mr. Holden. The interest then centered on "Dick" and Mr. Clifford's horse, which were then conceded to be the fastest on the street. Clifford led until just above the bank, when "Dick" came up alongside but broke and was fairly beaten to the foot of the hill. The Palmer visitors then accepted an invitation to go to the Windsor Club's rooms, where hot coffee and cigars were served. Another heat between Clifford and Whiton was driven, resulting in a clean victory for "Dick." Mr. Clifford then drove to the stable, and the day's sport was over. It is hoped the snow to-day will be sufficient to improve the sleighing, and that the Palmer horsemen will come again.

Academy Notes.

The Academy opened for the winter term on Tuesday morning. Every student in attendance at the close of last term has or will return, and there is one new student.

D. M. Dustan, principal of Tabor College, Marion, Mass., formerly principal in Monson, was in town Tuesday and paid a visit to the Academy.

A special meeting for the election of officers of the Linophilian society will be held at 4 p. m. to-morrow.

GLENDALE.

Mrs. E. M. Seaver has about 50 pullets in her hennery, but is receiving 35 or 40 eggs per day, and thinks this is a record hard to beat.

There was a Christmas tree at the M. E. church Christmas night. A large number were in attendance, and greatly enjoyed the good music, recitations, etc.

BELCHERTOWN.

D. L. Hazen is doing quite a thriving business in his new store.

Mrs. Emory Munsel's father, Erastus Barnes, is very low with heart disease.

Miss Etta Fuller has returned to town after spending several months in Thompsonville, Ct.

Guy C. Allen, cattle inspector, has visited nearly every herd in town and reports but three animals to quarantine.

The friends of Willie Hannum were pleased to see him out again on New Year's day for the first time in many weeks.

Miss Bessie Morse, one of our most prominent teachers in the public schools, has been obliged to give up her position on account of ill health.

WARREN.

The mission circle met in the ladies' parlor to-day.

The Kickapoo Indians have been in town this week.

Mrs. Newell Shepard has been visiting friends in Rome, N. Y.

Sylvester Bliss of New York has been the guest of Dr. Hastings this week.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held in the chapel Tuesday evening.

The members of the Home Missionary society gave a turkey supper in the ladies' parlor Wednesday evening.

About fifty persons will unite with the Methodist church next Sabbath, and thirty-five with the Congregational church. Next week will be observed as a week of prayer at the two churches.

WILBRAHAM.

No. 1 school, Mrs. Decker, teacher, had a tree at the school house New Year's Eve.

The midwinter term of the Academy commenced Wednesday with a large attendaece, after a holiday recess of two weeks.

Miss Mary Poland, superintendent of schools, gave an address on temperance in the Congregational church Sabbath evening.

Miss Gregg, teacher of No. 3 school, has returned from her home in Vermont, where she spent the holidays. She was the recipient of a gold pen and penholder from her pupils.

The Chautauqua club met with its president, W. Robbins, of Springfield street. Papers were read on Richard the Lionhearted and John Wyckliff, followed by discussion on current events.

The remains of Mr. Coe of Amsterdam, N. Y., who was killed by the electric cars in that city, were interred in the Adams cemetery after funeral services at the house of his brother-in-law, Hiram Clark.

During the holiday week the pupils of No. 4 school called in a body on their teacher, Miss Dora Merrick, at her home and presented her with an oak rocker upholstered in blue plush, Miss Florence Green making the presentation speech.

WALES.

Miss Mary Lyman spent Christmas with friends here.

Mrs. Kline was the recipient of a fine fur cloak and cape for a Christmas present from her sister in Worcester.

Isaac Simpson, boss spinner, has resigned his position in the Berkley mills and taken one in the Excelsior woolen mills.

Mr. Burke has resigned his position as boss weaver at the Excelsior woolen mill, and a new man has been hired in his place.

Dr. Sawin of Brimfield narrowly escaped a runaway by being turned out of his sleigh while turning around one day this week.

Mrs. Boyden of Worcester, who has been caring for her sick parents, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Rogers, has returned to her home.

Presiding Elder Thorndike is holding meetings at the M. E. church this week, helped by the young men from the School for Christian Workers at Springfield.

Mrs. Julia Parker, with the driver who brought her from Palmer, were thrown from their sleigh Monday. The sleigh was broken but the horse was stopped by timely assistance.

William Harris is getting up a sleigh ride party and no doubt the new landlord in Holland will be called on for an old-fashioned "Marm Kinney" supper. It is hoped to get 50 couples started.

Warren parties were in town this week picking up apples. Some who had not got their apples into the cellar sold, but those who have got them out of danger of frost prefer to wait a little longer.

WEST WARREN.

Mrs. Albert Converse is visiting in Boston.

Miss Minnie Brooks has returned to her school in Webster.

Mrs. Dexter Rood is in Springfield with her son, C. D. Rood.

Mr. and Mrs. William English spent Christmas in Springfield.

Misses Alice and Clara Gilbert returned to the American College in Springfield Wednesday.

Miss Annie Dockham of Springfield spent Sunday with her brother, Rev. W. H. Dockham.

Rev. W. H. Dockham and Mrs. Dockham spent Christmas with Rev. J. S. Barrows of Brookfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Cambridge Moulton of Palmer spent New Year's with Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw.

The A. O. H. will give a show in the Congregational chapel this evening, followed by a dance in the hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Brooks spent a few days last week in Millbury, with George Barton. They will spend a few weeks in Providence with their son, Frank Brooks.

Watch night services were held in the M. E. church Monday evening. Services began at 9 o'clock; there was preaching the first hour, a short praise service followed by an intermission, a love feast, a prayer and testimony meeting the last few moments of the old year, and the coming in of the new year being kept in silence.

HAMPDEN.

The wife of Rev. N. V. Parsons has lately been presented with a bedquilt, the work of which was all done by the giver, a lady eighty-six years old.

Mrs. Benjamin Simmons of Ware has been spending a few weeks with her parents. Mr. Simmons spent Christmas week with her, and they took part as of yore in the Christmas festivities.

Robert Hanchett of Springfield, a retired farmer, died Dec. 28th, after a short illness, at the home of his stepdaughter, Mrs. Rufus Orcutt. The remains were taken to Springfield for interment.

William Johnson, the first to cut ice, filled his ice house Monday with ice ten inches thick and of excellent quality. Lucius Burleigh and Will Pease commenced cutting on New Year's.

The bridge over the Scantic river, over which there was so much trouble last fall, was finally built of wood and is no discredit to the town; its cost would have come within the appropriation but that a forty-foot stick supposed to be sound was found decayed, and a new one added about $15 to the cost.

Christmas Eve the parson's wife was startled by a thumping at her back door, and on opening it a woman quaintly dressed and apparently dumb handed her a basket and showed by signs that she wanted help to unload her wheelbarrow. When this was given her she departed as silently as she had come, and were it not for the indisputable proof one would think the parson's wife dreamed it, so mysteriously did her visitor come and go, and among all the people going for their mail, it cannot be learned that anyone saw a woman running a wheelbarrow, but if anyone did information would be thankfully received by the parson.

BRIMFIELD.

David Janes has sold his farm and will reside in Worcester after April 1st.

N. S. Hubbard and wife have returned from a few weeks' sojourn in Boston.

Orin Hicks has taken the contract to fill the ice house, commemcing Thursday.

Miss Kernan, teacher in the Center school building, has resigned, to accept a position in Springfield.

E. D. Houston, editor of the Manchester, N. H., Union, and wife were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. James last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bliss gave an "at home" to a few friends New Year's Eve. A dainty lunch was served during the evening.

Misses Jennie Livermore and Fannie Gates of Springfield were home for a Christmas vacation, returning this week to their schools.

Mrs. Horatio Converse entertained the ladies' whist club Wednesday evening, five tables being filled. Mrs. Edward Bliss will entertain next week.

A meeting was called at the town hall Tuesday afternoon to ascertain what interest was felt in the matter of a hotel. Only a small number were present, and the meeting was adjourned to next Monday evening at 7 o'clock, when the trustees and members of the alumni association of the Hitchcock Free High school propose to meet the citizens for the purpose of forming an association and choosing a board of trustees to solicit subscriptions and receive funds for the purpose of building a hotel on the site of the one burned, and make such other arrangements as may be necessary for a permanent organization. The hotel proposed to be built is to be run by the trustees of the association as a public house, also to accommodate teachers and pupils of the Hitchcock Free High School. Every body interested in this enterprise is cordially invited to be present at this meeting.

ALL NOTED CONTRIBUTORS.

The Boston Journal's Writers the Most Famous of the Country.

It would be hard to imagine a more brilliant list of contributors than that prepared for the Boston Sunday Journal for the coming year. Julian Hawthorne and Gilbert Parker are among those who will furnish stories. Adventure will be described by Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, George Kennan, Capt. Charles King, Justin McCarthy, M. P., C. A. Stevens, and Gen. H. B. Carrington, U. S. A. Outdoor life and sport will be treated by Walter Camp, Yale's famous coach, Prof. E. L. Richards, also Prof. A. A. Stagg of Chicago University. Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D.D., Prof. W. Garden Blakie of Edinburgh, Sir W. T. Dawson, F. R. S., Murat Halsted and Count Bernstoff of Berlin will treat topics of general interest, and the list of women contributors includes such famous names as Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Mrs. Ballington Booth, Grace Dodge, Olive Thorne Miller, Grace Greenwood, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Kate Upson Clark and Helen Campbell.

The Boston Daily Journal will maintain in 1895 the high standard which has marked its career for the past 61 years. No New Englander should be without this paper, which is better than ever.

THE JANUARY, 1895, SALE OF MUSLIN UNDERWEAR.

Our annual sale of Muslin Underwear begins this year on Friday, January 4th. We mean that it shall beat all previous January sales in variety and worth of goods, and the nearness to nothing we can get the prices.

All the goods were contracted for at a time during last July and August, when the manufacturers were anxious to get work to keep going, consequently they come to us lower than any ever bought previously. And you shall get the benefit of every cent saved by our activity and foresight.

You are not invited to buy goods hastily put together for the purpose of letting them go cheap. Every garment is full size, stylishly, perfectly and honestly made of the right materials, and the embroidery and trimmings are better than ever. Expect when you come

A BIG VARIETY,
RIDICULOUSLY LOW PRICES,
HONEST AND PERFECT GARMENTS,

And don't put off the buying till some of the sorts are all gone; the earlier you come the better satisfied you will be.

EDISON'S KINETOSCOPE.

Almost like a thing of life! A peep into one reveals scenes and incidents exactly as if really happening before you.

We've purchased four of these kinetoscopes for the benefit of our customers. Present your purchase checks at the exhibit, have them stamped and you are entitled to a peep free; others are charged five cents.

TOWN OF PALMER.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—BOARD OF CATTLE COMMISSIONERS,
52 VILLAGE ST., BOSTON, Nov. 5, 1894.

To the Boards of Health and all Owners of Neat Cattle in the Counties of Nantucket, Dukes and Barnstable.

First. All the states and territories of the United States, the District of Columbia, Canada, Great Britain, and all other localities without the limits of this Commonwealth, are hereby declared infected districts.

Second. It is hereby ordered that all neat cattle brought within the limits of this Commonwealth from any of said localities on or after November 20, 1894, are hereby made subject to quarantine until they have been inspected and released by this Board or one of its members thereto duly authorized.

Third. Except as hereinafter provided no such neat cattle shall be unloaded, except in case of accident, for any purpose whatsoever within this Commonwealth, at any place or places other than at such quarantine stations as are herein designated, or which may hereafter from time to time be designated, by this Board, unless upon written permit signed by the Board of Cattle Commissioners or one of its members.

Fourth. The Union stock yards at Watertown; the Boston & Albany stock yards at Brighton and the premises of the New England Dressed Beef and Wool Company in Somerville, are hereby designated as quarantine stations.

Fifth. All neat cattle entered at any quarantine station, except as hereinafter provided, are hereby declared quarantined, and shall so remain, at the expense of the owner or consignee, for a period of not less than twenty-four hours, or until they are released by the Board of Cattle Commissioners, or one of its members, during which time they shall be subjected to the tuberculin test. This test shall be made only by the Board of Cattle Commissioners or one of its members, or a duly authorized agent thereof, and without expense to the owner.

Sixth. Every such animal which, in the opinion of this Board or any of its members, is affected with tuberculosis, will be condemned and slaughtered as provided in Sections 45 and 53 of said Chapter 491 of the Acts of 1894.

Seventh. All animals which upon such inspection shall be adjudged free from tuberculosis and other contagious disease shall be branded with the seal of the commission. This brand will be placed upon the right hip.

Eighth. All neat cattle passing through this Commonwealth, consigned from points without its limits, for exportation from this State will not be examined as herein provided, but such animals shall remain in quarantine until transported without the limits of the Commonwealth.

Ninth. All neat cattle brought within this Commonwealth consigned directly to the Brighton Abattoir for slaughter shall be confined by themselves for identification, and shall not be released except after an examination as above provided, or for immediate slaughter.

Tenth. It shall be the duty of every person or persons, corporation or corporations, desiring to drive or cause to be driven any neat cattle into this State from any point without its limits, to notify in writing the Board of Cattle Commissioners of his, their or its intention so to do, which notice shall state the town or city within this Commonwealth through which it is the intention to enter, and the time when the drove will arrive within such city or town. After crossing the border all such cattle are to be declared quarantined upon premises which shall be defined in the permit, within the limits of such city or town, at the expense of the owner or consignee, and shall there remain until they have been examined and branded, or destroyed, as hereinbefore provided. No neat cattle shall be driven within this State from any point without its limits, except as herein provided.

Eleventh. All neat cattle branded as herein provided shall be free to all markets in this Commonwealth.

Twelfth. No person shall sell or offer for sale, or have in his possession, except under quarantine, within the stock yards in Brighton, Watertown or Somerville, any neat cattle which are not branded as provided for in section 7, except as provided in sections 8 and 9 of this order.

Thirteenth. It is further ordered that a copy of this order shall be sent to each city and town throughout the Commonwealth, and that every town shall cause a copy thereof to be posted in two or more conspicuous places within its limits, and shall cause a copy of the same to be published once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper published therein, or if no newspaper be published within the limits of said town, then in a newspaper published within said county; and that each such city shall cause a copy of the same to be published twice a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper published within its limits.

Fourteenth. This order shall take effect upon November 20, 1894.

Break Away from the old way of washing! What is it that keeps you? It can't be economy, for that's on the other side. Pearline doesn't cost any more to use than common soap, or anything else that's safe and harmless. But just the contrary—when you use Pearline, instead of wasting your time and strength and wearing out your clothes on the washboard, you do away with the rub, rub, rub, and save your labor, your clothes and your money.

A Clean Collar

One that you can keep clean all the time—a collar that does not wilt when you get over-heated; that does not fray on the edge, or tear out at the buttonholes, and can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a wet sponge or cloth. These collars and cuffs are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with waterproof "celluloid," thus giving strength and durability. They are the only waterproof goods so made, and every piece is stamped as follows:

RHEUMATISM PREVALENT.

Caused by the Sudden Changes of Temperature.

Rheumatism is more prevalent here than ever before. When this disease fastens upon an individual with its pain and soreness, swelling the joints, rendering him helpless in his movements, he is indeed an object of pity. The slight pain in his back, joints or muscles is a warning indication of an impoverished condition of the blood, and if not attended to at once, means rheumatism.

Since the introduction of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, there have been fewer rheumatic sufferers. Favorite Remedy drives out rheumatic poison from the blood, restores the circulation, strengthens the nerve power. The best proof of its value is the good it has done.

"I was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for fifteen years," writes Mr. E. P. Tayer, of East Nassau, N. Y., "so severe that I was supposed to be a cripple for life. Under physicians' treatment I grew worse. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helped me from the first time I used it, and entirely cured me."

The beautiful daughter of Mr. James McFarland, of DeMoines, Ia., was helpless for months with sciatic rheumatism. After a few doses of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, she began to grow better, and continuing its use was cured.

Mr. G. Lansing, of Troy, N. Y., had rheumatism so bad that he had to be turned over in bed. After using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while, was restored to health. Why then suffer with rheumatism or neuralgia? This medicine will help you.

Friend—"When are going to paint that gastronomic genre picture you spoke of?" Artist—"Heaven knows! Every time I get ready the model tempts me and I eat it up." —Fliegende Blaetter.

Afflicted With Rheumatism.

Mr. George A. Mills of Lebanon, Conn., says: "I was afflicted with rheumatism in my back all last winter. It was so severe at times that I could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. I tried different remedies without receiving any relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days, according to directions, my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. I have since recommended it to others and know they have been benefited by its use.

Carlton Cornwell, foreman of the Gazette, Middletown, N. J., believes that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy should be in every home. He used it for a cold and it affected a speedy cure. He says: "It is indeed a grand remedy; I can recommend it to all. I have also seen it used for whooping cough, with the best results." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of 18 East 15th St., New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy from druggist H. H. Lane, Peekskill, N. Y. Such good results followed its use that he sent back to Mr. Lane for two bottles more of the same remedy. Those who give this medicine a trial are seldom satisfied with any other when again in need of such a preparation. It is unequalled for coughs and colds.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

Two Dorothys.

A little maid with downcast eyes
And folded hand, and serious face,
Who walks sedately down the street,
Her dainty dress all smooth and neat,
Each curl and ribbon in its place.

A dovelike maid with brow demure
Beneath her bonnet's shady brim,
Who quiet sits within the pew,
And gravely reads the service through,
And joins in every hymn.

The sweetest maid that could be found
From Cuba to the Bay of Fundy;
A flower, the loveliest that springs,
A saint, an angel without wings—
That's Dorothy on Sunday.

A little maid in breathless haste,
With glowing cheeks and tangled hair,
Who races up and down the street,
And with her skipping, tripping feet
Is here and there and everywhere.

A saucy maid, with cap askew
Upon her rumpled yellow curls,
With twinkling feet and chattering tongue
And breezy skirts about her swung
In swift, ecstatic whirls.

The merriest maid that ever shocked
The servile slaves of Mrs. Grundy;
A bird, a spark of dawning light,
A romp, a rogue, a witch, a sprite—
That's Dorothy on Monday.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

What the Beautiful Girl Herself Says.

How She Excited the Curiosity of All Her Friends.

One of the best known and most interesting men in Brooklyn, N. Y., is Professor J. M. Elwood, residing at 43 Cornelia St. He is a noted scholar and professor. His charming daughter is a young lady of most estimable character and has hosts of friends everywhere.

She became fearfully nervous and run down, and this was followed by a most severe attack of St. Vitus' dance. She grew worse and physicians could not cure her. She finally got well, however, by a method which astonished all her friends.

"It affords me the greatest pleasure," said the professor, "to state that my daughter, who was a sufferer from nervousness and St. Vitus' dance, and who was treated for same by prominent physicians in Brooklyn without result, was completely cured by using two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy."

MISS ELWOOD.

Such strong evidence as this must convince everybody of the genuine worth of this great medicine. Mr. Elwood's word is as good as gold. When he makes a statement people know they can depend upon it. Just such reliable statements about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy are constantly appearing, and the people everywhere have the utmost confidence in this wonderful medicine.

They take it, and perfect health results. The popular Miss Elwood thinks it is indeed a wonderful remedy when it will cure what all the skill of other physicians cannot benefit.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

BILLY.

The clerk at the general delivery window of a city post-office is usually a pretty busy individual, but on rare occasions he has his moments of leisure. It was at such a time, one summer afternoon, when active business seemed entirely suspended, that the young man who presided over the general delivery was startled out of a comfortable doze by the sound of a piping voice issuing from some invisible quarter.

"Say, mister," said a voice, "is der a letter for me?"

The clerk stared out across his little corner, but failed to see the owner of the voice. Then he poked his head half-way out of the narrow window, and, glancing down, saw a little mite of a ragged fellow with a bootblack's kit swung around his shoulder.

"A letter for you?" he echoed with a smile. "Don't know. What's your name?"

"Billy."

"Billy——, what else?"

"Not'in, else," he said. "Jes' Billy."

"I guess not," the clerk replied. "Were you expecting a letter?"

"Yes, sir."

There was an expression of faith in his errand in the little fellow's face, that the clerk racked his brain for a simple explanation to offer him.

"Mabbe," said the boy, "if I told yer why I was a-lookin' for a letter, yo' cu'd find it for me."

"Perhaps I could," said the clerk. "It won't do any harm to try, anyway."

The little fellow set his bootblack's kit down on the floor.

"It was like dis," he said. "Last Sunday mornin' I was at d' mission Sunday school up town, an' on my way back I walked wid Miss Rogers. You know her?"

"No," replied the clerk, still smiling.

"You orter. She's d' teacher uv our class. She wus a-tellin' me erbout d' lesson, an' when I left her by her house I jes' knowed it all. Well, I walked on down d' street, an' pretty soon I seen an old gentlemen in front uv me dropped a pocket-book, when I tuk it up an' tuk it over t' the alley where I live. I saw it was full uv money but I never touched none uv it. Long erbout night-time I begun t' think of the Sunday school lesson, an' the more I thought uv it the more I got worried. D' nex' mornin' I put on my good clothes ag'in, an' I wus a-goin' t' take d' pocket-book up t' Miss Rogers. I knowed she'd feel bad's I did, an' so I thought I'd send the money back on my own accord. D' wus some cards 'n' things in it, tellin' d' name o' d' man what dropped it, an' I writ a letter to him 'splainin how I wus sorry I'd kept it, an' signed my name—jes' Billy. Den I wrapped it up and sent it to him by mail."

The clerk had ceased smiling by this time, and he looked into the boy's sober face as he asked:

"Did you tell the man where to reply to your letter?"

"Nusser; but I said I'd come here an' ask to see if d' pocket-book got to him, dat's all."

"I see," replied the clerk. "If you'll wait a minute, I'll see if I can find anything."

Without any hope of success he went over to the "B" box, and ran quickly over the letters it contained. In the center of the pack he found one addressed:

"BILLY.

To be called for."

With a bright face he hurried back to the window, and handed the missive to the bootblack.

"Here it is," he said, "this must be for you."

Billy took the letter, turned it over once or twice, and then handed it back:

"Read it for me," he said, 'I ain't much on makin' out writin'."

The clerk opened the envelope and extracted the contents. In a business hand was written a kindly letter to "My honest little Billy," and the writer asked that the boy call to see him at an address which he gave. The letter closed with the familiar words that "honesty was the best policy, always; but I feel that in this case a reward of another sort is called for." The letter referred to a neatly folded greenback which was enclosed.

The clerk read the letter to Billy, and then handed it to him with the enclosure.

"Go to Miss Rogers," he said, "and tell her the whole story. She will advise you what to do."

Little Billy's eyes sparkled as he thanked the clerk. Then he swung his kit over his shoulder again, and promising to return to explain the rest of the adventure, he trudged into the street.

It was a week later when he came back to see the clerk. His clothes were new and fitted him somewhat better than his old ones, and the bootblack kit was not visible. He reached up and shook hands with his friend as he said, "I ain't shinin' shoes no more. D' gentleman dat writ me dat letter hez give me a place in his office, an' I'm a going to night school now."

He said more than this, and the two had a chat during the first lull in business. But we have told enough of little Billy's story to show how true—always true—is that story that honesty is the best policy. And even if there had been no letter for Billy, the policy would have been the same. — The Advance.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

SWEEPING REDUCTIONS.

"Doctor, I'm sick." The Doctor shook his head. "There's only one remedy—the knife." "Whew," groaned the patient. "The knife alone will cure," continued the M. D. "We must cut, and cut deep. That's the only way to relieve, to restore."

That's the situation exactly. Too much stock. Too many fine goods. No healthy business can afford to keep them. No prudent merchant would carry them over. New goods must greet each new season at CHARLES E. LYNCH'S.

The season has been immense—far exceeding the most sanguine expectations. There are still piles of ULSTERS, SUITS, OVERCOATS and TROUSERS. They must be sold. They must be turned into cash by hook or by crook. The knife alone will do it. The knife has been applied and LYNCH'S magnificent stock of fine clothing now bristles with low prices, with great values. There are two that loom up above their fellows. They deserve the attention of every bargain hunter in Western Massachusetts.

691 Fine $18, $20 and $22 SUITS are down to $10. They have sold for $18, $20, and $22. They will do so again. They are knifed to $10! Just $10 during this month of January only.

Again—there are 342 splendid STORM ULSTERS. Their price has been $20, $22 and $25. They, too, are knifed to $10. Such values are unprecedented.

Samples on exhibition in the windows. The terms are cash.

Help That Comes Too Late.

'T is a wearisome world, this world of ours,
With its tangles small and great,
Its weeds that smother the springing flowers,
And its hapless strifes with fate;
And the darkest day of its desolate days
Sees the help that comes too late.

Ah! woe for the word that is never said
Till the ear is too deaf to hear,
And woe for the lack to the fainting head
Of the ringing shout of cheer;
Ah! woe for the laggard feet that tread
In the mournful wake of the bier.

What booteth help when the heart is numb?
What booteth a broken spar
Of love thrown out when the lips are dumb
And life's bark drifteth far,
Oh! far and fast from the alien past,
Over the moaning bar?

A pitiful thing the gift to-day
That is dross and nothing worth,
Though if it had come but yesterday
It had brimmed with sweet the earth—
A fading rose in a death-cold hand,
That perished in want and dearth.

Who fain would help in this world of ours,
Where sorrowful steps must fall,
Bring help in time to the waning powers
Ere the bier is spread with the pall,
Nor send reserves when the flags are furled
And the dead beyond your call.

For baffling most in this weary world,
With its tangles small and great,
Its lonesome night and its weary days
And its struggles forlorn with fate,
Is that bitterest grief, too deep for tears,
Of the help that comes too late.

A BURGLARY.

I once knew two industrious mechanics named Pierre and Baptiste. They dwelt in a ramshackle tenement at Sault aux Belceuil, where each had a dozen children to support besides their wives, who it is grievous to relate, were drones. They were only nominally acquainted with that goodly art commonly associated with charwomen.

Pierre and Baptiste were hard workers. They worked far into the night and occasionally the thin mists of dawn had begun to break on the narrow city pavements before their labors would cease. No one could truthfully say that theirs was not a hard earned pillow. Sometimes they did not toil in vain. It depended largely upon the police.

It was early one November that this horny handed pair planned the burglary of a certain safe located in a wholesale establishment in St. Mark street. On the peculiar evening that Pierre and Baptiste hit upon for the deed the head bookkeeper had been having a wrangle with his accounts.

"I can't make head or tail of this!" he declared to his employer, the senior member of the firm, "yet I am convinced everything must be right. An error of several hundred dollars has been carried over from each daily footing, but where the error begins or ends I'm blessed if I can find out."

The fact was that the monthly sales had been unusually heavy, and a page of the balance had been mislaid. The head bookkeeper spent upward of an hour in casting up both the entries of himself and his subordinates after the establishment had closed its doors for the day.

Then he went home to supper determined to return and locate the deficit if he didn't get a wink of sleep until morning.

Bookkeepers, it must be borne in mind, have highly sensitive organisms, which are susceptible to the smallest atom reflecting upon their probity or skill. At 8.30 the bookkeeper returned and commenced anew his critical calculations. He worked precisely three hours and a half, at the end of which period he suddenly clapped his hand to his forehead and exclaimed:

"Idiot! Why haven't you looked in the safe for a missing sheet? Ten chances to one they have been improperly numbered!"

He turned over the pages of the balance on his desk, and, sure enough, the usual numerical mark or designation in the upper left hand corner which should follow 11 was missing. Page 12 in all likelihood had slipped into some remote corner of the safe.

The safe was a large one, partially receding into the wall and contained all the papers, documents and several days receipts in cash and drafts of the firm.

The head bookkeeper in his efforts at unearthing the lost page of the cash balance was obliged to intrude his entire person into the safe. Fearful lest the candle he held should attract attention from the street, showing out as it did against the black recesses of the safe, upon entering it he drew the door slightly ajar.

As he stepped in the tail of his coat caught on an angle of the huge riveted lock, the massive gate swung to as if it weighed no more than a pound, and the bookkeeper was a prisoner.

He heard the resonant click—that was all. His candle went out.

The bookkeeper at the outset lost his presence of mind. He fought like a caged animal. He first exerted almost superhuman strength against the four sides of the iron tomb. Then his body collapsed, and not for an instant losing consciousness he found himself sitting in a partially upright position unable to so much as stir a muscle.

It was almost at the same moment, although hours seemed to have passed, that the drum of his ear, now abnormally sensitive, was almost split into fragments. A frightful, monotonous clangor rent the interior of the safe.

The bookkeeper used to observe afterward that a single second's deviation of characteristic thought and he would have gone mad. Stronger minds in a parallel situation would have indeed collapsed. But a weaker man can never confront the inevitable, but clings more stubbornly to hope. They are only weak individuals who in the act of drowning catch at straws.

As the bookkeeper felt himself gradually growing faint for want of air to breathe his revivified hope led him to deliberately crash his fist into the woodwork with which the interior of the same was fitted, in secretaire fashion, one drawer being built above another. This gave him a few additional cubic feet of air.

As may have been conjectured, the noise which smote the bookkeeper's ear was that of a drill. Although acutely discerned within, the sound was practically smothered on the outside of the vault.

At one end of the drill was a cavity, rapidly growing larger, in one of the steel panels. At its other end was a heavy, warty fist, part of the anatomy of Baptiste, the industrious mechanic. Baptiste held the drill while his companion, Pierre, pounded it in.

Soon the two burglars became aware that some sort of animal commotion was going on within the safe. It nearly drove them into convulsions of astonishment. Baptiste was so startled that he dropped the drill.

"It is a ghost," he said.

Baptiste was for throwing up the job uncompromisingly on the spot, but this proposal met with obstacles. His fellow workman, who was of stiffer courage, rejected it with scorn, as savoring too much of the superstitious. Pierre had a large family to support, he argued. He spoke frankly. They could not afford to throw away the opportunities of providence. To his friend and colaborer the burden of his remarks was:

"Lache! Go hon! You make me tired wiz yer ghosts an tings. Let's not have no beast foolin'—see? De job is commence. Allons!"

The upshot of this was that Pierre and Baptiste went back to work. At the third crack of the drill Pierre crossed himself and said:

"Baptiste, dere's a man in dat safe!"

Both men grew pale as death at the very suggestion. Baptiste, for instance, was so frightened he couldn't utter a syllable. His tongue cave to the roof of his mouth. However, Pierre, as usual, was the first to recover. He applied his ear to the lock and then to the drill hole.

"Hey, in dere!" he cried, yet not so loud as to be heard on the sidewalk. To this there came a faint response—a very faint shout indeed. It sounded as if it were a mile away:

"For God's sake, give me air! I am locked in here. Try and burst open the safe!"

The two burglars did not stop to talk, but went at once to work as if their own lives depended on the result instead of the life of the mysterious occupant of the valut. In less than four minutes they had a hole somewhat smaller than the business end of a collar button knocked into the panel of the vault.

Then Pierre and Baptiste paused to wipe the sweat from their brows. The man inside breathed.

It was now that the pair began to muse on the denouement. Could this be a member of the firm or an employe? This hypothesis jeopardized the success of the night's adventure unless when they had permitted the prisoner to emerge they bound and gagged him into silence.

On the other hand, this course would have an ugly look. If he resisted, it might mean murder in the end; whereas, if they did not let him out at all, they would stand no chance of profiting by the pecuniary contents of the safe. Besides, as the man could scarcely live thus till morning, they would be responsible for his taking off. Thus reasoned Pierre and Baptiste. These were not comforting reflections, but there was still another and a better thought in reserve. What if, after all, the man were himself a felon? Might he not be a companion cribcracker? In that case they would merely have to divide the spoils.

"Hey, in dere," cried Pierre, suddenly struck with an idea. "What is de combination hof de safe?"

"Fifteen — three — seventy-three!" came back in sepulchral tones.

It was evidently growing harder and harder to draw the breath through the tiny aperture.

Thus it transpired that at the expiration of 15 seconds the lock of the vault gave back the same resonant click it rendered eight minutes previously. Thanks to the timely advent of Pierre and Baptist, it opened as lightly, as airily and decisively as it had closed 480 seconds before on the unhappy accountant.

The head bookkeeper gasped once or twice, but without any assistance stepped out into the free air. He was very pale, and his dress was much rent and disordered when his feet touched the floor. But this pallor quickly made way for a red flush at perceiving the two burglars with the implements of their profession strewed around them.

Without any kind of warning or without making any attempt at bravado, the bookkeeper walked deliberately to his desk and rang an electric call for the police. Simultaneously, it seemed, for so rapid and quiet was the action, he opened a drawer, took out a small revolver and covered both burglars with fatal precision. As he did so he uttered these remarkable words:

"Gentlemen, I would indeed be the basest of men if I did not feel profoundly grateful for the service you have just rendered me. I shall always regard you as any right minded man should regard those who have saved his life with imminent peril to themselves or, which is just the same, to their liberty. Any demand in reason you make of me I shall make an effort to perform. But my duty to my employers I regard as paramount. I have accumulated a little money, and with it I propose to engage the best counsel in your defense, which is certainly marked by mitigating circumstances. If, on the other hand, you are convicted"——

HER WORDS TO THE WISE WERE SUFFICIENT.

"I have no doubt, madam," said the cashier of a Chicago bank, according to the Tribune, "that you are Mrs. Jykes, the person named on this draft, but the rules of the bank require that you must be identified by somebody known to us before I can cash the paper for you."

"I suppose I could go and hunt up some acquaintance," replied the lady, "but I took it for granted you were sufficiently familiar with my face to make such a formality unnecessary. It has been in the public prints often enough. I am known to you by name, I presume, as a public speaker and lecturer on social and political sub"——

"I repeat, madam, that so far as I am personally concerned, I have no doubt you are Mrs. Jykes, the well-known public speaker, but in business matters, as you must be aware, a banking-house must be guided by established business prin"——

"When business principles are contrary to established rules of common sense," interrupted the caller, impatiently, "what is the use of being guided by them? Bank drafts are drawn, sir, to facilitate the transaction of business. The theory is that banks are organized to serve as a means of promoting the rapid interchange of commodities, or rather the converting of commodities into the circulating medium of the country, to the end that toil may meet its due reward without undue delay. But banks, sir, are conducted for the real purpose of enriching their proprietors. They are swift to take money in and slow to pay it out. They form but another link in the chain with which plutocracy is fettering the limbs of labor—another spadeful of earth on the mountain that crushes down into the ground the common people! Banks, sir, are simply a part of the scheme through the operation of which the rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer. The monopolists control the means of exchange and dictate to the workers the terms on which the workers may live. Like a hideous vampire the money power fattens on the lifeblood of the people and"——

"Madam," said the cashier, feebly, "here's your money."

PRESERVED.—There was once a celebrated cook, celebrated for his pickles and jams and such things, who got into a pickle one day by jamming another man, who had found fault with his cooking, till he died.

So the celebrated cook changed his name and clothes and got him into a far country.

But the police eftsoons found him out one day when he was at home and they put him in prison. And, as the unfortunate man stood upon the scaffold, "Alas!" cried he, "that in my life I should preserve so many things, and at the last be unable to preserve my incognito." And then the knife descended and cut off his head.—Rockland Tribune.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A Practical Talk on the Best Methods of Raising Grass—Other Matters of Importance to the Progressive Farmer.

The Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held its first Farmers' Institute Tuesday. Mr. Elbridge Cushman of Lakeville was the speaker, and had for his subject the cultivation of grasses, but as the audience was given the permission to question him, he was drawn out on a wide range of topics. Mr. Cushman owns a farm of some 300 acres in Plymouth county, is a successful, practical farmer, and knows whereof he affirms, for he has thoroughly tested all the methods which he recommends to others. He says that Massachusetts is well adapted for the raising of grass, and there is no reason why we should depend largely on other states and Canada for our supply. Our farmers owe it to themselves to raise what they need, and this they can do with the proper outlay of labor and the correct application of fertilizers. The average crop of hay is from 300 to 400 pounds per acre; the yield could easily be doubled and trebled.

The farm is usually divided into three parts: For grazing, for mowing land and for cereals. The low lands should be devoted to herds grass. This grass was named for Mr. Herd, who first discovered it in New Hampshire, soon after the settlement of that state; it is indigenous to this country. If very wet the land should be thoroughly underdrained, and plowed in August and laid down with five cords of manure to the acre, and sowed in the fall with herds grass seed and redtop, one peck of the former and two pecks of the latter to the acre. Thus treated one ought to obtain four tons of hay to the acre, of the very best hay for stock. But one cannot expect, with reason, to obtain this crop year after year unless putting back in plant food what is taken off; you cannot get something for nothing. After the low land is well laid down top dress every year; if with manure, in the fall, if with chemicals, in the spring, just after the grass has started. Sow a mixture of 200 pounds each of nitrate soda, muriate potash and finely ground bone; this dressing should be applied a second time just after cutting the grass if a good second crop is desired, and the result will astonish and pay a large profit to the producer. This crop will command the best price, for it will be far superior to the imported article. If one does not have the barnyard manure, he will get just as good and even quicker results from the use of the above chemicals, because they dissolve quickly and are absorbed in the soil, and readily taken up by the plant.

The speaker highly recommended clover. The seed should be sown in the spring, because it is apt to winter kill if sown in the fall. Sow in March if possible, when a light snow is on the ground, say five to ten pounds of seed to the acre. Ten years ago the speaker took a piece of swamp land which was useless, overgrown with bushes; these he cleared off, drained the ground and treated it as directed above, and ever since has cut about four tons of the best herds grass and redtop to the acre, selling the hay for $20 per ton, at a net profit of over 50 per cent.

Speaking of stony pasture land of the hilly part of the farm, which is often covered with huckleberry bushes and white birches, he said even such land should not be left neglected. He took such a piece of land a few years ago, one spring just as the frost was coming out, which is the best season to get rocks out of the ground, cut off the small brush with a bush scythe, dragged out the birches by the roots with the aid of a pair of oxen, and the large stones in the same way; then the ground was plowed and harrowed and later sown with corn after being highly fertilized. The yield was luxuriant and afforded a quantity for forage to his herd of cows in the late summer. This ground, after being under culture of plow for three years was laid down and is now in fine order for pasturage. The speaker proved from the results of his own experiments that brains and activity on the farm pay, just as they pay anywhere else. The reason so many fail on the farm is because they expect nature to do all the work without any aid from them.

Mr. Cushman gave directions how to kill out the troublesome witchgrass, which infests some localities. It will do no good to dig it out by the roots, for it will start up again with renewed life wherever you leave it, but the proper way is to cut off the top just above the roots with a sharp hoe and it will die of exhaustion. The audience drew from the speaker much valuable information on other matters besides the cultivation of grasses, concerning the treatment of corn and potato crops, for all of which he recommended liberal treatment with chemical fertilizers.

In the afternoon Dr. Holbrook followed Mr. Cushman with a practical discussion of tuberculosis and diseases of cattle, giving some account of the prevalence of the dreaded disease, the attendant dangers to the human family, and what is being done to arrest its ravages. His conclusion was that the problem—how best to treat the matter with fairness to the farmer and all concerned—has not yet been solved, but is one which should receive the careful attention of those best versed in such matters, because the public welfare demands it.

I wish here to emphasize the fact that the state is at much expense to furnish practical speakers for these institutes, for the benefit of the farming community, and it behooves every farmer to avail himself of the opportunity afforded to gain instruction of others better versed in the best ways of conducting a farm and getting the best results for his labor, for the time is at hand when those who employ the most improved methods will come to the front, and those who persist in the old ways will of necessity be left behind.

The next institute will be held at Grange Hall in Monson, Tuesday, February 12, when it is expected that Mr. Hall of Glastenburg, will speak on "General Fruit Cultivation."

O. P. ALLEN.

A STORY OF JOHN BRIGHT.

John Bright went into an agricultural district one day and had to walk from the station a long way into the village. A clergyman, who was driving in a dog-cart, overtook him, and, learning his destination, offered to drive him there. "Have you seen the papers to-day?" the parson asked, when Mr. Bright had accepted a seat. "Yes; what is in them?" "Why, that rascal John Bright has been making another speech." "And what was it about?" asked Mr. Bright. The clergyman explained. "Well," said the stranger, "perhaps Mr. Bright was only expressing his honest conviction; perhaps, even, he may be right." "Oh, no," said the irate clergyman. "If I had him here, I would feel like shooting him." Before they separated, Mr. Bright had promised to go to his new acquaintance's church next morning. The theme of the sermon was Bright's speech, and at the conclusion Mr. Bright thanked him for his able sermon. As the rector was going home to dinner a friend met him, and said, "You have been preaching under distinguished patronage this morning." "No!" said the parson. "Oh, yes you have," replied the friend. "You had John Bright among the congregation. Didn't you notice him in front, in the middle pew?" "Why," said the rector, "I drove him to the village yesterday in my dog-cart, and called him a rascal and excoriated him in all the moods and tenses, and he never said a word. I must go and apologize at once."—W. S. Walsh, in November Lippincott's.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's Universalist church will hold its annual meeting next Wednesday afternoon, and a social in the evening.

With all the cold weather the frost is not very deep in the ground, persons who have had occasion to dig reporting the ground frozen from 12 to 18 inches.

Work on the brick walls of the Odd Fellow's building is progressing rapidly, the north side and west end walls being completed, and the others nearly so.

The annual meeting of the parish of the Congregational church will be held in the church vestry next Monday evening at 7.30. There is no unusual article in the warrant.

F. O. Munger and W. A. Fitzpatrick of Palmer, with Horace Moulton of Monson went to West Brookfield Tuesday on a fishing trip, returning with 40 pounds of pickerel.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural society will meet at the store of O. P. Allen next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock to revise the premium list for the annual fair next September.

The house committee of the Business and Social Club invites the members and their lady friends to be present next Wednesday evening at an informal assembly in the club rooms, when a pleasant evening is assured.

There was a joint installation of the Grand Army post and Women's Relief Corps officers Wednesday evening, Comrade James L. Bowen of Springfield officiating for the post and Mrs. D. S. Davis of Palmer for the corps.

The ice men have not commenced to cut ice yet, having been kept busy this week in scraping the snow from the surface, a small amount having fallen every day or two. The ice is not quite as thick as is desirable, being only about nine inches.

Cheney Allen, 76, died at the town farm about 11 o'clock Tuesday evening, after a long illness. He leaves a brother and a son, Frank Allen of Palmer. At one time he was possessed of a comfortable property, but lost it and for some time has been cared for by the town.

The Western Massachusetts Ministers' meeting will be held in the chapel of St. Paul's Universalist church next Monday at 10.45 a. m. A paper will be read for discussion, and arrangements have been made for a conference. Dinner will be served at the Converse House.

The installation of the officers of Good Cheer Rebekah Degree Lodge, which was to have taken place Tuesday evening, was postponed for four weeks on account of the inability of the district deputy to be present. A social was held after the meeting, and refreshments were served.

The village wore an almost fairy-like appearance Wednesday morning, when every twig on every tree bore a load of light snow, which had fallen during the night and frozen on. It remained nearly all day, making beautiful views on all sides, many of which were caught by local photographers.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Palmer National Bank was held Tuesday afternoon and these officers elected: President, J. B. Shaw; vice president, E. Fairbanks; directors, J. B. Shaw, E. Fairbanks, C. B. Fiske, J. F. Holbrook, C. D. Holbrook, Dr. William Holbrook, G. M. Atkins.

The rooms of the Palmer Buisness and Social Club were thrown open Tuesday night for the inspection of the public, but owing to the disagreeable weather but few ladies were present. All were loud in their praises of the handsome and commodious quarters, however, and hoped they might have opportunity to visit them again soon.

C. K. Gamwell appeared on the street last Saturday with a new acquisition in the shape of horseflesh, a handsome bay horse, which he calls "Joker." The animal is a fast one, and Mr. Gamwell expects to give the best of them a hard rub if there is any more sleighing on Main street. The animal was purchased in Springfield last week.

The annual meeting of St. Paul's Universalist parish was held Monday evening and these officers elected: Prudential committee, W. W. Leach, F. A. Royce and G. F. Sedgwick; treasurer, W. E. Stone; clerk, William Merriam; collector, F. J. Wassum; delegates to state convention, George Robinson and O. M. Graves; alternates, Mrs. William Merriam and Mrs. M. A. Smith. The parish committee is the music committee.

C. F. Smith, inspector of cattle, has again inspected the cattle through the town, and found 928 head, a few of which were affected with that much-dreaded disease, tuberculosis. Seven have been killed since the first of last January which had the disease, and there are two more which have been condemned. One of these seems to have been overlooked by the state executioner; the other is spared until a satisfactory settlement can be made with the owner regarding the price of the animal.

Some one evidently attempted to give the fire department a wild goose chase Tuesday night, as the key case on box 74, at the corner of Park and School streets, was broken and the key inserted in the box. The door opened rather hard, however, not being in perfect order, and to this the department probably owes its deliverance from a night call in disagreeable weather. There is a severe penalty for meddling with the boxes unnecessarily, and any offender caught will be made an example of.

At a meeting of the advisory committee of the Congregational church Tuesday evening these committees were appointed: To welcome strangers, C. W. Bennett, G. H. Hastings, J. B. Shaw; to visit strangers and the sick, Mrs. G. H. Wilkins, Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock, F. B. Pope, Mrs. S. H. Hellyar, Mrs. J. C. Wing, Mrs. G. H. Hastings; decoration, Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Mrs. John Sedgwick, Miss Flora Studley, Clarence Wing, Robert Studley, Albert Shaw; ushers, L. E. Chandler, G. H. Bray, H. N. Sedgwick, C. A. LeGro.

These civil cases were entered in the district court last Saturday: Stephen P. Smith against George Steele and trustees, all of Wales; Edward C. Bates, assignee, of Boston, against F. W. Moulton of Monson; D. W. Fosket against Arabella E. Geary, both of Brimfield; all were for action of contract. In the criminal court Monday George S. Pratt of Three Rivers was sent to the state farm at Bridgewater for one year for drunkenness, this having been the sixth time he had been up for the same offense within as many years.

Last Friday night was the coldest of the winter thus far, the mercury dropping to 10° below zero. It held cold all day Saturday, the mercury only having risen 12° at noon. Sunday the weather had moderated somewhat, and a storm which was part rain and part snow set in. The rain froze as fast as it fell, and the sidewalks were soon coated with a thin layer of ice which jeopardized the life and limbs of all who attempted to travel on them. Sunday night there was a thaw, and Monday the sleighing went fast under a temperature of 45°.

The Palmer Water Co. has finished the work of clearing out the lower reservoir of its water supply, and has put a new strainer over the entrance to the mains. The water is now taken from the upper or new reservoir, built last summer, around the center reservoir, or what was formerly "Moloney's pond," into the lower, and from that directly into the pipes, having been let on yesterday. As soon as it reaches the village the disagreeable taste so noticeble in the water during the past few weeks, caused by the flowing of the center reservoir, will probably disappear.

At the annual meeting of the Palmer Business and Social Club Wednesday evening, the vote of last week allowing the ladies in the families of members the use of the rooms Wednesday afternoons and evening was rescinded, and the whole matter left with the house committee. These officers were elected: President, C. B. Fiske; vice presidents, C. E. Fish and E. G. Hastings; treasurer, Rufus Flynt; secretary, H. W. McGregory; trustees, C. L. Holden, C. H. Hobbs, G. M. Atkins, C. E. Fuller, C. B. Fiske, H. W. McGregory and Rufus Flynt; election committee, C. F. Grosvenor, J. F. Holbrook, G. H. Wilkins, C. K. Gamwell, W. E. Stone, N. W. Chandler.

One of the local horsemen, who takes part in the friendly brushes on Main street, evidently had such matters considerably on his mind when he retired last Saturdsy night, and in his dreams apparently lived over again the exciting scenes of the mid-week afternoon, with the trotters. At any rate, when some late home-goers passed his residence that night the shouts of "Hi-i-i, there!" "Get along!" "Go on!" etc., which proceeded from his sleeping apartment would have led one to suspect a close finish between two high speed animals. Only the lateness of the hour and the evident unconsciousness of the driver precluded the calling of his hearers to learn which horse was ahead.

One away from two leaves two, not exactly according to the best mathematical authority, but true sometimes in actual practice. And this time the two were in an uncomfortable plight. They were half of a party of four who had gone fishing through the ice, and while engaged in catching fish the horse attached to one of the sleighs in which the party went managed to get loose and reduce the sleigh to pretty fine kindling wood about the woods in which it was tied. This left the two to come home with the other couple in a sleigh which was "built for two," but the party managed it all right, leading the horse which had caused the damage but which had managed to escape from the midst of the wreck without injury.

Perhaps on account of the good example set for it by its neighbors, the town clock turned over a new leaf last Saturday night, albeit it was a little late in getting round to it, and commenced the week by striking on time, instead of ten minutes out of the way, as it had been in the habit of doing for some time. Many people have wondered at the difference in the time of the clock and the whistle at the Rogers-Osgood hat works; it has been the clock's fault. The engineer at the hat works gets his time daily from the Western Union telegraph office, where the correct time is telegraphed at noon, and the whistle is sounded exactly on the second by that time. Like all good resolutions, the town clock's has been broken, and it now strikes about five minutes out of the way.

It may be remembered that last Friday was a cold, blustering day, with a sharp, biting wind. One Palmer man has occasion to remember it well. He went to the top of the house to clear it of snow, going to the roof of the L part with a short ladder, pulling the ladder up after him and using it to reach the main part of the house. All went well until he started to get down, when he found that the wind had removed the ladder for him. The ground was too far away to jump, as was also the roof of the L, and what to do was a question, as travel by that house is not very brisk at best, and there was less than ever on that day. Finally a stranger was seen in the street, and after much persuasion induced to come into the yard and get a ladder, on which the poor victim descended from behind the chimney, where he had taken refuge. He was there only about half an hour, but it seemed half a day.

The joke was too good to keep, so he had to tell it on himself. After the annual meeting of the Business and Social Club Wednesday evening some of the members gathered about the pool table and began playing "41," continuing until about 11.30, when it was agreed to play "just one more game" and then go home. But the hand of fate was in it, and a game which is usually finished in ten or fifteen minutes was, by unusual complications, drawn out until, when finished and someone thought to look at a watch, it was 12.30. Consternation was on every face. Every man's wife knew he was at the club and not at the "lodge," and what to do was the question. Finally one suggested that he'd tell the truth as the safest in the long run, and others concluded that it might be the wisest course. But one inwardly resolved that he wouldn't tell it all, so when his wife asked him where he'd been he replied, "Down to the club." "But does it always hold as late as this?" asked his wife. "Oh, they had an election of officers." "Did they elect you night watchman?" came the reply, and he acknowledges that the joke is on him.

The W. C. T. U. held its annual meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. The report of the treasurer showed the receipts of the past year to have been $154.45, and the expenditures $124.61. During the year the union has held 14 meetings and entertained the county convention February 14th, furnishing dinner and supper for all; sent out no-license literature before the town election and helped defray the expenses of the temperance singers, Mr. and Mrs. Beveridge; Neal Dow's 90th birthday was celebrated in the church vestry March 20th, with addresses by Revs. S. T. Frost and F. E. Jenkins, followed by a sugar party, with hot biscuit, oranges and pickles free to all; the union has helped sustain the Helping Hand society of Boston, also the Girls' Home and Midnight Mission of Boston; it has sent flowers to many shut out from the beauties of nature, and supported a water tank, with ice, on Main street during the summer at a cost of $30.85; on the two days of the fair in September the union had a dining tent on the fair grounds, furnishing meals and distributing literature; paid the expenses of Mrs. Helen G. Rice's annual visit to the union, and the expenses of the delegates to the county convention; three barrels of clothing, valued at $102 70, have been sent to the suffering. The following officers were elected for 1895: President, Mrs. S. T. Frost; vice president, Mrs. C. E. Dewey; treasurer, Mrs. L. M. Shaw; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock; recording secretary, Mrs. H. Lawrence.

PALMER CENTER.

Two young men badly intoxicated drove through town Saturday, returning from the horse sale in Ware. They had evidently bought a horse which they were driving home, and instead of leading the horse they drove to Ware, as a sober person would, they let him run loose, and when he would stop to rest the soberest man would get out and whip him into a run again. After running into every team they met here, they went on their way to other parts.

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. Maud Munsell, who has been quite sick, is some better.

The teachers from the other villages visited the schools here Tuesday.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Charles Shumway the 19th.

Miss Lizzie Hamilton of Freeding Hills was the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. D. Shaw, last week.

They say that another of our widowers, who goes so much to Indian Orchard, will soon bring home a wife.

Richie Russell of Indian Orchard, who has been visiting his parents, has returned to his home, accompanied by his uncle, Thomas Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gaboury and child returned Monday night from Millbury, where they have been visiting their parents the last few weeks.

Fifteen of the scholars in the M. E. Sabbath school last Sunday were presented by Thomas Russell with a book for not being absent a Sunday during the year.

Prof. Hamilton of Springfield, who has been giving a course of six lessons in singing to a class of 25, closed the course Thursday night with an entertainment to the public.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church, which met with Mrs. O. A. Parent last week, chose Mrs. E. E. Ryther secretary and treasurer in place of Mrs. C. E. Getchell, resigned.

The M. E. Sabbath school last Sunday elected these officers for the coming year: President, E. E. Ryther; treasurer, Maggie Bruce; secretary, Olin Parent; librarian, Ernest Hobson; assistant, Thomas Russell; organist, Allie Armstrong.

At the meeting of the W. C. T. U., held with Mrs. O. A. Parent last week, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. F. J. Hale; vice presidents, Mrs. O. A. Parent, Mrs. E. Ryther, Mrs. Knowlton, Mrs. Shumway, Mrs. Russell; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. O. A. Parent; superintendent of literature, Mrs. E. C. Russell; flower mission, Mrs. Charles Shumway; Sabbath observance, Mrs. E. Ryther.

THREE RIVERS.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Jenks have moved into their new residence this week.

Mrs. Turner is seriously ill at the home of Mrs. P. Talbert, her daughter.

Mrs. W. Buckley of Oldham, Eng., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Walter Trickett.

F. A. Upham spent last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Milliken in Lawrence.

A number of the A. O. U. W. members of this place attended a meeting of the lodge at Ware last evening.

Mr. Treadwell of Higganum, Ct., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Kendrick a few days during this week.

Ambrose Garant, a former resident of this place, now of New Bedford, was married Wednesday of this week.

The Misses Grace and Laura Bassett of Ware were the guests of Mrs. Johnson a few days in the beginning of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillman of Northampton spent a part of this week with their son, Fred Hillman, who is ill with the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garant and Mr. and Mrs. C. Gauselin of Holyoke visited a number of friends in town during the week.

The bell for St. Anne's church has arrived, and is being placed in position. When the work is done dedicatory exercises will be held.

Dr. Bell of Chatham, N. Y., is to commence medical practice, as a partner with Dr. Desmarais, at this place about the 15th of this month.

Mr. Trudeau has moved his meat business into the Desaulnier block, and this location will be much more commodious for a market than where Mr. Trudeau has formerly carried on his business.

The annual meeting of the Union church will be held next Tuesday evening. Dr. Tuttle of Amherst is expected to be present and give an address. The meeting will be held in the auditorium, and there is to be a short intermission between the address and the transaction of business.

Last Tuesday evening the A. O. U. W. held a meeting for the purpose of installing the officers elected last week. Dr. Murray of Boston was present and delighted the brothers by telling many good stories and relating incidents of his extensive travels in Asia and Africa. A well-prepared repast was among the agreeable features of the occasion, and every one of the fraternity felt that their efforts to make the evening enjoyable were not in vain.

O. A. Lariviere & Co. have opened a meat market in the post office block, and intend to send a cart around town to establish a meat route. Charles Barnard, one of the partners of the firm, has had a large experience in the meat business, and this, in addition to having secured the services of James Barber, the veteran meat cutter of this place, will insure the undertaking success. The firm also intends to deal in hay and grain, which will be kept in the rooms lately made vacant by Mr. Trudeau.

One young man in this place, who is noted for his gallant conduct toward the fair sex, had a rather humiliating experience one evening this week. While out skating he offered to assist a young lady over a wet spot on the ice, and as is his custom, he essayed to carry her "over the water." Whether or not he tried to act the "Highland Chief" and she "Lord Ullen's daughter" is unknown, as there were no witnesses, but somehow it has been discovered that a collapse took place, which chilled his chivalry and dampened the fair one's romantic notions.

THORNDIKE.

John Wagner is confined to his home with rheumatism.

Mrs. E. J. Kelley and son are visiting friends in New York.

Mrs. Frank Sales of Vermont is visiting in town for a few weeks.

A benefit dance will be held next Friday evening for Patrick Riley, the blind boy.

A singing class has been organized in town under the leadership of Mr. Hamilton, with a membership of 40.

A. A. Houghton has taken the contract to paint W. F. Dutton's house at Ludlow, and is now doing the work.

Mrs. L. L. Scott and family of Springfield were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Whiting the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Grows of New Jersey have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Parker during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Roche are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, which came to them on Sunday.

Mrs. W. G. Bumpus of Lowell, who was the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Stearns, returned to her home on Monday.

Michael Roche and son, Mrs. J. J. Kelley and son, Mrs. McManus and Michael O'Connor were called to Worcester Sunday last to attend the funeral of a relative.

The temporary shut-down of the Ware Steam Laundry will not interfere with J. W. Molloy's laundry route, as he has worked up a large business, and for the present his work will be done by the Excelsior Steam Laundry of Springfield.

The attendance at the rink on Saturday showed a marked increase, and those present enjoyed a very pleasant evening. The same programme will be given again to-morrow evening, and the Columbian Band will be in attendance as usual.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

The Dancing Class Ball.

The ball Tuesday evening was a grand success. In spite of the weather there was a large attendance, both of onlookers and participants. Brigham's orchestra has lost none of its attractions for Monson people, and the concert programme was much enjoyed. Prof. Treadway acted as floor manager, and the aids were Eugene Shaw, Charles Howard, Clarence King, E. W. Murphy, Henry F. Miller, Joseph Chandler, Richard S. Hughes and Charles Entwistle. A number of out-of-town guests were present, including Mrs. Kimball, Frank and Dell Babbidge, John Marcy, Harry Treadway and Irving Brigham of Westboro, Miss Donovan of Springfield, Miss Hattie Stebbins of Palmer. An oyster supper at the Cushman House wound up the affair. Among the costumes worn were: Mrs. Brigham, violet silk and velvet; Miss Mary Kennedy, fancy costume, red skirt, white silk waist, with white carnations; Miss Mollie Coleman, pink surah; Miss Julia Gallivan, white cashmere, white carnations; Mrs. Julia Ketcham, cream albatross, red velvet trimmings, lilies of the valley; Mrs. William Carew, white silk; Miss Joanna Cantwell, cream white India silk; Miss Maggie Connell, black silk trimmed with white point lace; Miss Mary Connell, yellow silk crepe; Miss Emily Lewis, white honeycomb silk; Miss Mary Murphy, light blue lansdowne, gold lace trimmings; Miss Crossman, white silk, trimmed with ostrich tips; Miss Ethel Rood, light blue silk; Misses Minnie and May Anderson, white muslin trimmed with sprays of smilax and flowers; Miss McKenna, blue silk; Miss Bridget Moriarty, changeable silk; Miss Oakes, white crepon, blue ribbons; Miss Libbie Eccieston, white mull, yellow ribbons; Miss Mary Hobbs, baby blue cashmere, black lace trimmings; Miss Nellie Murphy, black satin; Misses Mary and Alice Bliss, brown wool; Miss Maggie Gavin, blue silk; Miss Fannie Blanchard, gray wool and velvet; Mrs. Lyman Miller, black silk; Miss Musa Babbitt, gobelin blue silk; Miss Mary Anderson, pink crepon and chiffon; Miss Mooney, light blue silk; Miss Elsie Lewis, black skirt, pink bodice; Miss Effie Aldrich, white silk, flowers; Miss Delia Gavin, light blue silk; Miss Mary Corcoran, light green silk; Miss Lottie Hobbs, black skirt, pink bodice; Miss Winnie Bacon, white serge; Miss Julia Keefe, white India silk, gold lace; Miss Delia Brannick, pink silk mull; Miss Annie Brennan, yellow satin; Miss Annie Lewis, brown novelty goods; Miss Sarah Gavin, white India silk; Mrs. Richard Doyle, pearl lansdowne; Miss Maggie Ryan, black henrietta, Jacqueminot roses; Miss Julia Shearer, tan henrietta; Miss Mollie Lewis, brown diagonal; Mrs. Eugene Howlett, old rose silk; Miss Ella Dalton, dark skirt, old rose silk waist; Miss Ida Rounds, brown wool and velvet; Miss Lena Babbitt, ashes of roses silk, white lace yoke; Miss Mary Hart, black lace; Miss Rachael Babbitt, mastic novelty and silk; Miss Nellie Mixter, black silk; Miss Minnie Gilligan, white silk; Miss Donovan, red silk; Miss Eva Manchester, red silk waist, slate colored skirt; Miss Chapin, mode henrietta; Miss Mabelle Flynt, black satin; Miss Hattie Stebbins, pink bodice, black skirt; Miss Edith Wood, green wool, silk trimmings; Miss Edith Parker, light figured challie; Miss Mollie Hanley, mode wool; Miss Lyons, changeable silk waist, black skirt; Miss Kate Haggerty, red serge.

As a result of the Dorcas meetings and Christmas sale $114.70 were taken, and after paying all expenses to January 1st, 1895, $85 was put in the bank, making over $220 on deposit.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church serves a supper to-night from 6 to 8, followed by an entertainment under the direction of the newly-organized young people's society.

Rev. Hollis Jordan of Rochester, N. H., has been assisting at the Congregational church during the week of prayer, and will give a Bible reading to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the chapel.

Although there have been a number of suspected cases of tuberculosis only one animal has been condemned, and nearly all the others have been released from quarantine by the state board.

J. W. Lambert has decided to wait until warm weather before going any further with his new block on the corner of Main street and Park avenue. He has also decided that it will be four stories high.

Three wiremen of the Central Mass. Electric Co. are kept busy in town making new connections. Monson appreciates the lights. Selectman Norcross has lighted his house and cattle stables, and Noble is to light his livery stable with electricity.

The walks would be perfect if they were kept cleared, and the question has been asked: "How would it do for the selectmen to offer prizes for the best kept walks, or are we big enough for a city ordinance compelling abutters to clear their walks of snow and ice?"

The wall of the collecting well for the water works system is being put in very rapidly. At a depth of 24 feet a foundation has been reached which it is hoped will be perfectly satisfactory. With the exception of a short section on Granite street the pipe is all laid to the well and ready to connect.

Considering the weather, which has been stormy nearly every evening, the meetings of the week of prayer at the Congregational church have been well attended, and the services will be continued next week. A union meeting was held at the Methodist church Tuesday evening, and one at the Congregational church Wednesday.

The number of animals at Flynt Park has been increased this week by the addition of a handsome young buck deer, about six months old, received from New York state. The trouble with the older ones has been that they are not contented in captivity, but this one has been quite a pet this fall at a hotel where he has been kept, and is expected to thrive and be contented here.

A Monson lady has received from Nebraska a letter which asks the JOURNAL to call the attention of the people to the suffering and hardships which the people in many localities there are undergoing, many families being on the verge of starvation, and without sufficient clothing to cover them. A barrel of clothing is to be sent from Monson, and contributions may be left at Mrs. Henry M. Bugbee's. The letter also enclosed an appeal to the G. A. R. post from Church Howe, commander of the Nebraska department of the G. A. R., formerly a member of the 6th Massachusetts.

The following children in the Green street primary school have been neither absent nor tardy during the month ending Jan. 4, 1895: Mamie Bogan, Lizzie Connell, Ethel Day, Maggie Kearns, Alice Noble, May Pendergast, Blanche Ritter, Grace Thayer, John Cantwell. Frank Cushman, Frank Gath, Howard Gath, Herbert Howe, Peter Kearns, Eddie Lambert, Clifford Millar, Henry Neville, Mortimer Duggans. In the No. 1 primary: Mary Adams, Florence Crocker, Maggie Dalton, Nellie Kennedy, Hope Morris, Ruth Mumford, Mary Purcell, James Carter, George Cushman, Clinton Grant, Henry Hale, Raymond McPherson, Everett Maguire.

Following the week of prayer the Methodist church will devote a week to worship in song, conducted by Herr Buehler, of Boston, who has an enviable reputation in his line of work. His object is to develop intelligent and devotional singing in the congregation, Sunday school and choir. Rev. W. H. Marble will on Sabbath morning take for his subject: "The Power of Music." From Monday till Friday, inclusive, Herr Buehler will meet the children in the afternoon at 4.15 and instruct them in principles of voice use and song expression; from 7 to 8 in the evening there will be congregational song practice, to which all are invited; from 8 to 9 will be special voice lessons, and from 9 to 10 the choir will meet.

Albert Deane, who had been employed by Gray & Lambert for about ten days, was sent out last Friday with a load of boots, shoes and rubbers to sell. He returned that night all right and left again Saturday morning. As he had not made his appearance Monday morning, Officer Thompson was sent in pursuit, and found him in Hampden. Deane promised to return that night; he failed to do so however, and Mr. Lambert made him a call Tuesday morning, finding that he had disposed of nearly all the goods, although not at retail prices, and had nearly all the money, about $30. This he gave to Mr. Lambert and promises to "work out" the remaining $6. Mr. Lambert considers himself very fortunate in getting out of the affair as cheaply as he has.

Loren Squier of this place, who has an orange grove in Eastlake, Florida, about 90 miles south of Jacksonville, has written home concerning the freeze December 27th. His account is that it rained a little, then cleared off cold during the afternoon, the mercury then dropping to 17° above zero, the coldest night known in 49 years. The oranges were frozen so hard that they burst open, and are counted nearly worthless. Not only was the fruit frozen, but the trees themselves, so that the bark burst, and many will die. One of Mr. Squier's trees, which bore a barrel of oranges, was one of these. The buds which set in the spring were bagged, that is, wound with paper and covered with moss for protection against frost, and it is not known of course how those will come out. The tops of many of the trees are dead, and all will lose their leaves. Mr. Squier sets his damage at $150 at least.

LUDLOW.

A lively runaway occurred last Friday afternoon on the Chicopee river. A number of men were out trotting horses, and one owned by Mr. Newell of Springfield started suddenly and ran quite a distance, throwing out the driver. The horse then ran about three-quarters of a mile till it reached the point where the water works cross the river on an iron bridge. The ice at that place is very thin, and the animal fell through into the river. The water was only about four feet deep, and he was easily gotten out. On examination it was found that one of the shafts of the sleigh had pierced his body quite badly, and there were also several cuts in his flanks. The horse was a bay and had recently been bought by Mr. Newell from Mr. Potvin of Holyoke.

WEST WARREN.

The King's Daughters met with Miss Edith Chadsey last week Thursday. The following list of officers was elected: President, Mrs. Fred Barlow; vice president, Mrs. Emma Gaulbert; treasurer, Mrs. M. E. Whitney; secretary, Mrs. Deland. Over $100 has been distributed by the society the past year; the town relief fund, the children's hospital at Baldwinville, the Fresh Air Fund, the Michigan lumberman have been the principal beneficiaries.

The Mattawamppe Club held its first annual meeting last Friday evening and elected the following officers: President, George E. Tarbell; vice president, Frank W. Bliss; secretary, Joseph G. Hastings; treasurer, W. E. Nichols. The officers, with Charles S. Hitchcock, William H. Hitchcock and George De Laval constitute the executive committee. The club has made many improvements in its rooms during the year, and has also succeeded in paying off nearly all of its debts.

The Congregational Sunday school has elected these officers for the coming year: Superintendent, J. W. Chadsey; assistant superintendent, J. G. Hastings; secretary, E. J. Spencer; treasurer, F. P. Stearns; librarians, A. N. Kelley and Bert Clark; chorister, J. Moody; library committee, D. L. K. Hathaway, Rev. H. G. Hale, Mrs. H. G. Hale, Mrs. G. P. Aborn, Mrs. G. P. Kelley; finance committee, Dr. J. W. Hastings, Rev. H. G. Hale, Mrs. M. D. Bliss; exective committee, pastor, superintendent and C. H. Walker, R. C. Strickland, George P. Aborn, Mrs. F. A. Ruggles and Miss M. H. Dow.

Funeral of Dr. Miner.

The funeral of Dr. D. W. Miner was very largely attended at 3 30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The funeral services were in charge of Lewis N. Gilbert and William S. Hyde, and the religious service at the house was very brief, and was conducted by Rev. E. J. V. Huiguin of the Episcopal church. A quartette consisting of William F. Wilson, G. W. Dunham, Charles Lovett and C. A. Julia sang appropriate selections. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, and included a square and compass from Eden Lokge of Masons, of which Dr. Miner was a charter member, and a broken wreath and sickle from the Brookfield medical club. The bearers were Henry Fisherdick, William Kennedy, A. L. Warner of New York, John Warner and L. J. Warner of Northampton, and Dr. W. W. Miner. Nearly all the members of the Brookfield medical club were present, and many Ware people. Among those present from out of town were Judge Strickland, T. G. Spaulding of Northampton, Dr. William Holbrook of Palmer, Dr. Joseph W. Winslow of Easthampton, Dr. George Thompson of Belchertown, William Skinner of Holyoke, John W. Dickenson of Newtonville, Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Warner of Dorchester, Dr. James H. Joliffe and Dr. E. F. Ward and daughter of New York, Prof. E. P. Crowell and wife of Amherst, Mrs. Mary C. Miner of Buffalo, N. Y., Prof. E. C. Garman of Amherst, and Mrs. Tuttle of Crawfordsville, Ind.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, JANUARY 9, 1895.

Inauguration day only emphasized the evident fact that a new order of things has set in on Beacon Hill. The simplicity of the old building has passed away and there is more of formality and magnificence than the people have been accustomed to, from the gilt braid and lettering on the new caps of the watchmen and elevator men, up to the dazzling combination of colors in the reception room of the House. People who come up from the sands of Cape Cod and down from the hills of Berkshire and the many rural communities between, will get a newer idea of stately munificence and magnificence than ever before. Very likely this new building will have an effect upon the people of the state for many years to come. It will change their ideas. Its effect will doubtless be felt in the construction of costly court houses, town halls and other public buildings, if not of private residences. It will surely stimulate to greater breadth of style in architecture, and to lavishness in expense. Whether it will stimulate the sterner virtues without which the state is not safe, can only be predicted, but it looks as if the effect would be the other way. The real solid foundation on which the pillars of our state rest is not as showy as these marble columns in the State House extension.

The developments of the second week have already shown that there is a great deal of work ahead for the Legislature to do. It is not work which has been put in by the politicians nor by the blackmailers for the sake of making corporations come down handsomely with blood money for them, but it is necessary work, in the opinion, at least, of a good many intelligent men. It is work which needs to be done, and the doing of which will benefit the people at large aside from any private interests. Perhaps the bad jobs by the politicians and blackmailers will turn up later. They have not appeared yet.

A bill has been presented to provide for a constitutional convention to be held in the State House, beginning July 10th, 1897, if the people should vote at the state election of 1895 that they wanted one held. If a majority are in favor of such action, then they can have a year till the next November election in which to formulate their issues and select their delegates, and then, after the Legislature of 1897 is out of the way, the work can begin. But constitutional conventions have not been popular in Massachusetts. Two have been held, one in 1820 and one in 1853. The result of each was rejected by the people at the polls. The truth is that it is very hard to satisfy everybody, and most people would be likely to have one or more material objections to some part of the new constitution. Then it is human nature to vote against what you don't like. So both constitutions prepared by these conventions were rejected by the people. Perhaps this was best, for such a constitution is liable to be part compromise and part log-roll, while by the natural process of growth, as we have enjoyed it ever since the constitution was adopted in 1780, the people have passed upon the amendments singly, and so every proposition has had the benefit of the independent judgment of the people.

The question of tuberculosis will have to demand a great deal of time. The farmers of the state are not satisfied with the doings of the cattle commission, with their tuberculin test and large slaughter of cattle. Senator Bill of Worcester has presented a bill which provides for payment of the full value of the cattle which are slaughtered by vote of the commission, and it makes an arrangement for a commission to be made up of the farmers' neighbors to determine the value of the cattle which are killed. Very likely the farmers themselves will see the liability for abuse of the state treasury which exists in such a bill as this. Probably they would not expect to secure the passage of a measure so much in their favor.

The first step has been taken to renew the contest of last year over the taxation of personal property. Representative Bliss of Westfield has put in a bill which is substantially the same as that which was defeated last year, compelling returns to be made to the assessors of all personal property which is subject to taxation. The corresponding bill of the anti-double taxation league—to exempt foreign corporation stocks from double taxation—has not been introduced, but there is no doubt that it will be brought in in due time, and that last year's contest will be renewed on substantially the old lines. Probably both sides are as well organized this year as ever before, and the people who are opposed to double taxation are doubtless in better shape than ever.

The new normal schools which were voted for last year by the Legislature are already thinking that they must have more money out of the state treasury in order to finish and furnish their buildings. In at least one instance the course which has been pursued was highly censurable. One of the representatives last year favored the bill for a location in his place when he knew that the sum voted would probably not be sufficient, but that it would be only a starter for taking money out of the state treasury. But he was willing to keep still then in order that the bill might have a better chance of passage. Now that is through and there is no such thing as going back, he is very zealous for an additional appropriation from the state treasury. Such doings as that leave a very dark stain upon the normal school business which is not at all to be desired in connection with the noble cause of education.

The reporters' gallery in the new hall of the House is an abomination. When the men are sitting at their desks they can see just half of the House—by leaning forward, a few more. But it is an intolerable place to put men and expect that they will be able to give fair reports of the proceedings. If the public want to learn what is going on and if the members wish to be correctly reported, some remedy should be devised speedily.

Wednesday afternoon the Republicans and Democrats held their separate caucuses for the nomination of candidates for United States senator. Each caucus acted unanimously, as was expected. The Republicans nominated Senator Hoar and adopted eulogistic resolutions. The Democrats nominated John E. Russell and applauded a very complimentary speech by Mr. Keenan of Boston. The election will be at 2.30 next Tuesday afternoon. LANDON.

You'll have to Insist, sometimes, upon getting Pearline, otherwise, grocers may give you some poor imitation of it, which pays them a larger profit but which it will not pay you to use. It isn't enough to order Pearline. See that you get it. It has grown into favor so rapidly that it has not only brought out a host of imitations, but it has led people to call any powdered soap, washing-powder, or so-called washing compound—anything in the way of a powder for cleansing purposes—Pearline. This is all very flattering to Pearline, but if it's these imitations that you've used, you can't be enthusiastic. 402 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

RHEUMATISM PREVALENT.

Caused by the Sudden Changes of Temperature.

Rheumatism is more prevalent here than ever before. When this disease fastens upon an individual with its pain and soreness, swelling the joints, rendering him helpless in his movements, he is indeed an object of pity. The slight pain in his back, joints or muscles is a warning indication of an impoverished condition of the blood, and if not attended to at once, means rheumatism.

Since the introduction of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, there have been fewer rheumatic sufferers. Favorite Remedy drives out rheumatic poison from the blood, restores the circulation, strengthens the nerve power. The best proof of its value is the good it has done.

"I was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for fifteen years," writes Mr. E. P. Tayer, of East Nassau, N. Y., "so severe that I was supposed to be a cripple for life. Under physicians' treatment I grew worse. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helped me from the first time I used it, and entirely cured me."

The beautiful daughter of Mr. James McFarland, of DeMoines, Ia., was helpless for months with sciatic rheumatism. After a few doses of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, she began to grow better, and continuing its use was cured.

Mr. G. Lansing, of Troy, N. Y., had rheumatism so bad that he had to be turned over in bed. After using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while, was restored to health. Why then suffer with rheumatism or neuralgia? This medicine will help you.

Freddy (day before Xmas)—"Santa Claus is going to have some trouble coming down our chimney." Johnny—"How is that?" Freddy—"I went up to the roof yesterday and put a stray cat in the chimney, and she hasn't come down yet."—Harper's Young People.

Afflicted With Rheumatism.

Mr. George A. Mills of Lebanon, Conn., says: "I was afflicted with rheumatism in my back all last winter. It was so severe at times that I could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. I tried different remedies without receiving any relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days, according to directions, my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. I have since recommended it to others and know they have been benefited by its use.

Carlton Cornwell, foreman of the Gazette, Middletown, N. J., believes that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy should be in every home. He used it for a cold and it affected a speedy cure. He says: "It is indeed a grand remedy; I can recommend it to all. I have also seen it used for whooping cough, with the best results." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of 18 East 15th St., New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy from druggist H. H. Lane, Peekskill, N. Y. Such good results followed its use that he sent back to Mr. Lane for two bottles more of the same remedy. Those who give this medicine a trial are seldom satisfied with any other when again in need of such a preparation. It is unequalled for coughs and colds.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS MATTERS.

Eight more bodies of the victims of the Delavan House fire at Albany, N. Y., have been found this week, making in all 10 bodies that have been dug out of the ruins so far.

John O'Grady, 39, of North Adams, leaped from a mill window last Friday while temporarily insane into a raceway and was drowned. He leaves a widow and six children.

Mrs. Eliza Bogan, during a drunken quarred at New York Sunday morning, threw a lighted lamp at Bridget Gorman, setting the latter's clothing on fire and burning her to death.

The Boston pilot boat, D. J. Lawler, was sunk during the heavy storm early Saturday morning by colliding with a schooner in Cape Cod Bay, and four out of her crew of five were drowned.

A colored woman in St. Louis is liable to be hanged for swearing falsely. She is charged with committing perjury in a murder trial, the punishment for which is hanging in Missouri.

The Royal Yacht Squadron of London has finally acceded to the conditions proposed by the New York Yacht Club, and the prospects are good for another race for the cup which America has held so long.

Eugene V. Debbs and the other officers and directors of the American Railway Union went to the Cook county jail at Chicago Tuesday to serve the sentences recently imposed on them for contempt of court.

President Eliot of Harvard college, accompanied by his wife, has gone to Alexandria, Egypt, where he expects to remain three months. This trip is solely for rest, as the president has not been in best of health recently.

A Russian girl of 14 was lately arrested on the charge of strangling a two-years-old child she was employed to look after, when she confessed to having killed 16 children in this way, because she did not like the trouble they gave her.

A man who represented himself to be a gas inspector gained an entrance to St. Joseph's hospital at Omaha, Neb., Monday morning, and stole money to the amount of $6250, the property of one of the priests who live at the institution.

The big shoe shop of the F. D. Dodge Company at Newburyport, which has been idle the past two years, started up Monday under the firm name of J. H. Ireland & Co. The new firm expect to employ 800 persons when the shop is running full force.

The town of North Adams is anxious to become a city. At a recent town meeting it was voted to petition the Legislature to grant the town a city charter, and the town's finance committee was instructed to outline a charter and do the petitioning.

The miners of the Massilon (O.) district, numbering 8000, decided Monday night to return to work Tuesday at the 60-cent rate made by an arbitration board. The men have been out since the national coal strike in April of last year. They wanted 70 cents.

Toronto, Ont., experienced one of the most disastrous fires in its history Sunday morning, involving a loss of $1,000,000. The fire originated in the basement of the Globe newspaper office, and that building, with several others were burned. One fireman was killed and several others injured.

A fire caused by a cow kicking over a lantern burned all the farm buildings of John A. Tornsney, with their contents, at East Whitefield, N. H., early Friday morning. The loss is about $4000. The family escaped with barely clothes enough to cover them, the mercury being 25° below zero at the time.

The Actor's Protective Union of Boston are considering a plan of securing for the 50,000 actors in the country an amendment to the national election laws whereby they may be allowed to vote in the place where their profession may call them on election day. At present they are unable to vote except at their homes. Steps will be taken at once to secure a change, if possible.

Charles O. Russell of Springfield, a former superintendent of the Boston and Albany railroad, died in that city Tuesday morning, after a lingering illness. For more than 20 years he had suffered from rheumatism, and he resigned the superintendency of the road December 1, 1882, on this account, after 37 years' service in various capacities. Mr. Russell was 70 years of age at the time of his death.

Columbia College has just received a gift of $350,000 from the Vanderbilts for the building of two additional buildings to the Vanderbilt clinic. Mrs. W. D. Sloane, who was a Vanderbilt, and her husband have also subscribed $200,000 for the additional buildings, and two men have guaranteed the necessary half million dollars for two new buildings of Columbia College on Riverside Heights.

A woman at Augusta, Me., has recently been literally frightened to death. She was told by a "root doctor" that she was filled with lizards, when she immediately took to her bed and died. Before she died the children accused their father of having conjured the old woman, when a row ensued in which the old man slew his son in self-defense. The father was arrested, but has been released.

The Westfield authorities have discovered that the bride of a few weeks in that town was but twelve years old at the time of the ceremony. The parties are colored people, and when the marriage permit was obtained the groom stated that the bride was fifteen. It is probable that the authorities will take no action to prosecute the husband for false statement in regard to his wife's age, as the couple are living comfortably together, apparently well satisfied with each other.

Mrs. Emma H. Emmons of Hinsdale met with a terrible death on the Boston and Albany tracks at Pittsfield Tuesday evening. She undertook to board a train which was sidetracked, and on being refused by the railroad employes she walked up the railroad away from the depot, nothing more being seen of her until the train struck her. The wheels severed her body at the waist so the interior of her body was exposed. Her left leg was cut off at the knee and her right arm was severed. She had been married but three months.

Considerable discussion has arisen over the clause in the will of the late George M. Stearns, leaving $1000 to W. W. McClench, should his executors need legal aid. It appears that George B. Tuttle, the son-in-law of Mr. Stearns, and Mrs. Tuttle are both left out, while the other relatives receive generous allowances. It is said Mr. Stearns and Mr. Tuttle have not been on speaking terms for some time. A granddaughter, Emily S. Tuttle, is however, left $25,000 in trust, so arranged that if she should die without issue the money goes to Mr. Stearns's brother, thus completely cutting off the Tuttles, which may lead to legal complications.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Dyspepsia Cured

"My wife has been a great sufferer with dyspepsia for over four years. Three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla have perfectly cured her. At times the lightest food would distress her terribly. She could not sleep well nights and she said no one could tell how badly she felt. She was also troubled with sick headaches. She had tried different kinds of medicine, but none did her any good. At last Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and one bottle did her so much good that she took two more and now she is perfectly well. She is now troubled with any sick headaches nor bad feelings, can eat heartily and sleep well. To Hood's Sarsaparilla belongs all the credit." OTIS MERRITT, Addison, Me.

THE FINAL STRAW.

An ex-Confederate General was talking to a Boston newspaper man in the Parker House the other day about the events of the late War. "It is a funny thing that our men bore everything patiently," said the General, "until the coffee ran short, and they weakened in courage and strength. This drink was too much of a necessity to be spared."

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feelling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

MRS. HARRY E. STARR, Pottsville, Pa.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

RHEUMATISM.

NATHAN G. BATCHELDER.

With rheumatism come weak kidneys, weak nerves, poor blood. Weak kidneys mean death, because they lead to serious kidney diseases, which always kill. The symptoms are weak back, pain in the back, bloating, muddy water, tired and languid feeling, gas in the stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, headache, dimness of vision, dryness of skin, and nervousness.

Just so surely as you have these symptoms, your kidneys are out of order, and you need the one sure cure, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Try a bottle and see how quickly these symptons will vanish. It cures rheumatism, a most dangerous complaint, for it leads to fatal heart disease. Mr. Nathan G. Batchelder of Hardwick, Vt., writes:

"A year ago I was badly bloated, and it was said I was going to die with the dropsy. I commenced taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. At that time I was a sight to behold. My usual weight was 135 pounds, but then I weighed 185 pounds from bloating. I also had rheumatism so that I could not get into a sleigh or wagon, and was bent over badly. My stomach was so bad that I could not digest my food, and it pained me a good deal. It had been in this condition for seven years before I began to take Dr. Greene's medicine, but since taking it I can eat as hearty a meal as anybody. I have not been out for eight winters until this winter, but this winter I have been out constantly, and took care of my horse and driven frequently. After I got out, many of my friends did not know me I was so changed and looked so well.

"For years I only ate one slice of bread in one day, and drank one or two cups of tea, which was all I could eat, and I sometimes suffered from that.

"I was about as bad a used up man as ever lived for a long time, and I expected to die any time; but thanks to Dr. Greene's wonderful medicine, I am greatly improved.

"Now all my bloat is gone, and I am as well of that as ever. My rheumatism is practically gone, and my stomach is sound and digests my food perfectly, and I sleep soundly. The doctor who treated me did me no good, and he said I would not live six months I was in such bad order. Other doctors said it was the most remarkable case they had ever known, to have me come up the way I did. My case is widely known.

"I can recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy as the best medicine I ever saw or heard of, and I will cheerfully answer any inquiries about my case, but for seven years I could not write my name I was so trembly."

Mr. H. R. Kimball, druggist, of Hardwick, says: "I knew of Mr. Nathan G. Batchelder's remarkable case, and the statement is true."

It cures quickly and permanently, rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney and liver disease, and makes good blood and strong nerves. Everybody, both physicians and the people everywhere acknowledge Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to be the greatest known cure for disease. People who take it get well.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

The Old Lady Speaks.

John's in the legislature, and William's almost there,
And Richard—he's the sheriff, and Rufus, he's the mayor;
Josiah takes the taxes—and says they're coming high;

Mary married a lawyer, and Jenny is the wife
Of a revenue detective, in the moonlight of her life;
And Maggie's being courted by the teacher over there,

And so the girls and boys are placed as well as well can be;
It's a sort of satisfaction to the old man and to me,
And see the children prosperin', and know we raised 'em all!

A HYGIENIC HADES.

A simple-minded old soldier, who served under Fremont the Pathfinder, returned to his native town in the East a good many years ago, and told a plain unvarnished tale of the wonders he had seen in the Yosemite Valley and other wild regions on the Pacific slope. By simply telling the truth this gray old fightingman earned the reputation of being the biggest liar in all the country around.

Any one who travels through the valley of the Grand River in Western Colorado, and tells of what he saw there, runs the same risk. What can a man expect who says he took a half-hour's swim in midwinter all unprotected from a howling snow-storm, and afterwards descended into the bowels of the earth and took a vapor bath, the raw (or cooked) materials of which came straight from Tophet, or thereabouts? Yet these are the every-day humdrum incidents in the lives of the people of Grand River Valley.

A black and turbid river flows out from between frowning cliffs; through its icy waters bubble springs of water hot from the fires below. Sulphurous fumes are provided for you as you approach the little door in the mountain-side near the river. It is a trifle disappointing to find the gate-keeper seated on a cane-bottom chair, but after he has told you a few stories you feel that he is the right man in the right place.

He has a tale of a man addicted to the excessive use of tobacco, who went into this hygienic hades clothed only in its vapors, and came out in a full suit of nicotine. Thick doors separate compartments, gradually increasing in temperature, until you are ushered into a cavern filled with a driving vapor that winds about you in steaming folds. As your eyes grow used to the ghostly shifting light you see the forms of half-naked men, some sitting, many lying in hollows of the rocks; they seem to quiver in the winding mists that envelop them like objects in a mirage.

After the visitor becomes parboiled he is permitted to return to the door and cool himself gradually in one compartment after another. Resuming the conventional garb of the tourist, he looks up once more at the stars, and is thankful that he went in at the gate where they charged admission.

FOR "GOOD OLD MUDDER."

When Curtiss, the photographer, got down to his studio a few mornings ago he found a diminutive, tattered and very dirty little boy waiting for him, with a bootblack's kit slung on his shoulder. With an inimitable tough drawl the boy said:

"Say, Mr. Coitiss, I came ter git me tintypes taken. I want ter send it ter me mudder, wot lives in Cleveland, see?"

Mr. Curtiss said: "I don't take tintypes, my boy. Why don't you go to a tintype gallery?"

"Aw, Mr. Coitiss. Youse de only pitcher-taker I knows. See, Mr. Coitiss," he wheedled, "here's the stuff, I've been savin' it ter git er pitcher ter send to me mudder. Youse kin have it all." And he opened his grimy, sweaty little paw, in which reposed a silver dime and a cent. "All right," said Curtiss, "come in and I'll take your picture. You needn't pay me with money. What can you do?"

"Say, Mr. Coitiss, I kin do anything. I'm a wise kid. Dey ain't no flies on me." He was lifted into a chair and his feet didn't come within a foot of the floor. He was trembling with excitement and his teeth glistened in a line of white against his dirty face. After the shutter clicked and he was told it was "all over," he laughed and said: "Huh, dat ain't nuttin'. I cud do dat meself, Mr. Coitiss."

He was put to work cleaning the globes on the chandeliers to pay for his pictures, and during the afternoon disappeared. About 6 o'clock he came back and said: "I had ter go after me 3 o'clocks. Here's a poipy I saved fer you, Mr. Coitiss." And he drew a rumpled dirty paper from under his coat.

When the pictures were finished and handed to him, he said:

"Hully gee. Ain't dat outer sight? Won't de old lady be proud uv her chollyboy wen she gits dis! Say, Mr. Coitiss, me mudder's a good old lady, and she's got six more kids ter wash fer, so I t'ought I'd skip."

One of the pictures was mailed to "de good old mudder" in Cleveland, and the boy had one for himself. He looked at it admiringly for a moment and said: "Say. Won't dis kill de kids at de Junction dead when I show it to 'em. Aw, say? Photograffed by Coitiss. Where's me chrysanthemum, Cholly?" and he strutted out.—Kansas City Star.

"That," he soliloquized, with bitterness, "means the clothes-press for me until the old man gets away from the house to-morrow morning."

Communing thus with himself, unconscious of the purpose of preserving him from the touch of the world, the bird rued the day he was hatched.—Detroit Tribune.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested? Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney's, Monson; F. A. Spencer's, Ware.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

MASCULINE ADVANTAGES.

There are times when a girl sincerely and devoutly wishes that she were a man. Here are but a few instances:

When she realizes that she hasn't the courage to go to sleep without looking under the bed for a burglar.

When she loses a train. It would be such a comfort to indulge in an assortment of masculine explosive epithets.

When she is about to begin to curl her hair. And when she is about to powder her nose until it resembles a plaster-of-paris nose.

When has to put things that look like rat-traps in her sleeves to make the sleeves stick out, and when the rat-traps dig roseate sketches on her arms.

When she thinks how she would get up in a street car and give a poor, tired-out woman a seat and then run for a doctor when the poor, tired-out woman fainted from sheer surprise.—Chicago Record.

SWEEPING REDUCTIONS.

"I came, I saw, I conquered," exultantly exclaimed Cæsar of old. The old Roman's triumphant outburst has become a time-honored saying. It is used again and again. It admirably depicts the splendid success of LYNCH'S Sweeping Reductions in ULSTERS, SUITS, OVERCOATS AND TROUSERS for January trade

"LYNCH is selling $20 Ulsters for $10," is heard on all sides, "LYNCH is selling $20 Suits for $10," is repeated again and again. "LYNCH is almost giving goods away," says one. "Ain't dem cheap?" thinks aloud one more.

"It's true, there aren't in Springfield to-day such values as are being offered by CHARLES E. LYNCH. It doesn't require telling. Such things tell their own tale. Truly $20 Ulsters for $10! Truly $20 Suits for $10!

They are astonishing one and all. They are melting like snow in summer time. They are assuredly the grandest opportunity ever offered to the bargain hunters of Western Massachusetts to secure Fine Tailor-Made Clothing at less than cost to manufacture.

The Weaver.

I stood in the room of the weaver,
Then watching the shuttles fly,
And the colors as they blended,
Like a rainbow in the sky.
His eyes were fixed on the pattern,
As he wrought the figure fine,
So wonderful in its beauty,
So marvelous in design.

How earnestly he is looking,
He turns not to gaze away
From the figure he is weaving,
Or the shuttles in their play;
He knows if a thread be broken,
Or color be misplaced,
It would mar the costly fabric,
And could never be effaced.

I watched, and watched, nor grew weary,
And these thoughts came to my mind:
That we, all of us, are weavers,
And God has made the design;
Has drawn a beautiful pattern
For us to work by each day;
Is helping us with the shuttles,
Is guiding them in their play.

But there oftentimes come moments
When we tire, and listless stand;
Grow forgetful of the pattern,
And seek not the helping hand.
Only a moment we turn back,
Then cry out in grief and pain,
"Oh, Father! see the broken threads,
We cannot make them whole again."

When our weaving is all finished,
And our looms stand idly by;
When our work, its imperfection,
Is seen by the Master's eye,
May we hear these words, rejoicing:
"Though many threads are riven,
And mars and stains thy fabric bears,
For these, thou art forgiven."

THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER.

"And you're really going to be married?" said little Bess.

She stood by the pine packing-box which, ingeniously draped with pink paper muslin, and surrounded by a cheap looking-glass, formed Ione's toilet-table. In front of its somewhat dim reflection Ione herself was twisting up her coils of raven-black hair, trying first this effect, and then that, with critical eyes.

"In a white dress—with a veil?"

"Yes."

"And I am to be your maid of honor?"

Again Ione nodded.

The child's eyes sparkled. It was seldom that Ione awarded her words of praise, and they were proportionately precious in her sight.

"Oh, Ione," she murmured, timidly reaching up to put her lean, brown little arms around her sister's queenly neck. "I love you! I do love you so dearly, Ione!"

Ione and Bess Bainbridge were the only two left of all the large family with which old Bela Bainbridge had settled in Wild Rapids ten years ago. He had expected to hew a fortune out of these ore-charged mountains. Instead, he only succeeded in wasting life and health. His poor, overworked wife was the first to succumb; one by one the children followed, until only the eldest and youngest remained. The mortgaged land slipped through their fingers, and it was only through the tolerance of the distant mortgagee that the sisters were allowed to retain occupancy of the ruinous old cabin with its row of ragged currant bushes, and its one scrawny apple-tree, whose boughs all bent to the east like a crouching beggar.

Ione received some slender income as waitress in the San Viola railway station, and little Bess kept house in an erratic way, planted the onions, hoed the cabbage plants, and learned lessons that she recited to her sister in the evening after the last train had gone down. It was a dreary, monotonous sort of life, but now the break had come.

"Susy Moore says you're of a jealous disposition," observed Bess, gravely, as she watched Ione dress. "She says Milo Street will have a 'handful' in you. What does she mean, Ione?"

"She's a fool!" said Ione, scornfully; "and you're another one, Bess, to repeat such nonsense!"

"Ione," slowly spoke Bess, "you are very pretty with your hair that way."

"More nonsense!" laughed Ione.

Ione turned short around.

"What made you think of Eleanor Vogel just then?" she demanded.

"I don't know, except that Susy says Milo was sweet on Eleanor before he met you, and that she was disappointed. Oh, Ione, how a girl must feel that is—disappointed!"

Ione laughed.

"Little mites like you shouldn't talk of such things," said she.

But when she had gone down to her last day at the San Viola Hotel, Bess drew a long breath.

"I never had a secret from Ione before," said she, apparently addressing the old brindled cat coiled up in the cushioned rocker. "And I almost told her three times. How vexed Milo would have been."

For Bess had confided to the straight, handsome young foreman in the smelting mills. Ione's passionate longing after a certain variety of rose, the long stemmed, heavily scented blooms of which she had seen in the belts of the daintly dressed ladies who travelled up and down between Veda and Coronada, and took their lunches at the hotel.

"They call it 'La France,'" said she. "A great, big, round rose, with leaves like satin, and such a perfume! And Ione kept one for a whole week, in a glass of water, once. It was sweet to the very last."

"She shall have the rose," said Milo Street; "and thank you, Bess, for telling me of it. The rosebush shall stand in one of these grand, frippery flower-pots, in the south window of the house I've built for her. But of one thing I'm certain—it can't be pinker than her cheeks."

"It's a very pink rose," gravely remarked Bess.

It was only three days before the wedding, when Ione came home from Coronada, late in the afternoon. Bess ran out to meet her under the apple boughs now garlanded with blossoms.

"Did you bring my sash ribbon?" said she.

"There it is," said Ione, flinging a box toward her. But you won't wear it, Bess, not this time."

"Ione," for the child saw the red spots on her sister's cheek, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing, only if Milo really preferred that minx Eleanor Vogel to me, he might have found it out before."

"Ione!"

"He didn't know I was in Coronada today," went on Ione, in an excited way, "or perhaps he might have been more on his guard. But it is just as well that I should know how matters really stand."

"Do you really mean, Ione—"

"I mean simply this, Bess, that between me and Milo Street matters are over forever. There's the wedding dress—you may wear it when you're old enough—and I'm going upstairs now to put the rings and trinkets together and send them back to him by John Johnson, when he goes up Smelting Mill way."

Little Bess caught blindly at her sister's arm.

"Oh, Ione, speak to me! Tell me what it all means," she wailed.

"I have spoken to you. I have told you!" Ione breathed quick and fast; she took off Bess's detaining hand.

The child cried herself to sleep that night. Whether Ione waked or slept, Bess could not tell. She lay very quiet and made no sign. But she was paler than any ghost when she arose in the morning, and there was a light in her eyes that Bess vaguely feared, she knew not why.

"Ione!" she cried, after breakfast, "where are you going?"

"Down to the river to look at the cool tides go by. I want to be alone, somewhere, with the wind blowing on my face. Don't stare at me like that, child! What are you afraid of? I'm not a heroine of romance. I shall do no harm to myself. You needn't fear that."

"But, Ione, Milo was coming to-day."

"That's the very reason I'm going," said the girl. "If he wants company, let him go to Eleanor Vogel."

She laughed mirthlessly as she flitted down to the river shores, where a screen of pollard willows made a silver-green shadow on the waves, and it was scarcely ten minutes afterward that a muffled knock came to the kitchen door.

"No, Milo—but—"

"Then the opportunity's just right. Here's the La France rose, four magnificent blooms on it, and two buds, and I don't know which is the prettier. The buds, I think. She'll like this, won't she? Eh, little Bess?"

He stood exultantly over the superb bush of roses, in its yellow majolica pot; but little Bess's face was troubled and tearstained. Milo caught at her arm.

"Bess," he cried, "where is she? What has happened?"

Ione Bainbridge had been lingering where the turbid tides made a swirl past an old willow root, just beside a rude railed bridge; and while she stood there, a tall, slight figure toiled across, bending under the weight of a heavy satchel.

"Eleanor Vogel!" she cried, involuntarily.

"Yes!" defiantly uttered the woman. "It's I! Strange, isn't it, that I should meet you face to face. I'm going Vedaways, to get work in the big button factory they've started there. I saw Milo Street yesterday. He came to the store, in Coronada, where I've been working—the florist place, you know. My! how took aback he was to see me. Didn't know I was employed there, you see. All wrapped up in a plant he wanted to buy for you—some sort of a foreign-named rose. Never said to me: 'How d'ye do, Nell?' Never asked me how I was—or how the world treated me! It was all Ione, Ione, Ione! Well, I've no reason to suppose he ever really cared for me—but—but—somehow, I hoped—No matter, I'm wiser now. But I can't stay on here. Perhaps in a new place I'll forget the past. But since I've met you, Ione Bainbridge, I don't mind owning to you that you'll have a splendid fellow for a husband. Yes, even though you've won and I've lost! Good-bye!"

Ione stepped forward and clasped poor Eleanor's hand. Her eyes had softened—her voice took on the tone of a cooing dove. "Good-bye, Eleanor," she said, "And I wish you well!"

Up the white winding road under the pollard willows the toiling figure went its weary way, and vanished. Ione drew a long breath, and turned.

"Ione, child! What are you doing here?" exclaimed a cherry voice. "Come back to the house, and see what I've brought you!"

She let him wind his arm around her waist: she let her head droop trustingly on his shoulder. The demon of jealousy had gone out of her heart, forever.

"Look, Ione!" joyously cried little Bess. "The rose that Milo has brought to you! The rose that is to bloom in your sitting room window, up the hill."

"I bought it in Coronada yesterday," said Milo. "And who do you suppose was in the store? Poor little Eleanor Vogel, that used to be in the hotel. I didn't recognize her, until she told me her name."

"Poor Eleanor," softly whispered Ione. For she had won so much and Eleanor had lost it all.

"Don't you think, sweet, whispered the lover, "that you owe me a kiss for this?"

Little Bess ran out to the well, to draw a pitcher of cool water. She was only a child, but she had her inspirations at times.

"I almost hope," she said to herself, "that I shall never be in love. Because it's all sunshine to-day, and all shade to-morrow, and nobody can tell why. And if Ione was jealous of Eleanor Vogel yesterday, why isn't she jealous of her now? There's no accounting for these things."

A GOOD STORY OF INGALLS.

Senator Ingalls' meager endowment of flesh has been the occasion of a good many stories, one of the best of which was related the other night by another Kansas man at the West.

"You know how lean Ingalls is," he said. "Well, down in Atchison there is a doctor who is a great friend of the Senator. This doctor has been greatly annoyed by a newsboy who would come into his office very unceremoniously and pester him, trying to sell papers.

"One day, when Ingalls was in the office, the boy was heard coming up stairs and the doctor decided to put up a job on him. He rushed out an articulated skeleton, placed it in a chair by the desk, and then the two men withdrew to the back room.

"In rushed the boy, and without noticing what was at the desk came directly up to the skeleton.

When he looked up and saw it grinning at him he was nearly scared into convulsions, and bolted for the door yelling. The joke tickled the doctor, but Ingalls' conscience pricked him, and going to the window he looked out at the boy who was standing below crying. "'Come up stairs, my boy,' he said; "I'll buy one of your papers." But the newsie began to yell harder than ever, and between his sobs blubbered out:

HE COULD USE THEM.—"Depend upon it, children," said the benignant old gentleman who was addressing the Sunday school, "we were fashioned by a wiser power than ourselves. There was no mistake made in putting us together. If our hands were placed where our feet are and our feet where our hands are, how could we get along! It would be exceedingly awkward. I stretch my hand out this way. I move my fingers like this. Now, what is this an evidence of, children?"

There was no reply, and after waiting a moment the speaker answered the question himself. "It is an evidence of design. Don't forget that, children," he continued impressively. "It is an evidence of design. Suppose, for instance, my eyes, instead of having lids and lashes, had legs. Suppose my eyes had legs. How could I use them?"

"You could use them in running your eye over the congregation couldn't, you?" replied a deeply interested little boy near the door. —Chicago Tribune.

A New Year.

Our other years have slipped away, as slips the flower its sheath.
One more with hands held out we grasp a gift the Father sends,
And give Him thanks for length of days, for joy that comes with breath,
For home and books and happy work, for children and for friends.

All in the midnight and the frost we sped the old year out;
All in the dawnlight and the glow we bid the new year in!
The King is dead! Long live the King!—'tis aye the clamorous shout;
And ever 'tis with mirth and hope the new-born reigns begin.

What yet may wait of care or grief to-day we cannot tell.
Another year, another start, another chance to do
What lieth closest to our hand: God loves us, all is well.
Disdaining fear we greet the year, whose first white leaves are new.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Bazar.

THE KING OF CLAMS.

In our own times there are gigantic shells, their presence sometimes being disagreeably forced upon the finder. In the South Pacific, where the ocean is apparently cut up with small islands or reefs of coral, the tridacna, or king of clams, is found—a gigantic two-valved shell, with deep radiations or convolutions, that often weighs 500 pounds, the animal alone weighing 30 pounds.

These monsters are found imbedded in the coral rock, a singular frill of lightly colored flesh only appearing above the surface. This habit has been the cause of a number of accidents to natives as well as white men. The locality where they are found is frequented by collectors of marine curiosities, who send the shells, sea fans, and corals to America and Europe, where they are distributed to the curiosity dealers all over the world. In searching for shells the collectors wade along the shallow lagoons or reefs, followed by a flat-bottomed boat, into which they toss their various finds.

On one occasion an inexperienced man was hunting for shells without a boat, having merely a native net thrown over his shoulder. Seeing what he thought was a large sea anemone of beautiful tints, he struck it with his foot, and in an instant was thrown upon his face, screaming with agony. The seeming anemone was a giant shell that, startled at the sudden attack, had closed its huge valve and held the collector a prisoner as firmly as though he had been clasped by a vise; in fact the shells cut through skin and bone.

The unfortunate man was some distance from help, and as he had started at low tide the treacherous waters were rising. For an hour the victim underwent untold agonies of pain and apprehension, fearing that the tide would rise above his lips. Struggles were useless, and he heroically waited until a canoe came in sight, when he signaled the occupants, who after much difficulty released him, the animal having to be killed by severing the great muscles that held the shells together.

A number of such instances are on record, and large sharks have been caught by the shells in the same way. Some natives at the New Hebrides islands, seeing an unusual commotion some distance from shore, went out and found a 10-foot shark beating the water, hurling itself this way and that, as though held by some enemy. Approaching, they found that the big fish was held firmly by the tail, the lobe of which had touched the fleshy portion of the shell, and been caught.

To excavate one of these giants often requires the work of several men for a week, as the shell at times is deeply incased in the solid coral rock, which has to be cut away. One animal taken was served as a dinner to the crew of two vessels, affording a meal to fifty men. One species of these shells is very common, and is used as an ornament, while others serve as receptacles for holy water in cathedrals.

A fine specimen may be seen in the cathedral of Notre Dame in Montreal, and another in the church of St. Sulpice in Paris. The natives employ them as water vessels, and a circular piece of the white shell, highly polished and worn upon the forehead, is considered an insigma of rank.—Prof. E. C. Holder in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

ODD MIRROR SUPERSTITIONS.

This mistrust of the ghostly mirror is so odd and so far-spread that we meet with it in the folk-lore of every land. An old tradition warns us that the new moon, which brings us such good fortune when we look at it in the calm evening sky, carries a message of evil to those who see it first reflected in a looking-glass. For such unlucky mortals, it is said that the lunar virus distils slow poison and corroding care. The child who is suffered to see his own image in a mirror before he, or she, is a year old is marked out, it is asserted, for trouble and many disappointments.

And again, it is declared that the friends who glance at their reflections standing side by side are doomed to quick dissension. In Scandinavia, the Swedish girl who looks into her glass by candle-light is told that she risks the loss of her lover. One superstition in this connection, that seems to be almost universal, is that it is very unlucky for a bride to see herself in a mirror after her toilet is completed. If she be discreet, she will turn away from that fair picture which pleases her so well, and then draw on her glove, or have some tiny ribbon, flower, or jewel fastened to her gown, that the sour fates may be appeased, and evil turned away from her threshold.—Home Queen.

MOTHER WOODCOCK AND HER YOUNG.

The woodcock builds her nest among the dry heather in the woods, and there of course her eggs are hatched. The baby birds are helpless creatures, of no use to themselves till their bills grow hard and their legs and wings become strong. They live chiefly on worms and want beside a good deal of moisture. These things can only be had in swampy ground, and as the youngsters cannot go to the marshes the question is, how are they fed? It would be a wearisome job for the mother to fly to and fro with the large quantity of worms that her hungry infants need. She would have no time to get a meal for herself. Well, regularly every evening she actually carries her young in her feet from the woods to the marsh and brings them back again before daybreak to the shelter of the woods where they stay during the day. This habit was doubted for a long time and even denied, but it is now accepted as a well established fact.—New York Journal.

THE KENTUCKIAN'S CONSTITUTION.—It is not so very long ago since a successful candidate for Congress from Kentucky gave a new turn to the tradition concerning his native state. He was attending an afternoon tea. Absent-mindedly he took a cup of the innocuous beverage which had the honor of christening the occasion. He was about to take another when the voice of his wife stayed his hand.

"My dear," she said firmly, "you must not drink another drop of that. You will ruin your constitution."—From Kate Field's Washington.

LOCAL NOTICES.

The Electro-Thermal, Turko-Russian, and various medicated bath treatments for chronic diseases have just been introduced to this locality by Dr. Amerige, who is now fully equipped to give a full line of sanitarium treatments. This method of treatment has become very popular in the larger cities, and has received the strongest endorsement of the medical profession.

These treatments are particularly adapted to the more chronic diseases that resist ordinary methods of medical treatment, such as rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, muscular atrophy, nervous and spinal diseases, the diseases of woman, etc.

The treatments are pleasant, prompt in action and the effect permanent. There is no shock, no pain, no exposure of the person.

Dr. C. W. Amerige has just purchased of Dr. W. F. Howe of Potsdam, N. Y., the Howe Combined Electro-Thermal, Turko-Russian and Medicated Vapor Bath Apparatus which has been placed in many of the large city colleges, hospitals and sanitariums, and which is acknowledged by the profession to be the most scientific, valuable and practical apparatus upon the market.

Dr. Amerige is to be congratulated upon his enterprise in securing this valuable line of treatment, for which there is certainly an immense field of usefulness.

PALMER NEWS.

THREE RASCALS CAPTURED.

Two Have Been Wanted for Some Time, and Two Have Served Sentences.

While the men at the passenger station were working over a badly-used-up "drunk" who had been found on the New London Northern tracks about 1.30 Wednesday morning, a man came into the station and announced that in company with another he had broken into the state primary school, that the other fellow had been caught, and that he wished to give himself up and save trouble. He was questioned and finally locked up by Deputy Sheriff Studley, who then went to the school to learn more of the matter. His story was the first intimation the officers at the institution had that they had been burglarized, but an examination showed that an entrance had been made into the kitchen, though little or nothing was missing. The man who gave himself up was John Devine, who broke into the school in March, 1893, and his companion this time, as before, was Charles Frederick Thompson, who formerly worked for Mrs. E. N. Fay, and Officer Studley surmised that he would go to her barn for the balance of the night. Acting on this supposition he started down the New London Northern track on foot, and when near the round house nearly had a collision with the man he was looking for, as the night was intensely dark. Mr. Studley did not see Thompson until within about ten feet of him, and Thompson did not see the officer until he nabbed him. In court Wednesday morning Devine was questioned first, as being the most likely to tell a straight story. He stated that he and Thompson left last Friday for Boston, Thompson having $40 which he had earned by working at the school. They spent the money rapidly, and were soon on their way home via freight trains. Late Tuesday night they reached Palmer and went to the school premises, where they waited till about 1.30 in the morning and then entered the kitchen for something to eat. They were just getting to work when Devine thought he heard someone coming and hurriedly left. According to his story Thompson was always taking of cracking safes and stores and holding up men, alleging that he would as soon shoot a man as not, and promised to hold up the first one he met with money. He also talked much of holding up trains, and proposed that the two join fortunes and go into the business. Devine's heart was too tender, however, and he didn't like the idea of shedding blood. On Thompson when captured was found a 32 calibre revolver with one chamber empty. His talk of trains brought to mind the three attempts to wreck the trains on the New London Northern road just south of Palmer in November, 1893, and strengthened the suspicion held at that time that he was the guilty party. When accused of it he acknowledged he had a hand in the matter, and implicated James Lambert of Monson. He was arrested Wednesday night, and yesterday pleaded guilty to placing obstructions on the track. In the district court yesterday morning Thompson and Lambert were bound over to the superior court in $1000 bonds each for placing obstructions on the railroad track, and Thompson in $500 for breaking and entering. Devine's case was continued until this morning, when, on account of his mental condition and the influence which Thompson had over him, the charge was made simply larceny, and he was sent to Concord.

STATE PRIMARY SCHOOL TO BE CLOSED

After the End of This Year—In Its Place an Asylum for Epileptics.

For some time there have been rumors that the occupancy of the state primary school buildings by children would cease at a not far distant date, and now the report of the trustees of the state institutions assures the fact. In place of the children which have been cared for there, it has been suggested that the buildings be utilized for the asylum for epileptics, which is under contemplation, and there is little doubt but that will be their ultimate use.

This is because of the change in the policy of caring for the children, which are now boarded out in families, the board of the younger ones being paid, while the older ones, above ten years, work for their board. Then the trustees find that as a rule, by the time the little boarders reach the age when payment is withdrawn, they have so endeared themselves to their care-takers or so fitted themselves to family life that they either remain where they are or free homes are found for them. Where formerly there were between 400 and 500 children at the school, there are now only 127, against 209 at the beginning of the year. The population of the school is now made up mostly of young boys which have committed petty offenses, and are classed as "delinquents." These must be cared for somewhere, and the new location of the primary school will probably be on the ample grounds of the state at Westboro, where quarters will be provided for the overflowing numbers of the Lyman school.

Regarding the Monson institution, the trustees speak in the highest terms of the efficiency of the superintendent in the management of the school, and as well in the changes compelled by the diminution of the number of inmates, which involves the dismissal of teachers and of others employed. "Actuated by a single desire to serve the children's interests, he has neither shrunk from hard necessities nor abated his zeal in caring for the children who remain." The per capita cost of inmates was $4.20, a decrease of 21 cents on the year previous. The usual rate of board is $1.50 a week and clothing; rates varying from $1 to $2 a week are paid for the special cases recently boarded. On September 30 a total of 452 children over three years old were at board, and considerably over 1000 others who had formerly been in the school or at board were in free places under the supervision of the state.

The Palmer Savings Bank.

The incorporators of the Palmer Savings Bank held their annual meeting in the banking rooms Monday afternoon and made choice of these officers: President, H. G. Loomis; vice presidents, George Mooers, T. D. Potter, C. H. Hobbs; secretary, W. W. Leach; treasurer, H. W. McGregory; trustees, James B. Shaw, George Mooers, H. G. Loomis, T. D. Potter, H. P. Notwithstanding the peculiar state of affairs existing during the year of 1894—many being out of employment and others earning barely enough to live on—the bank's record is a good one. It received during the year 1988 deposits amounting to $191,-648.96, or an average of $96.40 for each deposit. It has paid out $174,886.46, in 1710 payments, leaving a gain in deposits of $5,-826.97, or a little over 5½ per cent, the average amount of each payment being $102.27. The bank has paid one dividend of 2½ per cent, and one of 2 per cent, or $39,064.47. The number of depositors is now 2893. During the year 32 mortgage loans have been made, 68 personal loans, three town loans and two other loans, aggregating $197,007.87. Some $76,000 of bonds have been purchased during the year, and the securities of the bank have a market value of $25,672 over the amount at which they stand on the books of the corporation.

Attempted Rape.

Mark A. Korff of Three Rivers was before the district court Monday on a charge of attempted rape. He pleaded guilty, and was bound over to the superior court in the sum of $300, bail being furnished. The charge was made by Miss Clara Odette, a French girl who lives in Monson. On the night before New Year's she went to visit her sister, who lives in Three Rivers, on the road to Ludlow. She arrived there in the evening, and not knowing where her sister lived, stopped at a store to inquire the way, Korff being in the store. When part way to her sister's Korff came into the road from the field, having gone across lots, and said he was going past the house and would show her the way. They had not gone far, however, when he knocked her down and attempted an assault. She struggled and screamed, and her assailant finally ran away, but not until she had pulled a ring from his finger, which she kept, and on the inside found a name engraved, this giving the only clue as to who her assailant was. But a peculiar thing is that the ring was not Korff's, but belonged to his sister. Korff denied all knowledge of the affair until shown the ring, then he wilted and pleaded guilty.

Rev. H. F. Moulton will go to-morrow to Tufts College for a few days, and will preach Sunday morning in the North Avenue church at Cambridge, in exchange with Rev. C. W. Biddle, D. D.

Rufus Flynt received to-day two additions to his stable of Shetlands, one a stallion, the smallest in the country, standing only 36½ inches high, and the other a brood mare standing only 38 inches.

The Palmer Business and Social Club gave a reception Wednesday evening to the wives and lady friends of the members, a large number of which gathered at the rooms and passed a pleasant evening.

The Western Massachusetts Universalist Minister's Meeting was held in the parlors of St. Paul's church Monday morning, when Rev. H. F. Moulton read a paper on "Prayer." The attendants had dinner at the Converse House.

The Ladies' Society of the Baptist church elected these officers yesterday afternoon: President, Mrs. C. E. Fuller; vice presidents, Mrs. Charles Prescott and Mrs. F. D. Thompson; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Fitch; treasurer, Mrs. Ella Washburn.

George Bowers, a freight brakeman on the New London Northern road and a new hand, fell from the top of a car at South Monson Thursday night of last week, and struck on his back, receiving several bruises. It is a wonder his back was not broken.

It has come to the notice of the Palmer Bicycle Club that a report has been circulated that pool playing is indulged in at the club rooms on Sunday, which the club wishes to deny. The members are permitted to visit the rooms on Sunday, but no games of any kind are allowed on that day.

Thaddeus G. Carew of Monson was before the district court this morning charged with drunkenness and cruelty to animals, the evidence in the latter matter being that in a fit of rage he struck his horse on the head with the edge of an ax, injuring the animal so badly that it will probably have to be killed. Both cases are continued until next Monday.

H. R. Heath found a pocketbook on the street Wednesday morning containing $690 in bills, and returned it to its owner, a well-known Palmer business man. Mr. Heath seems to have been born under a lucky star, as only a short time ago he found a sum of money on the street, for which he was liberally rewarded by the owner, to whom it was returned.

These officers of Hampden Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, were installed Monday evening: H. P., J. B. Shaw; K., C. F. Grosvenor; scribe, George Robinson; treasurer, F. A. Royce; secretary, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; C. H., Andrew Pinney; P. S., F. D. Barton; R. A. C., W. A. Barnes; M. 3d V., D. H. Brown; M. 2d V., E. C. Sexton; M. 1st V., G. A. Bills; chaplain, S. H. Hellyar.

These officers of Quaboag council of the Royal Arcanum were installed Tuesday evening by District Deputy Gay of Winchendon: Regent, C. E. Fuller; vice regent, C. A. LeGro; orator, A. E. Fitch; secretary, F. A. Royce; treasurer, H. N. Sedgwick; collector, F. W. Harrison; guide, F. N. Carpenter; chaplain, E. H. Rollins; sentry, F. E. Cady; warden, C. G. Shaw; past regent, J. H. Shaw.

A Providence, R. I., man who didn't want his name to get into the papers, was before the district court last Saturday for being drunk. He claimed to have taken only one drink, a glass of beer, after reaching Palmer, and to have been robbed of $40; but as it is known that he indulged in three straight whiskies at one place about as fast as they could be poured out, his story of the money loss is taken with a grain of allowance.

These officers of the Baptist Young People's Union were elected Monday evening: President, J. Arthur Wells; vice president, Fred Hollingsworth; treasurer, Ernest Marsh; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. A. Peck; recording secretary, Mrs. A. E. Fitch; chairman of membership committee, Miss Lena Warriner; devotional, A. E. Fitch; temperance and instruction, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst; missionary, Miss Hattie Warriner; floral, Miss Lillian Kempton.

A water pipe in the rooms of the Business and Social Club burst yesterday afternoon, and would have done serious damage had not some of the members been in the rooms at the time, as the break was a large one, letting out quantities of water. The trouble was caused by a flaw in the pipe. No particular damage was done, as the break occurred in the coat room, which has no carpet on the floor, and the water was shut off before it had damaged the stocks in the stores below.

At the annual meeting of the Congregational parish Monday evening these officers were elected: Clerk, O. P. Allen; collector and treasurer, F. B. Pope; prudential committee, J. B. Shaw, A. W. Thayer, G. H. Hastings; auditor, H. P. Holden. The appropriations amount to $3150. The parish voted to attempt to raise $1200 by subscription to wipe out a small debt which has been standing some time, and to make needed repairs. Mr. Pope resigned as collector on Tuesday, and another meeting is called for next Wednesday evening to elect his successor.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's Universalist church held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon and elected these officers: President, Mrs. W. A. Weld; vice president, Mrs. F. R. Gamwell; solicitor, Mrs. Annie Crance; collector, Mrs. Ellis Dodge; entertainment committee, Miss Brigham, Miss Elizabeth Wassum, Miss Carrie Fish; benevolent, Mrs. Maria Lawrence, Mrs. B. C. Sumner, Mrs. M. A. Smith, Mrs. Truman Griswold; floral, Miss Brigham, Mrs. W. P. French, Mrs. J. F. Holbrook, Mrs. D. S. Davis. The society has $109 in the treasury.

Some improvements have been made at the lockup in the basement of the bank block recently, among them the painting of the glass in the windows white, which prevents outsiders from seeing in, and yet giving all the light that is necessary. Fine meshed screens of heavy wire have also been placed in the windows, which will prevent the passing of anything to the prisoners by friends outside. Heretofore it has been possible for outsiders to throw things through the windows and across the corridor into the cells of friends, and the officers have frequently found stones, clubs, etc., in the possession of occupants of the cells in the morning.

As was expected, the water in the pipes of the Palmer Water company has gained a decided improvement in flavor over that which the company has been giving its patrons for the last three months or more, since the water is taken from the upper reservoir around the center one to the lower, and from that into the pipes. The lower reservoir is fed by springs, and the upper by the brook and an artesian well, which was drilled before the reservoir was made and flows directly into it. Two other wells were drilled but do not flow, although the water rises nearly to the surface, and the company talks of putting up windmills to pump pure water for them next summer during the dry season.

The Sunday school of St. Paul's Universalist church chose these officers last Sunday: Superintendent, W. H. Small; assistants, F. A. Royce, Joseph Page; treasurer, W. W. Leach; librarians, George Sumner, Miss Helen Robinson. The pianist and teachers will be appointed next Sunday. The reports showed the attendance and offerings to have increased over the previous year. The school has increasing "Educational" and "Birthday" funds, and money in the hands of the treasurer. A library fund is being raised for the purchase of new books. Each member of the school has had five cents given him, to be increased in four ways, and the amounts will be due next Easter Sunday.

John P. Miller, formerly a fireman on the Boston and Albany road, died at Oneonta, N. Y., last November, but his friends in this section only heard of it last week. Miller married a Miss Loftus of Thorndike, but they did not live happily together, she suspecting an undue fondness on his part for his half sister. After moving to Worcester the couple separated, and finally Miller and the sister cleared out about two years ago. Nothing more was heard from them until a short time ago Mrs. Miller saw a notice of her husband's death in a paper, and correspondence developed the fact that he has been living at Oneonta with a young woman whom he claimed to be his wife, whose description corresponds exactly with that of the half sister.

The second entertainment in the high school course will be given next Friday evening in the Congregational church, when Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., pastor of the 23d street Baptist church, New York city, will give his popular lecture on "Backbone." Mr. Dixon will amuse, entertain and instruct his audience. Several who have heard both Mr. Dixon and Russell H. Conwell, who is so popular in Palmer, declare their preference for Thomas Dixon. The Lawrence Daily American says: "Never has a speaker appeared in our city who possesses such a magnetic power over his hearers. Mr. Dixon is a born orator and combines in a rare degree the powers of lecturer, actor, and elocutionist." Single reserved seat 50 cents, general admission 35 cents. The reserved seat tickets will go on sale at LeGro & Lynde's drug store Monday at 9 o'clock.

Conductor Camp was made the victim a few days ago of too implicit confidence in man's veracity. A couple came to Palmer from Springfield with him on the evening train, paying their fare. Some time after Mr. Camp had reached his home the man called and stated that he was a clergyman and had been disappointed in not receiving a registered letter which he had expected to find at the post office here containing money, and had not enough money to pay the fare of himself and companion to Worcester. He requested a loan, promising to return the money next day, and Mr. Camp handed him $2, the fare to Worcester for two people being $1.80. The man looked at it a moment, and remarking that 20 cents was a pretty narrow margin on which to get supper for two, requested, if Mr. Camp could conveniently, that he would let him have another dollar. Mr. Camp could and did, and though this was nearly two weeks ago Mr. Camp is still looking for that money.

A new phase of the Elmer-Taylor trouble was assumed this week, when Mr. Elmer brought suit against Newell Taylor and H. D. Converse, against Taylor for harboring a minor child, and against Mr. Converse to recover wages paid a minor child. Taylor, it will be remembered, married Mrs. Elmer after her husband had secured a divorce, Elmer claiming that the ceremony was performed a few days before it was lawful for her to marry, as a certain time must elapse after the granting of a decree before either party may marry again. A son, Clifton Elmer, came to Palmer after his mother had been here some time, and was employed by H. D. Converse. Elmer finally found where his son was and compelled him to go with him, but the boy soon returned and again went to work for Mr. Converse. Then Elmer said that he would collect the wages paid his son, as he was under age. He has now attempted to make his threat good by the suit brought this week to compel the payment of his son's wages to him.

Patrick Grady started from Springfield Tuesday night on Conductor Camp's train, en route to Stafford to attend a funeral. In order to drown his grief he drank three glasses of beer before leaving the city, then got a pint of whisky and finished that before reaching Palmer. His sorrows were sufficiently flooded for all practical purposes; at any rate he missed the train to Stafford, and then concluded to walk to that place. When next seen it was about 1.30 Wednesday morning, and Grady was going to bed on the track in the New London Northern yard, having removed the most of his clothing and prepared to lie down between the rails and pull the mantle of night around him. He was taken to the passenger station, where it was found that he had fallen and struck his nose on a rail, cutting a bad gash in that member and also getting a pair of "beautiful black eyes." He was locked up until morning, when his relatives were notified and promised to pay his fine, asking the officer to ship him to Stafford on the afternoon train, but to keep him under surveillance until the train started, which was done.

Andrew Ramsden, who has been in the employ of the company at the No. 2 mill spinning room, will also resign this week.

Sudden Death of Mrs. M. M. Thomas.

The announcement of the death of Mrs. M. M. Thomas, on Wednesday, was a terrible surprise to the community, from the fact that she had been seen about town only a few days before and seemed to be enjoying her usual good health, and as she had not been reported ill it was some time before the report could be credited as true. Mrs. Thomas had been suffering from poor health for some time, and had been under medical care for some months without much improvement, and as her condition was such that death was only a question of time it was finally decided to perform an operation, and on Sunday Dr. Carpenter of New York performed the operation, assisted by Dr. Desmarais of Three Rivers and Dr. Smith of Bondsville. She did not recover from its effects, and died at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mrs. Thomas was well known in town, and was married about six years ago. Those who had the pleasure of her acquaintance speak of her in the highest terms. In church matters she was much interested, being a member of the Christian Endeavor society, and treasurer of the King's Daughters; she was also a member of the Woman's Relief Corps. She had a large circle of friends, who deeply sympathize with her husband and mother in the loss of a true, loving wife, daughter and friend. The funeral will be held from her late home to-morrow at 2. p. m.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

Plans are reported to be under way, and they seem very plausible, for the destruction of the present front of the state house,—that is, of the Bulfinch part, and for the building of a new structure which shall harmonize completely with the present extension. It is proposed to have the work done under the same commissioners and the same architect, and the impetus which has been given by the erection of the magnificent extension makes the plan far more likely to succeed than it would have been if presented boldly to the Legislature half a dozen years ago.

It is to be noticed that more of the large cotton mills of Massachusetts want to do business in any part of the United States. Last year the Dwight mills of Chicopee procured the necessary legislation, and now petitions are presented by the Booth and Merrimac mills of Lowell for the same privilege. Augustus Lowell, head of the Lowell Institution of Boston, is president of both the corporations, and Arthur T. Lyman, one of the best known of Boston's citizens, is one of the directors of each. If this movement should extend to other manufacturing corporations, its effect upon New England industry would be immense.

A note of warning is sounded by the state board of education in their report, which is issued this week, that the people must be up and awake if the state is to maintain her supremacy in educational matters. They say: "The public schools of Massachusetts are not perfect,—far from it. But they have their merits and their friends, who will vigorously defend them and give the reasons whereof they affirm. But it is also true that they are subjected to sharp criticism, some of which is deserved, and acknowledged to be so,—a fact which ought long since to have led to greater and better efforts for the removal of the causes of such criticism. Other criticism is neither just nor intelligently made."

Much space is given to the normal school system, and it appears that the board adopted an order last September not to receive pupils into the normal school who have not received a high school education or its equivalent. "It is believed that the normal schools will be able to raise the tone of scholarship among the public school teachers, to give their graduates a deeper insight into the principles and approved methods of correct teaching, and an ability to apply their knowledge and skill with greater wisdom and larger success."

Some of the leading statistics of Secretary Hill are very interesting. There has been a gain of 323 public schools in the year (almost a new one every day) making a total of 7833; a gain of 10,286 in pupils of school age, making 400,325 in all; a gain of $268 in the average attendance, making a total of 295,-069; with 91 as the percentage of attendance. There are 1009 men teachers and 10,705 women. Of all these 11,714 teachers, 3575 have graduated from normal schools, a gain of 102. The average monthly wages of the men teachers were $129.41, a decrease of $11.32, and the average monthly wages of the women teachers were $47.91, a decrease of only 22 cents a month, showing that the pinch of the hard times came almost wholly on the men. There are 255 high schools in the state, a gain of eight. They have 30,450 pupils in the state, and their principals are paid $335,044 in salaries. The total cost of the public schools, including supervision, supplies, new buildings and repairs, was $9,968,227, or $24.90 for every child in the state between 5 and 15 years. There are 359 private schools (mostly parochial) with 48,319 pupils, and the estimated cost of the tuition paid by their parents for them was $678,522. The tendency toward parochial schools does not seem to have reached its climax yet.

A great many petitions are being presented from farmers all over the state who represent that the allowance of one-half of the value of their tuberculous cattle is not sufficient. They want the state to pay the full value of the cattle which are killed, but it is doubtful whether they will be able to secure so much. It would lead at once to an over-valuation of stock on the part of men who were not scrupulously honest.

Continued occupancy of the state house extension only emphasizes its undesirable features, the bad planning, the waste and extravagance which have marked its construction, and its lack of fitness to be a working place. One of the heads of departments has said to me this week that he should like to see the whole building a heap of rubbish, so that construction could be begun wholly anew and avoid the mistakes which have been made. Plans are plenty for altering and preserving the old front, and one idea with much merit is that it be made a building for the Legislature and executive departments, and that the extension be reserved for the other departments, boards and commissions which are in the rooms now or could speedily fill them.

Last fall the Republican state committee, in ordering when the caucuses should be held for the choice of delegates to the state, congressional, councilor, county, senatorial and representative conventions, decided that they must be upon the same night. Stout objection was made to this, and some members of the Legislature who helped to pass the bill went to the committee to protest against it, but without effect. The trouble was that it put altogether too much work upon one evening, and made log-rolling schemes possible when the fate of so many candidates was in doubt. But it is proposed to settle the matter by law, and a bill has been introduced by Mr. J. B. Newhall of Lynn, who was in charge of the bill last year, to provide that the first group of three caucuses mentioned above shall not be held on the same evening as the other three.

Labor measures begin to come in, and one of the latest is to limit the hours of labor in manufacturing and mechanical establishments so that they shall not be more than 54 hours in a week, and shall not be more than six on Saturday. The object mentioned in the title of the bill is to provide for a Saturday half holiday. LANDON.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 18, 1895.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Dr. and Mrs. P. W. Soule spent Sunday in Worcester.

Frank A. Bills has an electric light in front of his store.

William Underwood and Alfred Norcross have the measles.

Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps meets next Wednesday evening.

Mrs. William A. Needham entertained the whist club this afternoon.

John Murphy of Monson, aged about 38, died at Bridgewater this week.

Mrs. Susan E. Thrall is spending the week in Hartford and Windsor Locks.

The Dorcas Society will meet next Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Ralph Clifford.

Miss Nellie Taft of New York is spending a few days with Rev. and Mrs. James Tufts.

Mrs. Lillian Chapin has been in Westfield a part of this week with her aunt, who is sick.

Herbert C. Norcross expects to move into the north store in Bacon's block the last of next week.

William N. Flynt has added to his stock of Dutch Belted cattle a fine animal purchased at Fairfield, Ct.

Miss Edith L. Wood, who had been spending several days in Springfield, returned Tuesday evening.

Rev. William H. Marble will take for his subject next Sunday morning, "Why Should I Be a Christian?"

Mrs. G. H. Perkins and son of Westfield, who have been guests at Benjamin A. Day's, have returned home.

Mrs. Fred W. Ellis gives a "fagot" party at her home at South Monson to-morrow afternoon from 4 to 7.

Arthur D. Norcross' string of cochins are at the Northamton poultry show this week. They are very fine birds.

Willie, son of William Drain, was badly scalded on his legs this morning by tipping over a pan of boiling water.

W. N. Flynt & Son have a beautiful line of Hamburg edgings and cotton trimmings, to which they invite inspection.

Lee Blanchard, Cady Blanchard and James B. Tupper went fox hunting Wednesday, and brought in one fine specimen.

Rev. and Mrs. James Tufts have visited friends in Brookfield this week, and attended a meeting of the Farmers' Club in Warren Wednesday.

Mrs. Calvin Keep of New Haven, who has been in town for some time, spent last week with Mrs. David Anderson and Mrs. Harrison C. Day.

The Junior Epworth League of the Methodist church will give a social next Friday evening. There will be a supper from 6 to 8, followed by an entertainment.

As the G. A. R. posts in other places have taken in as associate members citizens who did not serve in the war, it is suggested that Marcus Keep post might do likewise.

William Glynn, who is well known in Monson, writes from Crescent City, Florida, that his oranges are a total loss, and that he will probably return to Boston very soon.

The people have responded so generously to the appeal for contributions for the Nebraska sufferers that Mrs. Henry E. Bugbee has packed and sent three barrels of clothing.

Rev. Thomas O'Keefe has had a telephone placed in his residence, G. H. Newton one in his office and James Pendergast one in his market, all being connected with the exchange in Flynt's store.

Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps is to have its sale, supper and entertainment Friday evening, February 8th, the sale and entertainment to be in Memorial Hall, and the supper in Grand Army Hall.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Methodist church will hold its regular business meeting next Monday evening, when the question of changing two articles in the constitution, in regard to the pledge, will be discussed.

Our former townswoman, Mrs. M. J. Seymour of Springfield, attends the Washington convention of The Daughters of the Revolution as a delegate. How many Monson ladies are eligible for membership in that order?

The vesper service at the Congregational church Sunday evening is spoken of as having been one of rare solemnity and worshipfulness. George E. Brown of Worcester presided at the organ, and Mr. Hatch delivered a brief but intensely interesting sermon.

Ola F., wife of Frank Breard of Orange, and daughter of Charles Hathaway of this town, died Monday after a long illness, and the body was brought here yesterday for burial. There was a short service at the cemetery, Rev. Harry Blackford officiating.

David Anderson at North Monson has been much annoyed by the skaters on the pond, who have pulled down his fences and made bonfires of them, and the chances are that there will be trouble if it is continued. Fun is one thing, utter disregard for property rights is another.

The meeting at the Congregational church this week have been well attended. The one Wednesday evening is spoken of as being especially interesting. Rev. Hollis Jordan will give a Bible reading at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The meetings will be continued next week.

The Young Ladies' Working Club of the Congregational church met with Miss Hattie F. Cushman Tuesday afternoon, and after appropriating the money which is on deposit, disbanded. The sum of $50 is to be used for painting and papering the church parlors, and $30 for benevolent purposes.

The Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church served an excellent supper at their sociable last Friday evening. A farce was given by the young people, entitled "Never Say Die," a piano duet by Misses Chapin and Rood, a duet by Misses Haouck and Thayer, and several charades comprised the entertainment, which was very good.

The topic for the Young People's meeting at the Universaliat church Sunday evening is "Preparation for Service," Eph. 6: 10-18. The topic for the Christian Endeavor meeting Sunday evening is "A Christian's Problems and Perplexities," 1 Kings iv: 29-24, Luke xi: 31, ii: 46-47. Charles A. Bradway will lead at the Methodist church.

William N. Flynt had a narrow escape from injury the first part of the week. He was riding to the quarry when his horse became frightened by the rattling of dinner pails and tools in a wagon ahead, and suddenly stopped and then backed into the ditch. Mr. Flynt was thrown from the carriage, but with his usual good luck was not hurt in the least.

Prof. E. L. Morris of Amherst, whose home is in Monson, has arranged to personally conduct a party through Canada to Alaska, the Pacific Northwest, the Yellowstone National Park and the cities of Tacoma, Portland and Minneapolis, next summer, the trip to occupy fifty-five days from June 24th or July 1st, starting from Boston, and will be pleased to give information to all who wish.

This evening will close the week of song at the Methodist church, and there will be a public exhibition in the audience room, beginning at 8 o'clock. The congregation, the choir and the children will sing, illustrating the principles which Prof. Beuchler has been teaching through the week. The class in voice lessons will meet at 7 o'clock. The class numbers 25, and the children's class 17; the attendance at the public hour each evening has been good.

These officers of Mount Ella lodge of the A. O. U. W. were installed Tuesday evening: Past master workman, Hiram A. Felton; master workman, Fisk G. Rogers; foreman, Alexander Murphy; overseer, John Lyon, Jr.; recorder, Frank J. Entwistle; receiver, William Pease; financier, Arthur Bennett; inside watchman, Joseph D. Dewar. After the installation the members of the lodge and their guests had a banquet. The organization is in a flourishing condition, already having a membership of 30, with new members constantly coming in.

The pupils of F. C. Croy enact the drama, "Boys of '77, or One Hundred Years Ago," and the farce, "Seeing the Elephant," this evening in Memorial Hall, with the following cast of characters. Drama:

Obed Sterling	George W. Brown
Mrs. Obed Sterling	Miss Bertha Thompson
Ephraim Sterling	Fred L. Mooers

To-morrow evening Prof. Croy's Hampden pupils will give the drama, "Above the Clouds," and the same farce which will be given this evening.

Academy Notes.

Nearly fifty persons visited the Academy yesterday, which was observed as Public Day.

The date of the concert to be given in the interest of the senior class by the Wesleyan Glee and Mandolin Clubs, is Friday, Feb. 1st, in Memorial Hall. These clubs made their first appearance here last season, and were very favorably received.

The Rev. C. A. Dinsmore of Willimantic, Ct., is to give the address before the Academy on the day of prayer for schools and colleges, Thursday, Jan. 31. It will be remembered that Mr. Dinsmore was expected to speak on this occasion last year, but was unable to keep his appointment.

BRIMFIELD.

Brimfield people have harvested their annual supply of ice.

Miss Minnie I. Kernan has resigned her position as teacher of the Center school, and has secured a position in the Mittineague school. The position left by her in the Center school is now filled by J. Wilson Brown.

WALES.

Miss Alice F. Pepper has gone to Brookfield.

W. I. Whitlock has concluded not to build his blacksmith shop, but has hired a shop in Gardner, where he expects to move soon

H. A. McFarland and wife were summoned to Springfield last Saturday to attend the funeral of their nephew, Dr. F. W. Buffington.

James George has leased of W. Royce the building formerly used for a wool and store house near the old Wales mill, and is fitting it up for a blacksmith shop.

N. P. O'Rourke was struck by a bag of wool which fell from the fourth story and injured his knee very badly. He has been confined to his room, and his limb is in a bad condition.

BELCHERTOWN.

Mrs. Ella House has gone to Boston on a brief visit.

The young men of the town will give a dance at the Belcher House this evening.

Mrs. William Chamberlain is very ill, and it is feared that on account of her advanced age she may not recover.

The sewing circle of the Congregational church will meet this afternoon, and will hold a sociable and supper this evening.

George Bardwell, a farmer, became violently insane a few days ago and was taken to Northampton asylum for treatment.

Mr. Hicks has been engaged as manager of the Belchertown Creamery for another year, and J. A. Lyon will be his assistant.

Miss Nellie Rice, organist at the Congregational church, and Miss Mary Temple attended the dedication of the new church at South Hadley.

Mrs. Frank E. Bridgman, 44, died Monday at her home on Main street after a long and severe illness. She was the only daughter of the late B. B. Snow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gould have been called to their daughter's home in Hackensack, N. J., her husband having shot himself through the head for some cause unknown.

WEST WARREN.

Mr. Verrell, overseer of the weave room at No. 4, is going away.

Mr. Alphonze Jollie and Miss Maude spent last Sunday with friends in Southbridge.

The Jaques and Jollie families leave No. 4 next week for some better place, so they say.

Paul O'Niel, formerly of this place, died at Lowell last week, aged 43; burial at Warren.

Several employes of the cotton mills are going to West Brookfield to work in the corset shop there.

There are reports of a change to be made in the mills, moving the weave room to one of the mills at the village.

The Fitzpatrick family of bell ringers will give an entertainment this evening for the benefit of St. Thomas's church.

Mrs. Rachael Bond of Ware, mother of Mrs. Henry Beaman, and grandmother of Mrs. Amory Crossman, died at the home of Miss Sophia Bond in Warren last Friday, at the age of 75. Her funeral took place Sunday, Rev. Mr. Dockham of the West Warren M. E. church officiating.

WILBRAHAM.

Some of the ladies of this place have sent clothing to the Nebraska sufferers and which been gratefully acknowledged.

An informal reception was given last Friday evening by the faculty in honor of Miss C. Hall, formerly bookkeeper at the Academy.

A reception was given to the students of the Academy in Fisk Hall Monday evening under the auspices of the faculty, assisted by the Philo and Pieria societies. Musical selections were given by some of the students, and the Glee Club sang very acceptably.

The Wesleyan Academy Athletic Association has elected the following officers: President, Roy Jones; vice president, Andrew Deckman; secretary and treasurer, Roy E. Clark; baseball manager, F. G. Clark; assistant manager, F. J. Stokein; track athletic manager, C. E. Soule; assistant manager, F. P. Webber.

Following are the class officers at the Academy for the winter term: Senior class—President, Allen Hartwell; vice president, Miss Millie Sheldon; treasurer, O. W. Comstock; secretary, Miss Emily Haigh; junior class—President, Roy E. Clark; vice president, Miss Lavina Rose; treasurer, Charles E. Soule; secretary, Miss Lizzie D. The Eating of clothes—the rotting and ruining of them—won't show right away. Your new washing powder may be dangerous, but you'll have to wait a little for its results. But it is doing its work. After a while, your clothes go to pieces, all at once. Now isn't it better not to run any risk? Isn't it better to trust to an article like Pearline, which has been tried, tested, proved?

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 383 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

"CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid," thus making them strong, durable and waterproof. When soiled they can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a wet cloth. Ex-Sheriff of Ulster County.

Hon. Davis Winne Owes His Health To Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

SHANDAKEN, N. Y.—One of the most prominent men in Ulster County is the Hon. Davis Winne, of this town. His reputation is not confined alone to this county, where he held the office of Sheriff for three years, he was also this district's representative in the New York State Legislature. For years Mr. Winne has been suffering from a complicated case of kidney and bladder trouble and congestion of the liver. Upon the advice of his friends he decided to try Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. He was not disappointed, for in a short while after he began its use, he was in better health than he had been in years before.

In speaking of Favorite Remedy, Mr. Winne said: "It has done more for me than all the physicians I ever employed, and I most unhesitatingly recommend it to any one suffering from kidney, liver or urinary troubles, for it will cure them.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the acknowledged specific for all diseases arising from acidity of the blood, and will cure dyspepsia, rheumatism, scrofula, eczema, kidney, liver and urinary troubles.

You can not afford to trifle with health and life. Putting off treatment when dangerous symptoms exist is slow suicide. Accept the aid of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it has restored thousands to health and strength.

Afflicted With Rheumatism.

Mr. George A. Mills of Lebanon, Conn., says: "I was afflicted with rheumatism in my back all last winter. It was so severe at times that I could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. I tried different remedies without receiving any relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days, according to directions, my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. I have since recommended it to others and know they have been benefited by its use.

Carlton Cornwell, foreman of the Gazette, Middletown, N. J., believes that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy should be in every home. He used it for a cold and it affected a speedy cure. He says: "It is indeed a grand remedy; I can recommend it to all. I have also seen it used for whooping cough, with the best results." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of 18 East 15th St., New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy from druggist H. H. Lane, Peekskill, N. Y. Such good results followed its use that he sent back to Mr. Lane for two bottles more of the same remedy. Those who give this medicine a trial are seldom satisfied with any other when again in need of such a preparation. It is unequalled for coughs and colds.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS MATTERS.

Adin S. Minard, tax collector for the town of Wolcott for 1890, '92 and '93, is missing and short $1200 in his accounts.

A paying vein of copper has been found at Warehouse Point, Ct., in a waste piece of ground from which stone was formerly quarried.

Forty-two of 60 weavers of the Merino mills at Providence, R. I., went on a strike Tuesday because of a refused advance of 12 per cent in wages.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hickok of Amherst, widow of Laurens P. Hickok, one of the most learned of American philosophers, died Sunday at the age of 90.

A farmer near Montville, Ind., is now getting $100 a day income from a farm which he reluctantly purchased at $150 an acre. An oil strike is the cause.

There was a big fire at Great Barrington last Friday, when the Berkshire block, formerly the Berkshire House, was damaged to the extent of $25,000.

The grain elevator and feed mill of William Hodge & Co. at Williamsville was burned Monday night, the loss being $23,000. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

The Young Men's Christian Association of New York is attempting to raise $17,150 for the School for Christian Workers in Springfield, which is in need of funds.

Mrs. Mary Reynolds Schauffler, a venerable missionary whose birthplace was Longmeadow, died last week at the home of her son in New Rochelle, N. Y., at the age of 93.

Commander-in-chief Lawler of the Grand Army is making arrangements to visit every department encampment held in the United States this year, a thing never before attempted by a commander.

By the will of the late Richard Sugden of Spencer the public library is given the Sugden block and a dwelling house in Spencer, the income to be used in maintaining the library and reading room.

A two-masted schooner went ashore at Ragged Point, near Brenton's reef, Sunday morning, but the crew was saved by the men at the life-saving station, being brought ashore by the breeches bouy.

One of the trainers in the winter quarters of the Barnum show at Bridgeport, Ct., was attacked by a large Bengal tiger Monday while sweeping out the cage, and severely scratched, though he managed to escape without being fatally hurt.

Two little boys, five and six years old, left their home in Springfield Tuesday morning to go sliding, and not returning when expected search revealed their bodies at the bottom of the Watershops canal, into which they had accidentally slipped.

Secretary of War Lamont has notified the Connecticut state commissioners that the new $300,000 iron bridge across the Connecticut between Hartford and East Hartford must have a draw 100 feet wide, and the bridge must be completed by October 1st, 1895.

Some miscreant threw vitriol in the face of Frank B. Steele of Waterbury, Ct., editor of the Bridgeport Sunday Herald, last Friday evening, and escaped without leaving a clue as to his identity. Steele's face was badly burned, but his eyes were not hurt.

The St. Maria home for working girls at Providence, R. I., the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Banigan, was dedicated Tuesday morning. Mr. Banigan has also given $50,000 to endow the chair of political economy in the Catholic University of Washington.

About 800 of the steel workers in the Carnegie plant at Homestead, Pa., attended a meeting Sunday for the purpose of forming a labor organization, and Tuesday over 100 of them were dismissed. It is expected that all will be discharged who attended the meeting.

One of the buildings of the gas house at Malden, 20 by 75 feet and 25 feet high, was brown to pieces at midnight Tuesday, and the wreckage and gas caught fire, making a brilliant blaze for a time. No lives were lost, though two employes were badly hurt.

The estate of the late B. F. Butler, which owns the post buildings and 820,000 acres of land at Fort Union, N. M., has decided to give this free to consumptives, who are to be charged nothing for shelter, water or firewood, of which there is an abundance within a mile.

An engine and three freight cars on the New York and New England road plunged into an open draw at South Boston Tuesday night about 11.30, and the engineer is believed to have been drowned. No attention was paid to the danger signals by the engineer.

Springfield is to have another bank, the organization to be known as the Hampden trust company. It will be a state organization, backed by the Massachusetts Mutual Insurance Company. Col. H. M. Phillips, state treasurer, is interested in the concern. Springfield already has ten national banks, three savings banks and a trust company.

A coal barge stranded on Short Beach early Monday morning, but five men aboard managed to get to the top of the cabin, where they clung until afternoon before the crew from the life-saving station could reach them on account of the storm, and then two of the poor fellows dropped off only a few minutes before their comrades were rescued.

Two Italians at Stamford, Ct., engaged in blasting on the Consolidated road Tuesday, were trying to make a stick of dynamite go into a hole which was too small, and one held a piece of steel on the explosive while the other tried to drive it in with a hammer. The one with the hammer was brown high in the air and instantly killed, while the other was fatally injured.

Springfield is supposed to be the home of a manufacturer of "short" bank bills, the process being to take ten dollar bills of the same series and denomination, and after cutting them in two, the place of cutting being varied in each, to stick them together again in such a way as to make eleven bills out of the original ten. That there is an operator in that city seems almost certain, but he is exceedingly wary, and declines to be caught.

There was a terrible catastrophe at Butte, Montana, late Tuesday night, resulting in the death of about 75 persons. A fire broke out in the center of the city, and after the firemen had got to work a quantity of powder exploded, killing many of the firemen and some of the spectators. The onlookers hastened to the assistance of the wounded, when a second explosion occurred, killing many of the rescuers and spectators. In all there were three explosions, s aggregating three carloads of powder. The scene was a horrible one, arms, legs and fragments of flesh covering the ground for blocks around. The property loss will be over $1,000,000. The complete list of the fatalities cannot be ascertained for days, and the exact number of lives lost may never be fully known.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WHAT THEY ALL SAY.

Beautiful Women Give Wonderful Information Concerning Female Beauty. We Do Not Think It Will Take Women Long to Act Upon This Idea.

The poet and philosopher, Ralph Waldo Emerson, says:

"If eyes were made for seeing,
Then beauty is its own excuse for being."

Beauty of feature and elegance of form have ever been the desire of the feminine mind. And it is a perfectly laudable and natural ambition. Women are born to sway the hearts and minds of men as much by their beauty and attractiveness, as by the subtler charms of goodness and purity.

And yet, how few women attain the beauty which should be theirs, and in those few who are beautiful, how quickly their beauty fades! This is wrong. Women are naturally beautiful—at least of pleasing and attractive appearance—and in nearly all the cases where women lack these physical charms, the fault is their own.

Good looks and beautiful forms are entirely dependent upon good health. One must have strong nerves and pure blood to be beautiful. Failing to have these, is to fail of good looks and fine figure, and the woman whose health becomes broken, even in the slightest degree, will see her beauty gradually fade.

The moment women realize this, that moment will they understand that physical beauty is a matter within their own control. And just how it is so, is told by Mrs. Frances Lytle, of 2 Hunter Ave., Rochester, N. Y.

"I was very pale and delicate," she says, "and had no color, and had female weakness with leucorrœa, and suffered great pain at my periods. I am now well, thanks to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. My face is plump and my cheeks red, and my complexion pure. When I began the use of this remedy I only weighed 81 pounds, and now I weigh 115 pounds and am still gaining. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a wonderful medicine. I have not had any trouble since I began taking it."

Miss Emma Marlatt of Oxford, N. J., says: "I have been a sufferer for ten years, and the victim of a large tumor weighing twenty pounds, which I had removed, and I suffered untold agony for many months after.

"I tried the skill of many physicians, all of whom utterly failed to give me any relief.

"I then used the wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and after using a few bottles was entirely cured.

"To those who have been suffering from various diseases, and have failed to find any relief, I am, to-day, a living testimony and witness to the wonderful and marvelous curative powers of this great medicine. To persons suffering from various diseases, I earnestly recommend the use of this remedy if they would be cured. For further information I will willingly, cheerfully, and promptly respond."

"About seven years ago I began to feel very uncomfortable after eating, so much so that I found it impossible to keep the lightest food on my stomach. I grew worse for three months, so I was obliged to give up work and go to the hospital.

"I tried many remedies and doctors, but they did me no good. A friend advised me to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"I began using it, and after a week felt much better. When I had taken four bottles the weakness in my stomach was all gone, and I could eat anything without distress, while a short time before I found it impossible for weeks at a time to even drink a glass of milk and keep it in my stomach.

"I was unable to wear anything but a loose dress, and I did not go out of the house for months at a time. I am now cured of my troubles, and am well and strong. My cure is wonderful. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has done what the hospitals, doctors and other medicines could not do.

"It is a splendid medicine, and I urge every suffering person to use it. I love to think of the good it is doing, and wish everyone who is not perfectly well would take it."

"For a long time I was troubled with nervousness and violent headaches. I would lie awake nearly all night, and was in constant misery. Previous to this, my complexion was a very healthy color, but now it became very bad.

"I took three bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and was entirely cured. My nervousness and headaches left me, my good complexion returned, and I slept perfectly. I can safely say to everybody who is suffering, just give it a trial, and you will be cured. I hope my statement will find relief for many people who do not know the benefit of such a wonderful medicine."

It is thus evident that women can get well—can secure perfect health, strong nerves and pure blood by using the great vital restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. If, therefore, women will maintain their health and strength by this remarkable medicine, we will guarantee them beauty of face and form, the bright eyes, pink cheeks and clear complexion of youth, and the rounded form, graceful lines and elastic step of vigorous physical development.

This remedy can be used without hesitation by all, as it is purely vegetable and is endorsed and prescribed by physicians; indeed it is the prescription and discovery of our most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who can be consulted at any time, without charge, personally or by letter.

Sailing On.

We sail toward evening's lonely star,
That trembles in the tender blue;
One single cloud, a dusky bar
Burnt with dull carmine through and through,
Slow smouldering in the summer sky,
Lies low along the fading west:
How sweet to watch its splendors die,
Wave-cradled thus, and wind-caressed!

The soft breeze freshens: leaps the spray
To kiss our cheeks with sudden cheer;
Upon the dark edge of the bay
Lighthouses kindle far and near,
And through the warm deeps of the sky
Steal faint star-clusters, while we rest
In deep refreshment, thou and I,
Wave-cradled thus, and wind caressed.

How like a dream are earth and heaven,
Star-beam and darkness, sky and sea:
Thy face, pale in the shadowy even,
Thy quiet eyes that gaze on me!
O realize the moment's charm,
Thou dearest! We are at life's best,
Enfolded in God's encircling arm,
Wave-cradled thus, and wind caressed.

A YARN ABOUT TURTLES.

"Speaking about turtles," observed the weather-beaten traveller, who had joined a party of drummers seated in the smoking-room of a Pullman car; "why, I have literally seen millions of them at once. The sea for miles around as far as the eye could reach was"——

"Where was this?" asked an inquisitive drummer.

"Near the Gallapagog Islands, off the west coast of South America," was the reply, and then, as the other passengers settled back in their seats, the weather-beaten one spun this yarn:

"You see," he began, "we were on a little schooner and were on our way from St. Ambrose Island for a load of guano. Well, the wind suddenly died out and we began to drift. This state of affairs kept up for several days, until one morning we spied land ahead over the port bow. It was about seven miles away, I should think.

"Now, you may not believe it, but we suddenly ran into a shoal of big sea turtles that were so close together you could hardly see the water. They were there in millions, and tremendous fellows, too, some of them weighing, I should judge, more than 600 pounds. They lay all about the schooner's sides and didn't seem to mind us a bit.

"We were out of our course and it began to look as if we would never get out of the mess we were in. Then, gentlemen, I conceived an idea. I told it to the carpenter, and he thought it was great, too. And this is how it worked:

"We—that is the carpenter and myself—stepped over the vessel's side and let ourselves down on the back of a great turtle as gently as we could. Did he mind it? Not a bit. He just raised one of his flippers and winked his eye at us, as if he would have said: 'Now, what are you fellows up to, anyhow?' "

"We had a lot of strong, flexible wire aboard and each of us had a coil of it over his arm. We each carried a pair of pincers, too. Then we started to work.

"We punched a small hole in the after part of the turtle's shell and fastened an end of wire in it and made the other end fast to the anchor chain. Then we stepped over to another turtle and repeated the operation. We soon had about a dozen turtles fastened in this manner.

"The fun then commenced. We fired off a small cannon we had stationed on the fo'c'stle, and you should have seen the commotion. The sea was lashed to foam, and the big brutes scurried in all directions, tumbling over each other and darting about like mad.

"Our schooner was buffeted about and jolted like a freight car being coupled to a balky engine. But our turtles were fast. They could not escape, and soon we were forging ahead at a ten-knot clip.

"Well, sirs, in less than two days we had those turtles trained so that they would go wherever we wanted them. They would stop or drive ahead, or sheer to port or starboard. We had rigged bits in their mouths, and had fish lines for reins. I did the driving, and rare sport it was, I tell you.

"So we bowled along until we reached St. Ambrose and there we came to anchor about a mile off shore. Two of the turtles were harnessed to a large, flat-bottomed lighter, and owing to the rapidity of the trips we loaded up our schooner in a very short time.

"Then we hoisted anchor and pointed for Callao. We reached there in seven days. It seemed too bad, but as we had no further use for our turtles we sold them to a marketman, who shipped them to San Francisco."

"But what did the turtles eat during all this time?" inquired the inquisitive passenger.

"Eat!" replied the narrator with scorn. "Don't you know that turtles can go without food for weeks and months at a time? Why, when I was travelling up the Orinoco"——

At this point, however, the train pulled into the station, and "fifteen minuets for refreshments" interrupted all further discourse.—Chicago Times.

SUMNER'S INVARIABLE DIGNITY.—Sumner's figure was tall, well knit, and handsome. He had a noble head, a profusion of dark-brown hair, which was arranged with an appearance of studied negligence, and his presence was always commanding and dignified. He was one of the few men whom visitors to the Senate galleries first asked to have pointed out to them. He effected a picturesque style of dress, wearing colors brighter than those which predominated in the senatorial togas of the period. His favorite costume was a brown coat and light waistcoat, lavender-colored or checked trousers, and shoes with English gaiters. His appearance in his seat in the Senate chamber was studiously dignified. He once told me that he never allowed himself, even in the privacy of his own chamber, to fall into a position which he would not take in his chair in the Senate. "Habit," he said, "is everything." This being repeated to jolly Senator Nesmith of Oregon, he said: "I wonder how Sumner would look in his night shirt."—Noah Brooks in the November Century.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested? Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney's, Monson; F. A. Spencer's, Ware.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

EVEN GRANDMA HAS CAUGHT IT.—The grandmother who sits in the chimney corner knitting stockings is a thing of the past in these up-to-date days.

It is most interesting to note what a wave of athletic ardor has seized the older women, who literally vie with their grandchildren in making a record in the various fashionable sports of the day.

"You will be taking up the bicycle next, grandmamma," said a modern young woman to a sweet-faced, gentle old lady, the very personification of old-fashioned primness.

"My dear," she confessed, blushing like a girl. "I am trying a little—on moonlight nights—back of the house, where no one can see me."—New York Tribune.

A fearful sound burst upon the air.
It was the voice of a woman.
On closer analysis it proved to be the combined voices of several women.
"Have courage," shouted the brave youth who is always at hand when there is feminine distress. "I will save you."
And in reply came the chorus of indignation:
"You horrid thing! Go 'way from here. We girls have just joined this seminary, and we are practising our college yell."—Washington Star.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

One peculiarity about it is that it tastes like wine, yet contains no liquor or alcohol in any form, being a tonic, but not a stimulant. Another peculiarity is that cures all Nervous Disorders and all Blood, Stomach, Liver, and Kidney Diseases. The price is 50 cents, and you can get it of your druggists, and if it fails to cure you get your money back.

"GIVING GOODS AWAY!"

It used to be "It's no trouble to show goods." Things are changed. Now "It's no trouble to give goods away." That's the newest, the latest phrase. It hits the nail exactly. It's the way to make business nowadays. It's just what CHARLES E. LYNCH is doing to-day.

You smile. It's enough to make you smile. It doesn't make the merchant smile though, for profits—hang the profits—the goods have got to go. It's easy to make them go too, when "they're given away."

Fine ULSTERS in Friezes, Chinchillas, Beavers and Cheviots, for $10! They have sold for $22 and $25. Anything the matter with them? Not a thing. They are long cut, are lined throughout with heavy worsted, have shawl or notched collars and are just as good in every respect as the finest $20 ULSTER that ever was made.

Too late to buy an ULSTER! Not a bit of it. January is to Winter what July is to summer—the very edge of the season. An ULSTER will feel good for two or three months to come. More than that, you will pay $20 next season for the very same garment without a murmur. You doubt it. Ask some of the dealers who are having no trouble to get $15 for similar ULSTERS to-day. If they are not the biggest values ever seen in ULSTERS then gold dollars are not worth fifty cents. That's all there is about it.

As to SUITS and OVERCOATS—well, they are being "given away" too.

Canst thou by searching find out God?
Canst thou find out the Almighty? (Job xi:7.)

Nay, 'eer, nay! We know him not;
Yet to each finite mind He must appear
According to the measure of its power.
Eternity, that term by man devised
To span his utmost stretch of thought, suggests
But faintly unto us His endlessness
Of days. Infinitude, the star-filled space
Past whose domain imagination may
Not sweep, is lost among the millions like
Itself in His illimitable realm!

We know Him not. Yet all the mind can grasp
Of goodness, greatness, wisdom, love and power,
It groups into a personality
Supreme, and calls it GOD. All that the soul
Can comprehend of fadeless glory and Perfected joy, it pictures to itself
As His abode, and calls it heaven. With all
The heart can feel of tenderness and love—
Of sweet devotion and unfaltering trust—
It peoples that glad place with beings pure,
And calls them spirits ministrant. With all
The strength of heart and mind and soul, with all
The earnestness of conscious need, we lift
Our struggling hopes to that Supremest Thought,
And call it prayer.

A SAILOR'S WIDOW.

"I knew, of course, you would be kind to me," said Pearl, "because you are his mother."

The widow Tarragon glared through her steel-rimmed spectacle glasses at the pretty, kitten-like little creature, all roses and dimples, in her black gown, who stood on the doorstep, with a heavy traveling bag in her hand and her widow's veil thrown back from her face.

Behind the old woman, Phœbe Tarragon peered, with one hand behind her ear, and the saucepan of stewed clams yet in her hand, steaming and fragrant.

"Do please give me a cup of that delicious tea," smiled Pearl, sure of a welcome, "and some supper—for I've had nothing to eat since I left Whychfield. Surely, surely, you cannot have heard that John's ship was wrecked, and he was lost at sea," with a sudden trembling of the cherry lower lip, "or you would have written to me to come to you."

"Y—yes," unwittingly admitted the widow Tarragon, "we heerd of it. The cappen's brother he writ us a line. John always was unlucky. But we're cleanin' house, you see, and we was all sort o' took a back when we heerd tell John had got married jest a-fore that last voyage. We sort o' calculated John would feel it his dooty to look after his mother an' sister. But men is always selfish."

Pearl Tarragon looked up with soft, brimming eyes. All her orphaned life she had dreamed of a mother's love and devotion.

True, John had said little to her about his mother; but John was one of those quiet persons who do not talk much on any subject.

"Mayn't I come in?" said she. "It's gettin' chilly, and I'm so tired."

The widow took off her spectacles and wiped the glass in a hesitating way.

"Well—I—s'pose—you'll—hev—to," said she. "I'm sure I dunno how the clam broth's goin' to hold out, and I didn't bake to-day, seein' the rag carpet was took up and shook.

"Phœbe," to the tall, ungainly figure in the background, "this 'ere's your brother John's wife—widder, I mean. I did not s'pose she'd come to us so soon."

"I had nowhere else to go," faltered the poor young thing, turning red and white.

Phœbe Tarragon gave the little black gloved hand a frog-like shake, and Pearl found her way, without further invitation, to a wooden chair behind the cooking-stove.

The floor was yet reeking from its recent ablutions; coarse green paper shades covered the window, and the table scantily set forth for the evening meal boasted no covering but a piece of cheap yellow oilcloth.

"If this was John's home," said the girl to herself, "I don't wonder that he didn't talk much about it."

"Yes," said Phœbe, grimly, "it was all John's own doin' gallivantin' off to sea. Mother she wanted him to stay at home and look after the farm. It would a' saved us the wages of a hired man. But John never did think o' nobody but himself."

"If he'd stayed to hum," croaked the widow, "he couldn't a gone to sea, nor yet he would not a' cumbered himself with a wife. John never was one as would hear to good advice. He was his father all over."

Pearl looked from one to the other of these hard-featured, cold-eyed women, and wondered secretly if they belonged to the same grade of humanity as herself.

"How heartless you must be," she exclaimed, "to talk so of John, and he dead!"

"Mother, she aint one o' the cryin' sort," said Phœbe. "Of course we felt kind o' bad about it; but John was never like the rest of us. And the minister he says its our Christian duty to bear up under affliction!"

"We are all mortal!" sighed the elder widow. "Poor dear John! It would a' been a comfort to have a decent burial and funeral with a reg'lar coffin-plate, such as other folk have. But we aint privileged to say how such things shall be. But now, Mrs. John," shrewdly changing from the genteel melancholy proper of the occasion to a keen business air, "what be yer goin' to do?"

"We ain't rich folks," said the widow, "and it's as much as me and Phœbe can do to take care of ourselves."

"But," gasped Pearl, all but stunned by the suddenness of the blow, "I've nowhere else to go!"

"What did you do afore John married you?"

"I had papa then, but he is dead now."

"So's my father," said the widow, kicking the cat out of the chimney corner. "I don't sit down and cry about it. We've all got to earn our livin' in this world, and you seem to be a stout, healthy young woman, better dressed than me or Phœbe can afford to be. I'll tell you what—if you've a mind to stay here and make yourself useful, I ain't no objections to give you the run of the place and your victuals. Eh, Phœbe?"

And this was the beginning of Pearl Tarragon's bondage in that dreary farm-house. She rose early and went to bed late; she learned to scrub and wash and cook, while the widow, with workbag and umbrella, went out to tea with her neighbors; and Phœbe, in her second-best sateen gown, indulged in a penchant she had for painting in very watery water colors and embroidering crazy quilts.

The poor young thing grew pale and thin; a hunted look came into her eyes.

"What do you think, mother," said Phœbe, one evening, "the schoolmaster has asked John's widow to marry him."

"Why," gasped Mrs. Tarragon, "I supposed he was keeping steady company with you!"

"I supposed so too," said Phœbe, with a toss of her gaunt head; "but it seems we was mistook."

"Of course she said yes?"

"No, she did not. I heard it all. I was a-listening at the door. There shan't no secrets go on in this house without my knowing all about it"—

"Quite right, Phœbe," nodded her mother.

"And I heerd her burst out cryin', and say there could never be but one man in the world to her, and he was John, drowned in the Baltic Sea."

"Oh, it is you, is it?" said Phœbe, with rather embarrassed mein. "Got through whitewashin' the kitchen chamber?"

"No," said Pearl, quietly. "I have come to the conclusion that I cannot live in this manner any longer. I am doing a servant's work without a servant's wages. If you choose to hire me"——

"Then," said Pearl, with heightened color, "give me my share of the property, and let me go elsewhere, where my labor will be paid for at its market value."

"Your—share!" Old Mrs. Tarragon visibly stiffened, like a starched garment on a February clothes line. "Well, if I ever heard anything like that! Your—share! And after all we've done for you that would have gone to the poorhouse if it had not been for our kindness. Your share, indeed—No! Get out, I tell you! There's a law against tramps in this country. We don't want no parrots, nor sea-shells, nor"——

The latter sentences, however, were not directed toward shrinking Pearl, but were spoken to some outsider, who had just driven up to the door in a light wagon, rather heavily laden with foreign-looking merchandise, trunks and packages.

"Get out, I say, or I'll call the dog!" reiterated Mrs. Tarragon. "Or"——

"John! John! It's John!" shrieked Pearl, flying out across the threshold. "It is my husband come back from the sea!"

"What's all this commotion about?" demanded a cheery voice, raised to a regular sailor's pitch. "Why, Pearl, my little darling, you could not look paler if I were a ghost! And here is mother did not know me, either. And what is Phœbe staring at? Wake up, all of you, and give a fellow something like a welcome!"

"Wh—wh—why," stuttered Phœbe, with fixed eyes and ashen countenance, "you was drowned, was you not—on the Grand Rapids, that was split to pieces in the Baltic Sea, a year ago?"

"To be sure," acceded the stranger, still holding tight to Pearl, "she did split to pieces in Cattegai Strait, but three of the crew escaped, and I was one of the lucky three. So here I am again—home by the way of Spain and Portugal, and pretty well cured of my taste for sea-faring life. And now, mother, I and Phœbe have been tried in the balance and found wanting," he added, a sterner shadow coming to his face. "My poor little Pearl, when she thought herself to be a widow and friendless, came to you for shelter and protection, and was treated like any drudge. She did not know, poor creature! How should she? And you were careful not to tell her that the house and farm all belonged to me, and that you were only occupying it as a favor from me. Had you taken Pearl to your heart, as you should have done, I never could have been sufficiently grateful to you. But now, so far as I am concerned, you may go back to the old house on the hill and shift for yourselves. I am lord of this castle, and Pearl is its Queen!"

The widow Tarragon and Phœbe looked blankly at each other, but the fiat had gone forth. Now that it was too late, they discovered the fatal mistake they had made, and retreated, with their few household goods, to the ruinous old stone house on the hill, whence they had originally migrated.

"It is a real home now," cried the little wife, ecstatically, "and we are so happy here!"

"And it is just as well," lugubriously observed the school-master, "that she did not accept me, after all."—Saturday Night.

AN ADVERTISEMENT IS A SIGN.

One of the first things that a manufacturer or merchant does when he goes into business is to put out a sign, so the public can locate him and know what goods he deals in. This is justly looked upon as a necessity. Following the thought a little further, what is an advertisement but a sign?—a traveling sign going regularly before buyers, just as traveling salesmen do, only where a traveling salesman can visit tens, a traveling sign or salesman visits thousands. In point of fact, each supplements the other. The traveling sign introduces the goods of the traveling salesman; the traveling salesman follows up and enforces the work of the traveling sign. The traveling salesman sometimes cannot get the attention of the buyer; the traveling sign is always waiting and reaches the buyer's attention when he has time to read and think. The present development of commerce would be impossible without the newspaper. Where would the great fortunes, which have been made by "Royal" baking powder, Baker's chocolate, Pyle's "Pearline," "Apollinaris" water, Mumm's champagne, Hostetter's bitters, Ayer's medicines, Singer's sewing machines, the great dry goods and department stores, together with thousands of others, of which these are but types, be, if it had not been for the opportunity afforded by the newspapers to keep their names and goods before the understanding of the people? If merchants appreciated their opportunity and the mine of wealth lying before them, when intelligently worked, they would run after publishers, seeking an opportunity to place their signs before the people, instead of publishers running after them and soliciting them to advertise.—American Grocer.

THE WOMAN.—If there is one word in the language more than another that I am heartily sick and tired of—a word that is the very block and obstacle in the path of argument or reason—a word that seems to me to have been created out of nothing to fill a vacuum that never existed—a word that all men condemn, and no woman can look upon except as a constant reminder of her innate lack of logic, that word is "because," and I wish to goodness it were expunged from every dictionary in the world. The Man—Why? The Woman—Oh—er—er—er—because.—Detroit Free Press.

Hicks—"Isn't there some mistake here, Scribb?" Scribb—"How?" Hicks—"Somebody's sent me a free pass to go and see your play." Scribb—"That's all right. What's wrong about it?" Hicks—"I understood people were paid for going."—Harper's Bazar.

The Journal.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 25, 1895.

AFTER a full hearing in the matter Gov. Greenhalge has decided not to pardon the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad officials now serving jail sentences for their part in the North Abington crossing riots. It is difficult to see how he could have been expected to do otherwise. These men were plainly violators of the law, and their official standing should have no effect whatever on the question of serving or not serving the sentence imposed.

THE little hill town of Belchertown has organized a board of trade, 125 attending the meeting for that purpose Wednesday evening, and will move in the direction of getting manufacturing industries to locate there. The town is now on the line of two railroads, instead of a single one, as formerly, and there is no reason why it should not grow. Palmer had a board of trade once. There's a good opportunity for the business committee of the new club to do something now.

CHARITABLY inclined persons have ample opportunity for the manifestation of their benevolence in the state of affairs in Nebraska, where people are actually dying for the lack of life's necessities. Last summer was a hard one for the farmers, many of whom raised absolutely nothing on account of the drought, and are now suffering for the lack of food, clothing and fuel. Much has been done for them in all parts of the country, but much more must be done. There is a state relief commission, and supplies may be sent to Luther P. Ludden at Lincoln, Neb., who is general manager.

WILL the Legislature make a move this year in favor of biennial elections, or must Massachusetts stand conspicuous in her loneliness as the only state having annual elections after this year? The only other state in the Union which now follows this plan—Rhode Island—will change to biennials with this session of the Legislature. Let's have the change; we all want it—all except the professional politicians and those lawyers who are getting fat things out of this annual wrangle before the various committees for legislation favorable to their clients' interests. Give the people a chance to say what they would like in the matter.

ONCE more Russell Sage legally escapes paying Laidlaw for having used him as a shield when the crank Norcross threw the bomb at him; morally he can never escape. When Sage saw a suspicious movement on the part of the crank he seized Laidlaw, who was in his office, and pulled him between his own precious carcass and the crank, Laidlaw receiving severe injuries; indeed, it is a question if Sage would have survived but for the interference which Laidlaw's body furnished to flying fragments of the bomb and pieces of woodwork. And Sage laughs at his dreaming of asking anything in the way of damages. The spectacle of such base ingratitude in a man of Sage's means is almost enough to make one wonder if the man is human.

IT is said that when a man contemplates building a house suited to his needs he should first build one for sale, so that in the second he can correct the mistakes and omissions made in the first, and have everything as he wishes it. It might have been a good thing if the projectors of the new state house extension had started out on that line; the trouble would have been to find a purchaser for their first structure. But even then we're not sure but it would have been cheaper in the end. At any rate, the Legislature now has what no one wants, unless it be the architect who designed its gorgeousness. It must be materially altered before it will be even passably convenient; and that will cost money, how much the state is not likely to know for several years.

CONSIDERABLE comment is heard about town regarding the small amount of bail fixed by the district court last week in the case of Mark A. Korff of Three Rivers, arrested for attempted rape. Here was a man whose reputation was such that those who knew him best were positive he could not be so depraved; overhearing in a store at night a young woman inquiring the way to the house of a relative, which was located on a lonely road, he followed and overtook her, offering to show the way, then attempted the assault. When arrested he pleaded guilty, making no defense. Here was an acknowledgement of a crime which admits of a possible life sentence, and yet the court made the bail a palty $300. It is stated by some who know Korff well that he will never appear for trial.

FOR the past week the motormen of the trolley lines of street cars in Brooklyn, N. Y., have been on a strike, claiming that they have been subjected to too severe a nervous strain in being compelled to run cars at a high rate of speed through crowded streets, and being compelled to work too many hours a day. Contrary to the usual custom, public sympathy seemed to be with the strikers. But not content with leaving their work and endeavoring peaceably to induce others to leave, violence was resorted to and the new men assaulted, the car lines obstructed, and other riotous acts indulged in. The troops were called out, and some 7000 of them are now in the city. The trolley lines are running some cars and getting out more daily, and the defeat of the strikers is only a question of a short time.

IT may be well for the voters of the town of Palmer to be thinking somewhat of the coming town meeting. A new selectman must be elected to take the place of Mr. Getchell, whom all are sorry to lose, and various matters of importance will need careful deliberation. One of the greatest interest to every voter who has the welfare of the town at heart will be the question of roads. All has been done that was possible under the present system and the past appropriations; but is the system the best that could be devised? Is it wise or good policy to put money into a bag of holes? And that is what the town is doing every year. Repair the roads ever so nicely under the present system one spring, and the thing must be done again the next season. On our main roads at least something in the way of permanent road building should be done. There can be no better time to begin than in 1895. Ware has seen the fallancy of the old method and begins this year some permanent road building. When will Palmer begin?

A MOVEMENT to provide better police protection for the rural and suburban districts is making considerable headway in the eastern part of the state, being actuated by the reported large increase in crime in regions outside the large towns and cities on account of the notorious weakness of the country police. Palmer could cite a few instances of the latter if they would count—one of an officer who, while on his way to the lockup with a prisoner arrested for drunkenness, stopped at a saloon and took two or three drinks with his prisoner; and of another officer who, during a no-license regime, stood in a saloon where men were drinking at the bar, talking with the proprietor, and saw him deliberately knock down and brutally kick a man who angered him, without offering to make the slightest interference. The average officer in the country town is inefficient. The towns do not exercise that care which they might in the election of constables, often the only officers in the town, and the result is men who, if they do not actually sympathize with the lawbreakers, do not care enough about the matter to make an arrest unless absolutely compelled to. A large share of the remedy lies with the voters of the towns, to see that good officers are elected.

PALMER NEWS.

Supposed Swindler Caught.

Some time ago Deputy Sheriff Studley received a letter from Detective Pease of the state police, asking him to be on the lookout for a man who was collecting money for a church in the eastern part of the state, as it was supposed he was a swindler. Last Saturday morning the fellow was taken by Mr. Studley, and gave the name of Rev. Isaac S. Holmes of Cambridge, soliciting contributions for the First Free Baptist church of Cambridge. He made serious objection to being arrested, and came near having a fight with the officer at the lockup. He arrived in town Friday night and at once went to work. He had a small book in which were two pieces of cardboard full of holes the size of a silver dime, 25 on each side, and people were asked to place a dime in a hole. At the Palmer Tea Store his request was refused, whereupon he backed against the door and declined to depart until the money was forthcoming, but a customer came in and he left. He was taken to Pittsfield and turned over to North Adams officers. His case came up in the court Tuesday, when he was discharged, a letter having been received from Cambridge stating that he was authorized to collect for the church, taking money from his collections for his expenses, and that he had turned over money to the church. When arrested in Palmer he had papers in his possession showing that he was paying for building lots in Boston, but no documents showing his connection with the church.

A January Wedding.

A quiet home wedding took place Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. William Holbrook on Main street, when their eldest daughter, Mrs. Clara B. Ellis, was married to Arthur D. Ellis of Monson, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson with a ring in the presence of relatives and a few immediate friends, the bride wearing a handsome costume of brown crepon. Barr of Springfield catered. There were many presents, handsome and valuable, including a case of solid silver from the parents of the bride, numerous pieces of silver and cut glass, bric-a-brac, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis took the 5.20 train for New York, where they will meet friends and proceed South, where they will remain several weeks. They will be at home at Monson March 20th. The out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. M. W. French of Newtonville, Mr. and and Mrs. W. C. Hitchcock of Bennington, Vt., Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Ellis of Stafford Springs, Ct., and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Farrington, Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Ellis of Monson.

A. P. Rindge is at Dothen, Ala., where he has the contract for putting in a 300-foot artesian well. He writes that the atmosphere is somewhat different there from that we are having here now, the mercury standing at from 70° to 80° all the time.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company announces a reduction in its charges, to take place the first of February. The amount differs somewhat according to the service rendered, but amounts to about $3 a year on each instrument.

The American Cotton and Wool Reporter of Boston announces the permanent addition to its staff of C. H. Clark of Thorndike, who is well known to Palmer people. Mr. Clark will be located in New York city, and will give the greater portion of his time to the cotton department of the publication.

It is not usual for juniors in the Yale Theological Seminary to preach, but Cyrus F. Stimson of this place has been granted special permission to do so, and has already preached acceptably in several places. Last Sunday he preached two sermons at Roxbury, Ct., for which he has received very flattering mention by the critics.

The ladies of the Lend-a-hand club of the Congregational church are to give a complimentary supper to the husbands and invited gentlemen friends of members in the church vestry next Wednesday evening, in view of the assistance reudered by the gentlemen in the past in the various enterprises in which the club has been interested.

Peter Ditto had the misfortune to have his left arm broken Monday by a kick from one of his horses, the fracture being a compound one between the elbow and shoulder. In dismounting from a load of wood which he was hauling he stepped alongside the horse, which suddenly kicked and struck him on the arm. He was attended by Dr. Holbrook.

At the meeting of the Quaboag Literary Circle last Friday evening Dr. L. H. Hendee read a paper on "England from the Conquest to Magna Charta;" W. A. Lawson had charge of the Round Table. H. C. Strong and W. A. Lawson were appointed a committee by the Circle, and in accordance with the vote, on Saturday presented Dr. W. H. Stowe, who was one of its founders, with a box of cut flowers.

C. T. Brainerd has filled his ice houses with good clear ice about 11 inches in thickness. H. A. Northrop, fearful that he might get cheated out of a supply, commenced clearing his pond last Sunday, and worked all Monday night by torch light, using those which the Republicans have stored in the basement of the bank block, though how Democratic ice housed by the light of Republican torches will keep is yet to be determined.

Complaints about the quality of the ink furnished by the state are heard on every hand, and Palmer is no exception. The stuff flows fairly well, but does not dry readily, and leaves a thick deposit on both pen and paper. It sometimes happens that a Polander is required to sign his name for some reason or other, and the combination of the letters of the name, the ink and the writer's chirography are productive of results both fearful and wonderful.

At a special meeting of the Congregational parish Wednesday evening A. L. Hills was chosen treasurer and collector in place of F. B. Pope, resigned. A committee of three, Dr. G. H. Wilkins, L. E. Chandler and L. H. Gager, was appointed to consider the question of making a change in the manner of disposing of the sittings in the church, with the object of having free seats. The committee is to devise a plan, and report at a special meeting to be called before October 1st. Mr. Hills has declined to serve, and another meeting is called for next Thursday afternoon, to elect a treasurer.

Preparations are being made by the state for the taking of the decennial census, which will begin May 1st. Two enumerators will be appointed in Palmer, and the pay will be $3 a day of nine hours actual service; women are not debarred from appointment. The selectmen will nominate twice as many persons as are required, and those found best qualified for the work, as determined by such rules and tests as the chief of the census office may fix, will be appointed, subject to the approval of the civil service commissioners of the Commonwealth. The first requirements are active persons of intelligence and good character, acquainted with the locality, and who can write plainly.

The second entertainment in the high school course will be given in the Congregational church this evening, when Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., of New York, will lecture, taking for his subject "Backbone." Mr. Dixon is acknowledged to be one of the brightest speakers of the day, and will be sure to please and interest his audience, which should be a large one. Doors open at 7.15, lecture at 8; admission 35 cents. The scholars of the high school are running considerable risk in placing this course of entertainments before the people, and they should be well patronized, as all money above the necessary expenses is to go toward the nucleus of a school library.

The concert to be given in the Second Congregational church Wednesday evening, February 6th, by the church quartette, assisted by the Aipha Mandolin and Guitar Club of Springfield, promises a treat to music-loving people in this vicinity. The programme, which will include thirteen numbers, five of which will be by the Mandolin club, consists of quartetts, duets and solos. Mrs. Small, the accompanist, will also give a solo number, thus affording Palmer people an opportunity, too seldom occuring, to hear this charming player. Of the work of the Mandolin club little need be said, as its work is well known in Western Massachusetts. Mr. Eberhardt, the leader, is a musician of recognized merit, and under his faithful directorship the club has been brought to a degree of perfection attained by few organizations of its kind.

State Primary School Notes.

Miss Mabel G. Moore's mother spent part of the week with her at the school.

Miss Cora Dimmick of Wales spent the forepart of the week with her friend, Miss May Royce.

Old "Charlie," the horse which for the last 10 years has performed the duties of a farm horse at the school, has resigned his position. For the last 5 years "Charlie" has drawn the depot team back and forth, and although not afraid of the cars he would never go under the tracks over Commercial street when a train was passing.

The first of the winter's entertainments was given Tuesday night, much to the joy of the scholars. The principal character was the old grandma, who in spite of age sung her song, though in a trembling voice, much to the delight of the audience. Much credit is due to Miss Dyer and Miss Fullington for the preparation of the entertainment.

PALMER CENTER.

John Newman has recently put a new "Giant" furnace into his house, the work being satisfactorily done by C. A. Brown & Co. of Palmer.

W. C. Newman, son of John Newman, has secured a reëngagement with the same New York house that he represented successfully last fall in Boston and the east.

The Oracle and Echo society held a social Tuesday evening at Orrin Pratt's. About 75 people were present. Justin Hamilton, F. W. Lent and Charles Hamilton furnished music. All enjoyed a pleasant time.

BONDSVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hunt of Worcester were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moore last week.

Charles Holden, who has been spending his vacation with his parents, returned to his studies in Albany this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones were called quite suddenly to Greenwich last Wednesday by the illness of Mrs. Jones's father.

Mrs. E. J. Fuller of Forest Lake, and her mother, Mrs. James Fuller, are visiting in Brimfield this week at N. S. Hubbard's.

Mrs. W. S. Whiting died about 11 o'clock Monday forenoon from heart failure, resulting from an operation performed Sunday. Besides a husband she leaves a father and one sister, a half brother and sister in Enfield. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon in the Methodist church, and was largely attended. The Daughters of Rebekah, of which she was a member, was represented by a large delegation. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Interment in the cemetery at Four Corners.

THREE RIVERS.

Charles Bernard has been quite ill this week, but is now recovering rapidly.

Mrs. Randall of Worcester is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Tenney this week.

The work on a new heating system has been completed in St. Anne's church, and it is thought the system will be sufficient to keep the church comfortable in the coldest weather.

John Macadam had his hand quite badly hurt while at work in the beaming room in the mill last Saturday afternoon. The wound had to be stitched, and will prevent his working for several days.

Owing to the illness of James Barber the latter part of last week Lariviere & Co. were unable to start their meat cart, but all preparations have been made by the firm for commencing the route to-morrow.

J. A. V. Michon is about to commence retailing hay. His plan is to make his purchases in Canada and sell it off the car in this place. Mr. Michon is in the former place this week, making arrangements for his enterprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Johnson were pleasantly surprised by a number of their young friends last evening, the call being made to celebrate Mr. Johnson's 22d birthday. Games were indulged in, and Mr. Johnson received many birthday souvenirs. Good wishes were freely exchanged, and the company departed, leaving many pleasant remembrances of the occasion.

The musical recital by Mrs. H. M. Auger's pupils, given at the Union church Wednesday eveneng, was an event which afforded much pleasure to those who were present, and was certainly very creditable to Mrs. Auger. Ten of her pupils were present and gave satisfactory proof of proficiency in their musical studies. The Misses Bertha and Bessie Royce of Palmer were present and delighted the audience with their accomplishments in this direction. Miss Effie Moffatt, also of Palmer, very creditably did her part. Then the performance by Mrs. Auger at the piano, and Mr. Casey, violinist, of Springfield, was a rare treat for those present. The occasion was so enjoyable to all that future similar entertainments would be anticipated with great pleasure.

THORNDIKE.

The rink will be open as usual this evening for skating.

Bert Deming of Palmer spent Sunday with friends in town.

The pupils of the grammar school are planning for a sleigh ride.

Mrs. Sullivan of Amherst is visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Michael Riley.

The Ware Steam Laundry is again doing the work for J. W. Molloy's customers.

There will be another Polish wedding party to-morrow evening at Union Hall.

Benjamin Furkey, formerly of this place, now of Holyoke, was in town recently for a few days.

The second new boiler for the No. 2 mill boiler house has arrived, and is being put into place.

Tickets are selling well for the benefit dance to be given next Friday evening for Mrs. Fred Dano.

The Columbian Orchestra of this place will furnish music for the dance at Bondsville this evening.

Tickets for the Foresters' concert and ball Feb. 8th are now on sale, and can be had of members of the order.

About twenty from this place went to Palmer Center Tuesday evening to attend the social at Mr. O. Pratt's.

Mrs. A. B. C. Deming of Springfield spent this week in town as the guest of her daughters, Mrs. Charles F. Mooers and Mrs. Isaac Gerald.

The supper given on Saturday by the Social Club was an enjoyable affair, and those who were present passed a very pleasant evening.

The dinner given on Tuesday by the ladies of the Congregational church was well attended, and those present speak in the highest terms of the dinner served.

John Foster, Sr., an aged French resident, went to the Springfield hospital Tuesday in company with Dr. Desmarais of Three Rivers, and will undergo an operation.

John Murphy of this place, who has been at Norwich, Ct., at work, is home and about again after a short illness, having been confined to his home on Church street for several days with the grippe.

Mr. Moody of Rhode Island is the new overseer who will take charge of the carding and spinning rooms at the No. 2 mill in place of Mr. Fay and Mr. Ramsden, who finished work on Wednesday.

The employes of the carding room at the No. 2 mill presented their overseer, John W. Fay, who has resigned, with a handsome gold watch chain and charm on Monday as a token of their appreciation of him. The employes of the spinning room followed the example of their carding room friends and presented their overseer, Mr. Ramsden, with a watch chain and charm as a mark of their esteem.

Funeral of Mrs. M. M. Thomas.

The funeral of Mrs. M. M. Thomas, who died suddenly last week, was held from her late home on Main street Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The Trask Male Quartette of Springfield sang "We Shall Meet By and By," "When My Final Farewell," "God Be With You," and also while the friends were viewing the remains. Prayer and remarks were made by Rev. E. B. Blanchard, pastor of the Congregational church. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, a crescent and lyre from friends in the finishing room, with the inscription "At Rest," a "C. E." emblem from the Christian Endeavor society, maltese cross from the Woman's Relief Corps, a pillow from members of the family, and many cut flowers from friends. The bearers were H. S. Robinson of Providence, R. I., G. H. Lucas of Springfield, E. M. Johnson of West Warren, C. S. Ruggles of three Rivers. Among those present from out of town were Mrs. F. O. Hunt of Barre Plains, Mr. and Mrs. George Mundell of Hardwick, William A. Hunt of Barre Plains. The interment took place in the cemetery at Four Corners.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, JANUARY 23, 1895.

The anti-double taxation league has presented its bills in the Senate through Mr. Wellman of Middlesex, who was the spokesman for that side in the House last year more than any other member. Four bills have been put in; one is to exempt from taxation in this state the stock of foreign corporations which is fully taxed in the state where its home is; one is to relieve from double taxation incomes derived from property which is subject to taxation and has already been taxed once; one is to exempt municipal bonds from taxation, and the fourth is to relieve from double taxation merchandise which is pledged for debts. The issues are now fairly joined. The representatives of the league say that the Massachusetts state grange has declined to hold joint discussions in order that the case may be put before the public.

The bill of Mr. Bliss of West Springfield to change the employers' liability law in the case of railroad employes who have been injured in the discharge of duty, though it was defeated in the Senate after it had passed the House in 1894, yet has a very strong case behind it. When a brakeman has slipped from his icy freight cars on a moving train on a cold winter night and has met death under the wheels which have mutilated his body, there is no witness sometimes to prove that he was in the exercise of due care and diligence. Unless such exercise can be proved affirmatively no damages can be recovered. The bill proposes to establish the presumption that the man was in the exercise of due diligence unless the road can prove to the contrary. If such a bill could be passed, it would greatly better the financial standing of destitute families who would otherwise be left with no provision for their future.

The woman suffrage contest will come on early this year. It is expected to give a hearing on January 30 in the old hall of the House, to report as soon as possible and dispose of the matter. Last year it was not out of the way till April 9. Lady Henry Somerset and Frances E. Willard will be among the speakers at the hearing.

"Tall oaks from little acorns grow," and though it may not have been a very little acorn which the Legislature planted in 1885 when it passed the bill to establish the board of police for Boston, yet a very tall oak is looming up in the near future which has grown from the seed planted then. By that act the control of its police was taken from the city of Boston and was conferred upon a commission to be paid by the city, but appointed by the governor and confirmed by the council. The prodigious fight made by the Boston Democrats against that bill has been one of the traditions of the House since, and probably there never was a more bitter and excited struggle in the history of the Legislature. But the bill was passed on party lines—Republicans for and Democrats against. The precedent was not followed until last year, when a similar act was made to apply to Fall River. Though it was strongly opposed, still, it met with nothing like the opposition which was encountered by its predecessor. But this year there is promise that the principle will be applied more widely. One of the active workers for the two acts already mentioned says that a bill is drawn to be applied to Holyoke, and that it is also desired to extend the law to Lowell. More than this, it is proposed to pass a general bill by which the principle shall be applied to every city in the state, so that in none of them will the people have control of their own police, but every city will be under the administration of a board of its citizens who will be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the council, but who will be paid from the treasury of the city.

An extension of the civil service law is proposed in a bill offered by Mr. Myers of Cambridge, by which the civil service commissioners are authorized to appoint "registrars of labor" who shall have oversight of the labor force which is selected under the civil service rules of either the state or the cities. At present the labor departments of the cities are not generally under the civil service rules, but the tendency is to extend the scope of the law, for it works well where it is properly enforced.

The effort of the last two years to abolish days of grace on notes, drafts, orders and checks has been renewed, but in a modified form, that the act shall apply only to papers drawn in this state and shall not effect those which are drawn before July 1, 1895.

The oversight, or error of last year, by which the weight of a bushel of onions was fixed at 57 pounds, instead of 52, will be promptly remedied this year, and the irate constituents of Representative Bridges of Deerfield, who defeated him last fall because he did not prevent the passage of the bill last session, may now return to their old measure and pocket their customary profits. The judiciary committee gave two hearings upon the matter and have reported the desired bill, which will doubtless become a law without material opposition.

It offends some people that those who do not like the State House extension do not keep still about the matter. They would be glad to have all opposition die out and everything go on with apparent harmony in the new hall and elegant committee rooms. But the new place is so seriously unfitted for its purpose that ultimately the House should be back in its old place under the dome, with seats for the members without desks, and with the committee rooms conveniently arranged in compact order for business. Practicability, as fully as ornament, ought to be a guiding principle, and as surely as good laws and righteous principles are of higher value than ornate architecture and artistic decorations, so surely ought there to be a fitting place for the Legislature. This issue will not be settled till the mistake is remedied, and the good of the state made superior to architecture and fine coloring.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 25, 1895.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Death of Miss Mary J. Gage.

On last Saturday morning Miss Mary J. Gage passed from this life at the age of 43 years' at the house of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary A. Gage. Miss Gage was the daughter of Aaron and Annis B. Gage, and was born September 28, 1851, in Union, Ct. When a child she moved with her parents to Monson and has resided here the greater part of her life, and for several years in the house where she died. In 1870 she united with the Methodist Episcopal church, and was a member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, a charter member and the first to die of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor connected with that church, and had taught a class in the Sunday school for twelve years; she was also a charter member and the first chaplain of the Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps, No. 145, and a King's Daughter. Her last illness was of two weeks' duration, beginning with appendicitis and ending with heart failure, and her death was a great shock to many friends, as after the first four days she seemed to be out of danger, and not until Friday was her case considered hopeless. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, Rev. W.H. Marble of the M. E. church officiating, assisted|by Rev. F.S. Hatch of the Congregational church, a quartette from the Methodist choir rendering "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Lead, Kindly Light." Mr. Marble paid a high tribute to the beautiful, Christian character of Miss Gage, speaking of her naturally retiring disposition but readiness to do her duty at whatever sacrifice to personal feeling, also of the esteem borne her by all with whom she came in contact, weaving his remarks about the words "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." The flowers were beautiful, and included besides those from the family and friends, a large bouquet of Easter lilies from the Sunday school class, with the inscription on the ribbon with which they were tied, "Our Teacher," a basket of valley lillies from the M. E. Sunday school, a large bunch of cream white roses from the Y. P. S. C. E., a basket of tulips, hyacinths, lilies, mignonette, roses and smilax from the Relief Corps, a standing lyre of pinks, white and La France roses and hyacinths on a foundation of smilax, and with strings of hyacinths, the base being composed of hyacinths, Easter lilies and roses, from shopmates at R.M.Reynolds's straw works, and a Maltese cross, the emblem of the order, of hyacinths, tuberoses, roses and maiden-hair ferns, with the letters I. H. N., from the King's Daughters. Four brothers survive her, Carlos M. of Monson, Lovel L. and W. Carey of Warren, Burt O. of Somerville.

Death From Exposure.

Patrick O'Reilly was found dead yesterday morning near George Colburn's house on Crow Hill. He had worked for Mr. Colburn through the day and started for home, carrying a lantern. The road was icy, and from the position in which the body was found it is supposed that he fell down a four-foot embankment and was stunned, as his feet lay in the brook, and he had died of exposure. Mr. O'Reilly was born in County Kerry, Ireland, nearly 65 years ago. He removed to this country 43 years ago, coming at once to Monson, where he has resided the greater part of the time. His wife, Ellen Moriarty, whom he married at Ware, died a number of years ago, and of their five children two survive, Daniel and Patrick, both living in the West. Mr. O'Reilly enlisted in the 21st Massachusetts Volunteers, Company B, the rally being held in the parlor of what is now the Cushman House, and served three years; he was the company cook and barber. Later he enlisted in a Connecticut regiment, and at the time of his death was receiving a pension of $12 a month. For some years he has not attended the Catholic church, and the burial, which was in charge of Marcus Keep post, G. A. R., took place to-day in the Center cemetery.

Might Have Been a Serious Accident.

There was a lively scene Wednesday on Ellis's pond, where Herbert M. Smith is harvesting ice. Harry Wright was driving the horse and Mr. Smith was holding the plough, when horse and driver suddenly plunged into the water, the horse uppermost. It was at first thought that the man had been shoved under the ice, but fortunately he was able to cling to the saddle, and with considerable difficulty man and beast were landed without serious injury to either.

Almost A Fire.

On Sunday the residence owned by Mrs. Fanny Pierce and family, on Pearl street, caught fire. For a time the roof was fairly black with friends and neighbors who hastened to lend aid, and through their strenuous efforts the flames were soon extinguished. The loss was slight.

Frank Cushman, son of Rufus T. Cushman, has the measles.

George C. Flynt has had a telephone put in his house this week.

The school committee will hold a meeting next Wednesday evening.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sutcliffe Sunday morning.

St. Patrick's parish has put a telephone in the parochial residence this week.

Father Mullens, late curate at St. Patrick's church, has been in town this week.

Prof. Beuchler, who has a large class in voice culture, will be in town to-morrow.

William G. Meacham has the contract to build a house for Mr. Johnson on Harrison avenue.

Mrs. Hiram A. Felton has been called to Enfield on account of the illness of her mother.

As the sun shone brightly Tuesday, St. Vincent's Day, we may expect much wind this year of 1895.

There is to be a social dance in Stonecutters' Hall this evening, with music by the Monson Orchestra.

The little child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Fagan has been very sick with congestion of the lungs, but is recovering.

Selectman Norcross caused the icy sidewalks in the village to be sanded yesterday, and the citizens appreciate it.

At a meeting of the Universalist parish committee last evening it was decided to have the usual Lenten services.

The Junior Epworth League serves a supper, to be followed by an entertainment, in the Methodist church this evening.

The subject for the Y. P. C. U. meeting at the Universalist church Sunday evening will be "The Christian Should Rejoice."

Mrs. Fred W. Ellis gave a "fagot" party last Saturday afternoon, something out of the usual order, and much enjoyed.

Half the wall of the collecting well for the water works system is completed, and excavating for the other half has begun.

There were in the year 1894 in this town 74 births, 34 marriages, 63 deaths, against 70 births, 31 marriages and 56 deaths in 1893.

There seems to be a new crop of measles, five cases having been reported yesterday. There have been about 100 cases reported so far.

Miss Esther R. Holmes and Mabelle L. Anderson leave for California about the middle of next month, for several months' stay.

Mrs. Lizzie O'Brien and Miss Joanna Sullivan are to build houses on their recently purchased Flynt and Harrison avenue property.

Mrs. Susan E. Thrall returned Monday from a visit with her friend, Mrs. Harriet Bodge, in Hartford, and friends in Windsor Locks, Ct.

Friends of Mrs. Margaret Swett, widow of Sergeant S. Swett, will be glad to know that she has been granted a pension by the U. S. government.

Arthur D. Norcross's cochins are at the show of the Central Mass. Poultry Association in Worcester, and have made a clean sweep of the prizes in their class.

The Physical Culture Club, with the teacher, Miss MacNamara of Springfield, was entertained last evening by the Misses Leary at their home on Green street.

Next Sunday will be observed as Young People's Day at the Universalist church, and there will be special music by the children under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Bruce.

Prof. Treadway's dancing class met Tuesday in Memorial Hall, with several new members. It is quite probable that this series of lessons may close with a fancy dress ball.

Monday being Mrs. William N. Flynt's birthday, her daughters, Mrs. Henry A. King, Mrs. William Lincoln and Mrs. William C. Dewey, all of Springfield, made her a surprise visit, spending a delightful day.

The special meetings at the Congregational church have been better attended since the weather became settled. They close this evening for the week, to be resumed next Tuesday evening, and continue through the week.

Miss Effie Aldrich gave a pleasant whist party at her home on the corner of Green and Lincoln street, Monday evening; there were four tables. Mrs. Julia Ketcham and Frank W. Moulton bore off the first prizes, and Miss Alice Crossman and Harry Miller the second prizes. The refreshments consisted of cake, coffee and ice cream.

The regular business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Methodist church was held Monday evening, the new president, Prof. Morse, presiding for the first time. Reports from the various committees were given, and an animated discussion on the changing of the constitution followed. One amendment was carried, and that pertaining to the pledge was not. Rev.W.H.Marble was chosen delegate to the Holyoke meeting the 29th.

To permit the occupant of a chair to conveniently fan himself by a slight continuous tilting motion of an ordinary arm chair, or by rocking gently in a rocker, this simple and inexpensive device has been devised. A standard carrying at its top fan wings is screw-threaded at about the hight of the chair arm, and this screw-threaded portion of the standard is engaged by a loosely sliding nut forming a portion of the outer end of an articulated arm which is attached at its other end to the chair arm.

The Congregational church will observe next Wednesday as a day of fasting and prayer. The chapels will be open from nine o'clock in the morning until nine in the evening, and all members of the church, with any others who desire to come, will be welcomed by the pastor and others, who will be present throughout the day and evening. Services will be held at half past ten o'clock, at half past two in the afternoon, and at half past seven in the evening.

Mrs. Mary Newell Smith, aunt of Mrs. Welcome Converse, has recently died at Lockport, N. Y., at the age of 88 years and six months, having been born in Monson Aug. 26th, 1806. The ancestor of the Newell family, Abraham Newell of Roxbury, came from England in 1634, sailing from Ipswich the last of April in the ship "Francis." At the time of her death Mrs. Smith was the oldest living member of the Monson Academy.

What you want to know and to consider, is the result of washing with Pearline. And it's all told in two words — it saves. Hard work, wear and tear to things washed (because there isn't any rub, rub, rub) time, money — all saved.

You needn't bother with the other chapters in the book — doubt as to Pearline's ability, fear as to the damage it may do if it does the work, &c. There's nothing in them. Any woman who uses Pearline can tell you that.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 384 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Railroad Man, The Clergyman, The Business Man,

and all other men who have to look neat while at work, should know about "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. They look exactly like linen, wear well and being waterproof do not wilt down with heat and moisture. They do not soil easily and can be cleaned in a moment by simply wiping off with a wet sponge or cloth. Do not confuse these in your mind with composition goods. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE "CELLULOID" MARK.

Ask for these and refuse anything else if you wish satisfaction. Remember that goods so marked are the only waterproof goods made by coating a linen collar with waterproof "Celluloid," thus giving strength and durability. If your dealer should not have the "Celluloid" send amount direct to us and we will mail you sample post-paid. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs, 50c. pair. State size and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Ex-Sheriff of Ulster County.

Hon. Davis Winne Owes His Health To Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

SHANDAKEN, N. Y.—One of the most prominent men in Ulster County is the Hon. Davis Winne, of this town. His reputation is not confined alone to this county, where he held the office of Sheriff for three years, he was also this district's representative in the New York State Legislature. For years Mr. Winne has been suffering from a complicated case of kidney and bladder trouble and congestion of the liver. Upon the advice of his friends he decided to try Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. He was not disappointed, for in a short while after he began its use, he was in better health than he had been in years before.

In speaking of Favorite Remedy, Mr. Winne said: "It has done more for me than all the physicians I ever employed, and I most unhesitatingly recommend it to any one suffering from kidney, liver or urinary troubles, for it will cure them.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the acknowledged specific for all diseases arising from acidity of the blood, and will cure dyspepsia, rheumatism, scrofula, eczema, kidney, liver and urinary troubles.

You can not afford to trifle with health and life. Putting off treatment when dangerous symptoms exist is slow suicide. Accept the aid of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it has restored thousands to health and strength.

Afflicted With Rheumatism.

Mr. George A. Mills of Lebanon, Conn., says: "I was afflicted with rheumatism in my back all last winter. It was so severe at times that I could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. I tried different remedies without receiving any relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days, according to directions, my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. I have since recommended it to others and know they have been benefited by its use.

Carlton Cornwell, foreman of the Gazette, Middletown, N. J., believes that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy should be in every home. He used it for a cold and it affected a speedy cure. He says: "It is indeed a grand remedy; I can recommend it to all. I have also seen it used for whooping cough, with the best results." 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of 18 East 15th St., New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy from druggist H. H. Lane, Peekskill, N. Y. Such good results followed its use that he sent back to Mr. Lane for two bottles more of the same remedy. Those who give this medicine a trial are seldom satisfied with any other when again in need of such a preparation. It is unequalled for coughs and colds.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

His Mother.

She thought about him days and nights—
Her only son—her sleep oft losing;
She viewed him in so many lights
The mingled beams became confusing.
His budding powers each hour enchanted
The fears, her heart forever painting,
Lest on mistaken lines advanced
His mental and his moral training.

With prescience of his growing need,
She pored o'er every scheme presented,
And tried, in teaching him to read,
Seven several systems late invented,
Each game he learned was but a veil
For information's introduction,
Each seeming simple fairy tale
She barbed with ethical instruction.

And oft she said, her dear brown eyes
With tender terror wide expanded,
"Oh, I must strive to grow more wise!
Think, think, what care is here demanded!
How dreadful should my teaching's flaw,
My unguessed errors subtly harm him,
Or fortune's arrows wound because
His mother failed in proof to arm him!"

And yet, when that young boy—whose look
Was like some fair boy-prince, as painted
By rare Vandyke—his soul a book
By blot of falsehood quite untainted,
Inquired, "Mamma, what's veal?" with mild
Untroubled smile, in accents clearest,
She told that little, trusting child,
"The wooly, baby sheep, my dearest!"

ONE GOOD TURN PRODUCED ANOTHER.

It was a beautiful hat, there was no doubt about it. The man who sat just back of her was in a towering rage; he said there were 12 yards of lace on it, a dozen sand-hill cranes, two jet buckles, a bushel of roses, and three pins. His wife demurred to this.

"Oh, no, Henry," she said, "you are prejudiced. I don't think the birds are quite so large as sand-hill cranes, and I very much doubt if there are more than 10 yards of lace on it."

"Well, a Thomas concert isn't a millinery show-room, anyhow," snarled her lord. "Look at her now. She makes Mr. Thomas look like the headless horseman afoot."

"O, don't; she might hear you!"

"I don't care if she does;" but he lowered his voice. "I hope her husband made a jolly row when the bill came in. I'm sure he did if the price corresponded with it."

"The size of a bonnet has nothing to do with its cost, dear," said his wife wearily.

"Humph! it ought. I believe I'll speak to her; the music is too good to——"

"Oh, Henry, don't; she looks so cross."

"I'm not afraid." He leaned forward and made a motion to address the lady, but when he met her eye he fell back in his chair and became absorbed in the orchestra.

The lady was evidently nervous. She kept moving about in her chair and the hat moved with her; sometimes she merely dismembered Mr. Thomas to his gaze; sometimes the whole orchestra was blotted out.

The man back of her enjoyed the music intermittently. Finally, when the last musician went into eclipse he leaned forward.

"Madam," he said in tones of courteous ferocity, "one ought not to interfere with the enjoyment of others. Will you kindly remove your hat? It obscures my view entirely."

The lady's face cleared: "With pleasure, sir," she said. "I quite agree with your remark. I did not like to speak sooner, but one good turn deserves another. Will you kindly desist from beating time on the back of my chair?"

STORY OF A FELINE BENJAMIN.

A clergyman had a cat which was a great favorite in the family, and endowed with some qualities not usually credited to her humble species. Puss at one time had a very interesting family of little kittens. They were all bright and active, but one of them was observed to have a greater resemblance to its mother than the rest, and was indeed the prettiest kitten of the whole, and the mother showed a peculiar attachment to it. A neighbor begged one of them, and being allowed her choice selected the favorite and carried it home. All this occurred in the absence of the feline mother, who, on her return, evidently observed, with concern the absence of her pet. She immediately commenced searching the house and outbuildings, insisted on having the doors opened for her admission to all the rooms in the house, and when satisfied that it was not on the premises she instituted a similar search throughout the neighborhood. Occasionally she would return to her remaining little ones for the purpose of meeting their demands on her for nourishment, and then she would again renew the search for her lost favorite. Having explored the premises of all the near neighbors she at length entered the last house in the village, where she finally found the object of her long and persevering pursuit. She caressed it with every manifestation of maternal fondness and delight, fed it, and then, much to the surprise of the lady of the house, took her departure, leaving the kitten behind. She was not, however, long absent. In a few hours she returned, bringing one of her other kittens in her mouth, which she placed on the floor beside the newly-found. "Ah!" thought the lady," so I am to have the mother and all her progeny quartered upon me." This, however, was not the intention of the cat; for after caressing the kitten she had brought for a few moments she took the other in her mouth, and carried it to its former home, and never afterwards visited the one she had given in exchange for it.

"Well, did you vote?" said Mrs. Spudkins to her daughter, as the latter removed her wraps on election day in 1920. "Why, mamma, I'll tell you how it was," replied the earnest young girl. "A real nice young man—I suppose he was one of the election officers—came up and asked what ticket I was going to vote, and when I told him he said: But surely you are not old enough yet to cast a ballot, miss," so what could I do but smile sweetly at the compliment and come away?"—Harper's Bazar.

"And so he has succeeded in getting engaged to the heiress?" "Yes, he is now her affinanced."—Washington Star.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

A Well-Known Railroad Man's Experience. Life Saved in a Way Which is Wonderful, And Ought to be Told Everywhere, Far and Wide.

MR. CHARLES ANNABLE.

There is no better known railroad man than Mr. Charles Annable, who resides at 20 Jordan Ave., Brunswick, Me. He has occupied trusted positions for thirty years on the Maine Central R. R.

"Yes," said Mr. Annable to the writer, "I can tell some remarkable stories from my long thirty years' railroad experience, but something has happened recently which is of the greatest importance to the people. Before I speak of myself, however, let my wife relate her wonderful experience."

"I have been troubled," began Mrs. Annable, "so bad with neuralgia that I could not turn my head in bed. It seemed as though my head was paralyzed, I was so troubled with heart disease and palpitation that a good many nights I thought I might pass away during the night.

"I suffered severely, and expected every day would be my last. My head seemed sometimes as though it would be paralyzed, and the least exertion would upset me and render me terribly weak and nervous. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and it completely cured me—made me well and strong again.

"It seems as though my cure was almost a miracle, for I am now cured. My neighbors, well knowing my condition, are astonished at my recovery, and I cannot half highly enough express my gratitude for this wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I shall be glad to answer inquiries at any time."

"I also have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy," said Mr. Annable, "and have derived great benefit from its use; I know it is the best of all medicines. I have recommended it to many of my friends, and shall continue to do so upon every chance."

The enthusiasm of Mr. and Mrs. Annable in regard to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is not to be wondered at. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, wonderful because it cures almost everybody who uses it. It makes the sick well everywhere. It gives health and strength to the weak, tired and nervous sufferer. It gives good digestion to the dyspeptic, sweet sleep to the sleepless, and makes life again a joy and pleasure to those whom weak nerves and tired brains have rendered depressed in spirits, melancholy, discouraged and well nigh hopeless. Use it and it will make you well. Doctors recommend it because it is the discovery and prescription of the well known physician, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who is without doubt the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted in all cases without charge, personally or by letter.

KEEP WARM BY BREATHING.

A method of keeping warm worth trying next winter is suggested by Dr. E. B. Sangree, in the American Therapenist. It is by taking deep inspirations.

On one very cold afternoon of last winter, says the doctor, though walking briskly along I was uncomfortably cold; feet and hands were very cold, and my ears so chilled as frequently to require the application of my heavily gloved hands. In addition, the whole surface of the skin was unpleasantly chilled; "creeps" ever and anon running up and down my spinal column and radiating thence over the body and extremities; in short, a condition that every reader of this article has doubtless many a time experienced. I then began taking an exercise often employed before with benefit: deep forced inspirations, holding the air as long as possible before expulsion.

After a few inhalations the surface of my body grew warmer, and a general sense of comfort pervaded me. Continuing, the next to feel the effects of the effort were my previously frigid ears. They grew agreeably warm, and within the time required to walk three blocks, at the previous pace, hands and feet partook of general warmth, and I felt as comfortable as if the same length of time had been passed by a glowing fire.

The happy results obtained from this simple method are probably owing to several causes:

The cold, of course, chills the surface of the body and contracts the superficial blood vessels, usually affecting first the hands, feet and ears, and afterward the general body surface. Contraction of the blood vessels results both in less blood to the part and in stagnation of the current, thus rendering the tissues still able to resist the cold. Deep forced inspirations not only stimulate the blood current by direct muscular exertion, but also by compressing and expanding the lungs the flow of blood is greatly hastened through this organ, and on account of the increased amount of oxygen inhaled, this abundant supply of blood is thoroughly oxygenated, tissue metabolism is increased and more heat necessarily produced.

Many times unavoidable exposure, as in riding, driving, standing and the like, for a longer or shorter time in the cold, has been the cause of severe and even fatal congestive troubles, such as pleurisies and pneumonias, and a means of quickly stimulating the flagging peripheral circulation which a person has always with him, and which can be employed without moving a step, is one that ought not to be neglected or forgotten.

GYMNASTICS FOR THE LUNGS.

Air is to the lungs what food is to the stomach. Its importance may be judged from the fact that a healthy human being requires sixty-six gallons of air per hour. The lungs consist of 1,800,000,000 lung cells, which, if they were spread out would cover two hundred square meters. This proves the usefulness of the lungs. We must breathe, and if we do not instinctively understand how to do it properly we should learn. Hence lung gymnastics. But few breathe properly. Look at the children over their lessons or the accountant over his books. Can you hear them breathe? Nay, they do it so feebly that it does not affect their position or countenance. To breathe correctly is an art, and must be learned, though nature ought to have given everyone the faculty. In the first place it is wrong to draw the breath through the mouth. The nose is the natural avenue to the lungs. In the nose are provided cavities in which the air is warmed before it comes to the lungs. The nose also contains excretions which absorb the impurities of the air. We all commit a great fault by not breathing with force. To understand what a true forceful breath is, bare the breast and look into your glass. The ordinary breathing scarcely moves the chest; but hold the breath for an instant before it is blown out and you will see the chest move. This is right. We must breathe so forcefully that the chest moves up and down, or visibly expands and contracts.

"Artificial" breathing consists in forcing the air in and out of the lungs so strongly that the chest visibly expands and contracts. To learn to practice that it is well in the beginning to stand up straight against a wall. For instance, placing the heels together, resting the arm upon the hip, then push the chest forward, while the abdomen is contracted so much that the weight of the person falls upon the foremost part of the feet. After having come into this position, close the mouth and draw in the air slowly. After a long or deep breath one ought to hold that breath for an instant before it is blown out again. By holding the breath the air comes to act on the whole surface of the blood, nourishing it and removing the impure gases. The lungs must be perfectly emptied before being refilled, and that can only be done by forceful breathing. When we make those experiments the body must not be tied down by close-fitting garments, bands or an overloaded stomach. The best time is in the morning and before meals. The exercises should always be taken in free, fresh and pure air, or at least before an open window. Five minutes exercise every day will do wonders for a healthy person. We must not expect miracles for unhealthy persons from lung gymnastics. We ought to practice before we get sick. Sometimes the practice would prevent the sickness. At any rate, it will prolong life.—N. Y. Weekly.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST SALVE in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested? Trial bottles free at LeGro & Lynde's, Palmer; G. L. Keeney's, Monson; F. A. Spencer's, Ware.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

HE'S DEAD AT PRESENT.—Julius Cæsar was considered a great man, and so he was. But he had his limitations and some unknown writer gives a few illustrations: He never rode on a 'bus in his life; he never spoke into a telephone; he never sent a telegram; he never entered a railway train; he never read a newspaper; he never viewed his troops through a field glass; he never read an advertisement; he never used patent medicine; he never cornered the wheat market; he never crossed the Atlantic; he never was in a machine shop; he never went to a roller skate rink; he never controlled a manufacturing company; he never dictated a letter to a typewriter girl; he never invested in railway stock; he never played a game of billiards; he never saw an electric light; he never listened to a phonograph; he never posted a letter; he never had his photograph taken.

WHAT GEN. SHERIDAN SAID.—An American gentlemen went over the field of Waterloo with a guide, who boasted that he escorted Gen. Sheridan over the scene of Napoleon's great defeat. "What did Gen. Sheridan say?" asked my friend. "Oh, nothing." "He must have said something." "Well, he only said, 'It was a —— —— good place for a fight.'"—San Francisco Argonaut.

"I'll tell you a tale that is positively hair raising." "For Jupiter's sake, tell it to Jobson; he's bald headed!"—Judge.

Old and Young suffer alike from General Debility. It is a common disease and results from a variety of causes. It should not be confounded with fatigue, which is transitory. In General Debility the weakness, unless arrested, will become permanent. The lost energy must be renewed, ambition stimulated, and the system built up. This can be accomplished by the use of

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

The Old Schoolhouse.

With the red paint worn from the humble walls,
With its shutterless windows blank and wide,
With never a foot of land of its own
Of the fields about it on every side,
With a rusted lock and a worn door-stone,
The little old schoolhouse to ruin falls,
While the shadows and sun throw warp and woof
Aslant the shingles askew on its roof.

Within, the desks are few and small, and straight
And short the aisles that run across the floor;
A broken chair, the teacher's vacant throne,
Still keeps its place beside the sagging door,
Through whose wide crack a bright eye sometimes shone,
To spy the land when lagging feet came late,
But the night is day, and the day is night,
And there's never a teacher or child in sight.

A mile away, where the brown river runs,
The old-time teacher is taking his rest,
Careless if scholars shall work or shall play,
Idle himself, with his hands on his breast.
He has lain in his grave for many a day;
And the wind and the rain loiter at will,
Where the old man sleeps on the brow of the hill.

On land and on sea, in field and in town
The old-time pupils are doing their work,
But their eyes are dimmed and their hair is white,
And the shoulder that pushed now fain would shirk,
As the schoolday lengthens into the night;
But the master Time, and his colleague Fate,
Know no excuse for the boy who is late.

Yet so perverse are the souls of men,
Though we struggle and strain till hearts shall break
For the prizes we leave when school is done,
For the foolish baubles the masters make,
Not one of us all would go back—not one—
To be a child in the schoolhouse again,
When the shadow and sun throw warp and woof
Aslant the shingles askew on the roof.

"CAP'N PAT" OF THE CANAL.

He was only a canal boy, with brown unsmiling eyes and a brown face, who used rough language toward the mules now and then and lost his temper frequently at being called "Cap'n Pat." Short and thick-set and strong was Cap'n Pat—"powerful strong," said the keepers of the locks when they saw him pulling and hustling with the chain or pushing the mules vigorously "a little away there." "Powerful strong," thought the captain, in reality, as he sat at the end of the dock, moving the rudder to and fro; "powerful strong, and powerful sturdy, and powerful stubborn." "Ho, you, Pat!" he called loudly, loosen the rope a bit; the next thing you'll have the off mule tumbling into the canal."

The boy, thus ordered, in a nonchalant manner loosened the rope, shrugged his shoulders, slashed his whip and went on.

"Thinks he knows it all," muttered the man.

Except for the voice of the captain calling out orders to Pat, and the everlasting tinkle of the mule bell, no sounds disturbed the canal. Further back they had had the rush of the river, but here the river seemed far away—a woods and a marsh between it and the tow-path. Without a tremble of the deck the boat glided on, the captain incessantly stirring the rudder. Out of a hole in the floor of the deck protruded the pipe of the cooking-stove, from which puffed at intervals volumes of coal gas. Another smell mingled with that of the gas—an appetizing odor of stewed tomatoes and frying ham. Suddenly a black head popped up from the cabin door and the lank body of a negro scrambled upon deck.

The captain grunted an assent, rose and moved to the side. The negro straddled the rudder and swayed with it to and fro listlessly. Ben's black face was sad and weary; he had been "on the canal" since childhood.

The captain's eyes were fastened upon Pat as he walked along the towpath a little in front of the mules. "None of 'em don't like boatin'," he ejaculated.

"Naw," acquiesced the negro, "none of 'em don't like boatin'. Pat he don't like boatin' for nothing. Pat wants for to farm."

"He thinks the money comes too slow," said the captain.

"It do come slow," muttered Ben. "Last year it were a dollar a day and now 'tain't but 75 cents. Boatin' ought to fetch higher wages'n that." He shuffled his clumsy boots and continued, speaking louder: "Pat likes for to plow and harrow. The boy is clean sick o' the towpath."

The captain sighed. "There's more money in boatin' than farmin'," he said, positively; "the weather's got more to do with hinderin' crops than it has with hinderin' boatin'."

"That's so," agreed the negro; "but the floods they hinders both. They ain't half fixed up the canal, nohow. Last year we made the down trip in five days; now it takes us six and seven. I heard the boat scrape the bottom a minute ago."

"The new locks is too narrow," grumbled the captain. "A boat like this'n can pull through, but some of the old boats ain't goin' to stand it. They's fixin' the canal up cheap, but it'll cost 'em more in the long run. Ho, you Pat, ain't you never gunno look out for the turns?"

"It's a hard life for a boy," said the negro pensively. "Up at 3 and 4 o'clock in the mornin', and nothin' but the boat and the mules and the canal to look at, layin' down late at night, sore in every limb. It ain't healthy for to sleep on the water; 'twasn't never meant, I reckon. Pat's got the sore throat."

The captain cleared his own throat. "There ain't no wonder about Pat having the sore throat," he said roughly. "I found him this morning with the winder open over him. You can't lay with the winder open over you in the summer time along the canal, much less in the fall. He makes up a furious fire for the dish-washing, and then he sleeps with the winder open. No more sense than a——." He rose, still muttering, and went down into the cab. In seven minutes he was back again, having eaten his dinner.

Without a word the negro relinquished in the captain's favor the seat upon the rudder, walked along the deck, picked up a long board and called shrilly to Pat. The board was thrown quickly out across the canal, its one end resting upon the boat, its other end upon the towpath. The negro crossed this temporary bridge with a few rapid steps and Pat in a similar manner reached the boat, and' turning reached the plank just as the end on the towpath slipped into the water.

"See to the mules before you got your dinner," ordered the captain.

Cap'n Pat set briskly to work. Three times he let a wooden bucket into the water of the canal by the stable of the mules. Then he disappeared into the "hay house," and, coming out with his arms full of corn, gave that in turn to the mules.

"How many ears apiece?" cried the captain.

"Six," answered the boy.

"Throw 'em in a couple more; they've got a long pull at the next level."

Pat did as he was bid.

"Now, go get your dinner."

The boy came up from the cab very soon. He sat down near the edge of the boat, he passed his sleeve over his prespiring forehead.

"'Tain't warm," said the captain.

"Yes, 'tis," retorted Pat.

"How's your throat?" asked the father, suddenly.

"Don't hurt so awful much," returned the boy. "Say, let me take the rudder."

"No, set awhile and rest. Ben can wait for his dinner. They've got diphtheria posted in the town. Mills hollered it over from his boat."

The boy laughed derisively.

"You take keer of your throat or you'll have to see a doctor."

Again Cap'n Pat laughed. "I wonder everybody boatin' don't catch some'n," he said. "If I thought I was to keep on boatin' all my life I wouldn't care if I did have it." He looked his father squarely in the face, his brown cheeks flushing a little. "I wouldn't keer if I'd die; I'd be glad of it."

The captain steadied himself upon the rudder; his face, too, flushed. "I tell you what, you can stay home," he said, in a voice hoarse with passion. "I've had enough of you. You can go to farmin' at 14 and starve. I'll bring Billy along next. He'll like it for the first season. That's the way with you all."

"I never liked it," said Pat stubbornly. "After the one down trip, if I'd had any say, I'd a-quit; I'd gone home on the cars."

"No, you never liked it," said the captain, contemptuously. "When you was little they had to keep you tied all the time lest you'd get off the boat into the water. And you was born on the boat when we was tied up at Georgetown for the winter."

"You'd better give me the rudder," said the boy ungraciously.

The man stood on his feet and stretched his arms, and the boy settled himself upon the rudder.

The temporary bridge was put down and lifted; the captain tramped along the tow-path, and the negro ate his dinner in the cab.

"Cooo-o-o-o-o-o!" The captain's hands were to his mouth as he gave the call. He repeated the "Cooo-o-o-o-o" impatiently. He liked to see the keeper ready at the lock before he reached it. "Not a sign of him," he muttered. "Cooo-o-o-o-o!"

Then the keeper appeared, but he raised the lower gate instead of the upper, a boat coming up the canal was ahead of Connel's.

The keeper of the White Lock cried out jovially, "Well, Cap'n Pat, you'll have to wait." The boy was with the mules again; Capt. Connel was on the boat.

Slowly the empty boat rose in the canal, rose out of the canal with the windows of its little cab seemingly away up in the air. As it moved out of the lock some one let a bucket, fastened to the end of a rope, away down into the canal.

"Seen anything of Ruffles?" called the captain of the empty boat "They say he's takin' hard times easy."

"Not in sight o' the hanted house, I hope."

Cap'n Pat changed the mules at the lock. The three animals in the stable were wild to get out on the top-path, and the three on the tow-path, in their gladness, almost tumbled into the stables.

"You get aboard and feed the mules, said the captain, "I'll take the four-mile level. Be sure you water 'em plenty."

The boat went gliding almost rapidly, the water in the four-mile level was pretty flush, considering the level on the other side of the lock.

That night the boat tied up, along with three others, at Seven Locks, and the next morning the negro grinned again when he called Pat. The sun was streaming into the windows of the cab as the boy rubbed and then opened his eyes.

"Give you late sleep, boy," said Ben, "your pap's been worryin' about your throat. The dyphtherea posters is up everywhere through the town."

Apparently Capt. Connel was worrying about nothing, except getting his cargo, with all speed, into the city. He and Ben had been working since 3 in the morning. The boat was moving swiftly down that part of the canal known as "Log Wall," when Pat, having eaten his breakfast, appeared on deck.

The canal here is said to be bottomless, and it is clear and shining like the waters of a river. Capt. Connel was fairly swinging along, lashing his whip. For several miles the captain kept up his hurried pace, then he sent forth his imperative call: "Cooo-o-o-o-o!"

The boys at the locks near the town hollered "Capt'n Pat" at the top of their impudent little voices; even the men around the locks tried to stir the boy's ire; but, for some reason or other, Pat, stubbornly refused to become excited. He was indeed making his last trip on the canal. The captain never gave a false promise, never, under any circumstance, went back on his word. Ben had said that morning: "So you'se goin' to leave boatin' and go to farmin', Pat?" and Pat had given a grunt and answered, "I b'lieve so."

The negro astride the rudder was counting on his fingers very slowly. "Three more trips, ain't it, Pat?" he asked; "that is, bein' the ice sets in airly."

"One never knows about the ice," said Pat. "You goin' to farmin' along with Bub, Pat?"

Ben regarded him admiringly. "You'll get along, Pat," he said in a positive way. "You'd get along at anything; you could manage a boat a'ready if you keered for boatin'."

Pat's mother, for one, was glad when she heard the news, given sullenly by the captain, joyfully by Pat. All the moroseness had vanished from the boy's brown eyes; he went dancing in a clumsy fashion over the kitchen floor. Pat was his mother's favorite, and "sech a boy for the farm."

Billy was made ready for the next trip; the patches were sewed on his clothes with double thread; he was given a change of undergarments, and told to put 'em on Sunday mornin'. Billy was in a fever of happiness. Mrs. Connel hoped in her heart that he would like the canal. There had been three boys before Pat; none of them had relished "boatin'."

"Boys ought to choose their work," remarked Mrs. Connel sagely; "it makes 'em so different. Now, Pat, since he's workin' for Mr. Rawlins, why he's a-whistlin' all the time." She laughed. She had pretty, dark eyes, like Pat's. "He's used to be so glum on the canal."

The captain looked at her and smiled. "I do what I can for 'em," he said, "but Pat he was rather young to turn loose. I wish as one of 'em was to stick by me," he added sadly: "I'm afeered o' Billy; he ain't got the go o' Pat. Pat seemed to understand the work. a-body would a-thought he was cut out for boatin'. I wish he'd never knowed there was such a thing as farmin'."

Of all the canal folks it was Capt. Connel alone who caught the diphtheria, which continued to rage in the low part of the town. He caught it on the water during the last trip, one day's journey from his home. He was laid on the shelf all winter. In the spring he came out too early to see to purchasing the mules, and caught another disease, so the people said. When the boats started running, Capt. Connel, pale and anxious-eyed, was stretched upon his bed.

"The boys'll help," said the mother, softly, "they's all good boys."

"They got their wives," said the sick man, hopelessly.

"Pat'll help," assured the mother.

"How's a 15-year-old boy a-farmin' goin' to help to any account?" muttered the sick man.

"Mr. Rawlins is goin' to take Pat West," Mrs. Connel added in an awed whisper. "Pat, he's expectin' some day for to own a ranch or some'n."

"I ain't a-goin' to get out o' here in a hurry," said Connel, irritably; "there's more the matter with my back than the doctor's lettin' on."

"Cap'n Connel may never run a boat again." The news went from neighbor to neighbor, and there were gloomy headshakes over it, and dire prophecies in regard to Mrs. Connel and the children. The news came to Pat and stunned him for an instant. He was standing in the kitchen door of the Rawlins farm, twirling his cap in his hand. In a week he would be miles and miles away. No more stones to pick up and haul off the hilly fields; he was going to the broad prairies; he expected some day to own a ranch. "Capt. Connel may never run a boat again." "Who's a-goin' to run it, then?" muttered the boy. The glimpse of the broad prairie vanished suddenly. Pat was running down the road.

Very quietly Pat entered his father's room. He had never seen Capt. Connel look like that, so despairingly hopeless.

The sick man tried to smile. "You come to bid me good-by, Pat?" He held out his wasted hand, the hand that for 25 years had taken its turn at the rudder.

"No," said the boy, with a quick sob, "I've come to tell you I'm goin' to run the boat; I can do it."

Then the boy was on his knees, the white, trembling hands were on his head, and with a glad quiver of suppressed passion Connel's weak voice pronounced the words, "Cap'n Pat, Cap'n Pat."—Louise R. Baker, in Washington Evening Star.

A MORNING IN A BRICK YARD.

One of the important business enterprises of Palmer, conducted by Palmer men and capital, is often overlooked because the plants are located in Amherst and West Brimfield; allusion is made to the large brick yards in these places owned by Marcy & Gardner, of Palmer.

What interest can attract to a brick yard? says one. Well, let us see. In the first place, brick making is one of the oldest manufacturies on record. As far back as the days of King Nimrod his people enthused over the matter to such an extent that they undertook to build a brick tower which should reach to heaven; but if they failed in that attempt their successors accomplished wonderful results in the building of Babylon, whose tell-tale bricks, still remain to reveal the records of that age. From those days to the present, brick making has played an important part in the march of civilization, and to-day our cities could hardly exist but for this important material.

On the Euphrates and the Nile they dried their bricks in the sun without the aid of artificial heat. Thus much for the antiquity of the business. Having accepted an invitation from Mr. Marcy, one of the managers of the brickyard at Amherst, I spent the morning of a bright autumn day during the past season looking over the plant, and found so much of interest there that this article is the outcome of the visit. The plant includes a tract of about 110 acres, once known as the Miller farm, located on both sides of the New London Northern railroad near South Amherst. The brickyard proper is located just west of the track, connected by a spur with the main line. Here are located three kilns under large sheds, a large number of drying racks, and a thirty-five-horse power engine to run the grinding and mixing machines. The material for brick is two-thirds clay and one-third sand, with a small amount of Venetion red to give the proper color. This mass is thrown into a container and drawn by rollers into the grinding machine, from which the mass goes to the moulds and is delivered at the rate of seventy-two brick per minute to the busy workmen, who take them away on trucks to the drying racks; 38,000 brick are turned out per day. It requires 625,000 to make up a kiln ready for burning, and seven days are devoted to that process. The output of brick is about 3,000,000 for the season of six months, during which time some 10,000 cords of wood are consumed in burning the brick. The working force consists of thirty-eight men. It is claimed, with good reason, that some of the best brick in the country is produced here.

This yard was opened some eight years ago, but has been greatly enlarged and remodeled by the present management. It is said that brick making was commenced in a small way on this farm soon after the settlement of the town. Captain Chester Miller burned the brick for his two-story house on the same farm ninety-five years ago; that was the first brick house erected in Amherst, and is still standing in good repair, good for another century.

The proprietors of this plant are greatly indebted to nature for the very kind way she had in laying down the material for their use; a few rods to the east of the yard the best of sand was carefully sifted ages ago and left there until wanted, together with a living spring of water to supply the engine; while just at the west an unlimited amount of the finest clay is found, where the bed is ten feet in thickness. This clay deposit extends for several miles north and south in the valley, and is practically inexhaustible. Dame nature must have devoted a great deal of time in the olden days grinding the granite up in the Pelham hills by the many processes peculiar to her laboratory, and washing it down here in flood time and putting it down layer by layer with the nicety of a skillful workman; but doubtless she kept a lake here under her control, because it required still water in which to perform this nice work of deposit; and when the work was finished and she had no further use for her placid water, she quietly dug a passage down to the valley of the Connecticut river and gave it leave of absence, in order to make way for other work in hand. Surely in the making of clay, as in the affairs of men, we find "the mills of the Gods grind slow, but they grind exceeding fine," and we of today are reaping the benefit of their patient work. O. P. ALLEN.

TIME TO SPEAK.—The Chicago Tribune tells of something that happened a short distance beyond the boundary line, over in Indiana.

The young man was waiting in the parlor for the young woman upstairs, and Lucy, aged 4, was entertaining him. The conversation lagged, and after a silence of several minutes Miss Lucy, who had attended the revival in her neighborhood the week previous, turned to the youth and gravely inquired:

"Mr. Paxley, have you anything to say for Christ?"

Thomes G. Lawler of Rockford, Ill., national commander of the G. A. R., took dinner at the depot restaurant yesterday noon while on his way from Vermont to Newport, R. I., and was visited at the station by several of the local Grand Army men and some personal acquaintances who are living in town.

There was trotting on Main street Monday afternoon and again Tuesday, but there is not quite enough snow to make the sport good. There is a fine ice foundation, and a very little snow would give an ideal surface for the steppers. Wednesday there was a race between A. T. Wing's "Dick" and H P. Holden's "Roscoe," in which the latter had the best of it.

The Quaboag Literary Circle will meet this evening in the library building, and a full attendance of members is desired. Rev. H. F. Moulton will read a historical essay on "England—the Magna Charta and the Evolution of the Parliament," Miss Anna Shaw will have charge of the "Round Table," and Miss Helen Converse will read a selection from Tennyson's poems.

Rev. Thomas Dixon of New York was greeted by a large audience at the Congregational church last Friday evening, when he gave the lecture which made the second entertainment in the series being furnished by the high school scholars. His subject was "Backbone," and the speaker held the closest attention of his audience for an hour and a half, handling the subject in a most interesting manner.

Keep watch of the weather to-morrow and make your plans for the remainder of the winter accordingly, for

"If Candlemas day be bright and fair
The half 'o the winter's to come, an' mair."

So if to-morrow the sun shines and the day be pleasant you may safely order a new supply of coal and be prepared for several weeks yet of cold frosts and chilling blasts. If however the skies should be overcast and the groundhog be unable to see his shadow when he peeps out of his hole, as he is reported to do on this day, there's a possibility that the meridian of the winter is passed.

W. B. Ham's fine black horse indulged in a lively run from near the state primary school to this village Sunday afternoon. One of the bolts holding the shafts in place dropped out, letting that side fall, which so startled the horse that he ran and threw the occupants of the sleigh out. The horse turned east on Main street and then north on Walnut, falling flat on the ice in making the last turn, but recovered its feet and ran to the head of the street and left the sleigh in the turn east again. The animal finally ran home, and beyond a few scratches was not seriously injured.

The ladies of the Lend-a-hand club of the Congregational church gave a complimentary supper Wednesday evening in the church parlors to the honorary members, husbands and invited guests of members. About sixty sat down to an excellent supper of escalloped oysters, cold meats, salad, coffee, cake, etc., after which most of the lights were turned out and the rest shaded while the ladies provided an entertainment which took the nature of a ghost story contest, it being somewhat startling to listen to some of the experiences claimed to have been passed through.

What appeared from Main street in this village to be a lively row, occurred just beyond the residence of H. Waid on the quarry road to Monson Wednesday afternoon. Four Italians on their way home met four on their way to this village, and apparently war was declared the moment the two factions met, for in about a minute all of the eight were flat on the ground. Officer Northrop went over from the village and captured five of them, loaded them on a sled and brought them to the lockup. In court yesterday morning through an interpreter the first announced that he wouldn't be guilty again if he could help it, and all finally pleaded not guilty. The evidence was given for the commonwealth, and all were fined $5 each, which was paid.

Eli J. Dimeaux, a carpenter employed on the new Odd Fellows' building, fell from near the roof at the front of the building to the ground Wednesday soon after dinner, and strange to relate is alive and doing well. He was standing on a ladder about 40 feet from the ground, with a board in his hand, when both feet slipped from the round and before he could grasp the ladder it was beyond his reach. He landed on a heap of rubbish and broken brick, striking on his right elbow and face, his elbow and nose being broken, and his face somewhat bruised. He was able to walk to the office of Dr. Wilkins, where he was cared for and afterward removed to his home at the Four Corners, where he is now quite comfortable. He is extremely fortunate in escaping with such slight injuries, as the ground was frozen hard and the fall was a long one.

Revere chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, publicly installed these officers Tuesday evening: W. M., Helen L. Robinson; W. P., Charles E. Fuller; A. M., Mrs. L. M. Grosvenor; secretary, Mrs. D. S. Davis; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Royce; conductress, Mrs. Jennie E. Weld; assistant conductress, Miss Jennie E. Brainerd; chaplain, Mrs. A. L. Frost; Ada, Mrs. G. A. Fuller; Ruth, Mrs. S. L. Wilbur; Esther, Mrs. A. K. Ruggles; Martha, Mrs. C. W. Brown; Electa, Mrs. E. S. Leach; warden, Mrs. E. M. Barnes; sentinel, S. W. Shumway. They were installed by Mrs. H. E. Ewing, past matron, and Mrs. Lamb, past grand marshal. After the installation the floral degree was worked, and remarks were made by Mrs. Ewing and Mrs. Lamb, the former giving a history of the formation of the order, and the latter congratulating the local chapter on its success. A collation was served after the exercises.

There is one Polander in Thorndike who is inclined to answer the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" in the affirmative. He was married a week ago last Saturday night, and last Sunday came to Judge Robinson and wanted his assistance in recovering his wife, who had left him and he thought had gone to Chicopee. He was made to understand that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter, but it was suggested that if an officer went with him to Chicopee the wife might be induced to return, and he persuaded Officer Studley to go with him. They found the woman, who asked if they had any papers, and on finding that they had none she refused to return with them, but after consultation with her friends she finally agreed to go to Thorndike with her husband. On Monday the husband again appeared and said that his wife had left him once more, but the court could not help him. The secret is that he is a Russian Pole and she an Austrian Pole, between which there is a fierce feud, and the woman did not know of his nationality when she married him.

The concert next Wednesday evening, to be given by the choir of the Congregational church, will no doubt draw a large audience. The choir will be assisted by the Alpha Mandolin and Guitar Club of Springfield, which has won an enviable reputation for its fine work. The following will be the programme:

PALMER CENTER.

The Oracle and Echo society is making preparations for an entertainment in the near future, which they expect to hold at Union Hall, Thorndike. It will probably be of the burnt cork variety.

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. Margaret Russell is on the sick list with a bad cold.

William Mansfield and Miss Julia Sullivan were married Tuesday by Father McKeany.

Miss West of Lowell, who has been visiting Agent Childs and wife, returned to her home Monday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church netted $25 from their supper and apron sale last week.

Mrs. E. J. Fuller and son Phillip, who have been visiting Mrs. Mary Ormes the past week, returned home Tuesday.

Dr. Mason, assistant secretary of the Freedman's Aid society of the M. E. church, will preach in the M. E. church next Sunday evening.

A party of young folks were coasting Monday night on Slattery hill, when one of the double rippers ran into Jimmie Long and hurt him quite seriously.

Rev. B. McKeany of St. Bartholomew's church sails to-morrow from New York for a four-months' trip abroad. Gibraltar will be the first stopping place, and the trip will include Naples, Alexandria, Cairo, up the Nile, Jerusalem, through Palestine, Athens, Rome, etc.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Mary Moran is home from Lynn.

Thomas J. Moran is able to be about again after a brief illness.

The benefit dance for Mrs F. Dano will be held this evening at Union Hall.

The scholars in the grammar school will go on a sleigh ride to Belchertown to-morrow.

Charles McCarthy, Sr., and Daniel Keefe were out hunting on Wednesday and captured a fine large fox.

A large number from this place witnessed the consecration of the new bell of St. Anne's church at Three Rivers last Sunday.

M. J. Sullivan of Chicopee, well known in town as a teacher of music, will be here on Friday of each week for the purpose of giving instruction.

Classes 4 and 5 of the Congregational church Sunday school will give Francis Nelson a surprise this evening at his home on the Ware road.

Morrill Prescott left here on Tuesday for Roswell, Ga., where he is to be employed in the mill of the Roswell Mfg. Co. as overseer, and takes with him the best wishes of many friends.

Robinson & Taylor of Palmer, who have been running a branch store here for several months, have decided not to continue the business, and will close out their stock before leaving town.

John K. Walker, a well-known resident of this place, died at his home on School street Monday after an illness of several months. Mr. Walker was employed at one time by the Thorndike Co. as yard boss. The funeral was held on Thursday at 2 p. m. A wife and daughter survive him.

The following programme will be given by Bird's Orchestra of Marlboro at the Foresters ball next Friday evening, and it will be well worth the price of admission. Tickets can be procured at the post office and from members of the order:

PROGRAMME.

Mrs. Sirois and Mrs. Davis are ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. James Trickett and son Elton are spending this week in Waltham.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckley of Oldham, England, are spending this week in town among friends.

Mrs. L. B. Kendrick spent a part of this week in Turner's Falls, with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kendrick.

Rev. G. S. Butler is spending a few days at Boston and vicinity, but is expected to return to-morrow evening.

There has been no skating this week, but to the manifest delight of the small boys the coasting has been excellent.

Yesterday afternoon the ladies of the Union church shipped five barrels of clothing to Nebraska, to aid the sufferers in that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Getchell and daughters Alice and Ida, of Springfield, spent a part of the week with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murdock.

Mr. and Mrs. Heman Fish, surrounded by a number of their friends, celebrated their wedding's eighth anniversary last Saturday evening. Several from out of town were present and the event was one long to be remembered.

Next Friday a union temperance meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., will be held in the Baptist church. It is being planned to have a speaker from out of town, and the announcement to this effect will be made from the pulpits next Sunday.

While an amateur fish dealer was journeying from Thorndike to this place yesterday afternoon his sleigh broke down, in consequence of which the fish were distributed over the snow and the man had to go back to the place from whence he came, in search of another vehicle.

The A. O. U. W. is arranging for a supper and entertainment, to be held the 12th of February, to which every one favorable to the order is invited. The fraternity has also voted to have monthly suppers during the current year, and to contrive other attractions likely to increase the membership of the order.

Last Sunday was an eventful day at St. Anne's French Catholic church, as it was the occasion of the dedication of the new bell. Bishop Beaven of Springfield was present, and also a number of clergymen from the surrounding parishes, among whom were Father Beaudoin of Indian Orchard, Father Yenes of Mittineague, Father Crevier of Holyoke, Father Lynch of Thorndike, Father McKeany of Bondsville, Father Sheehan of Ware and Father Cartier of New Haven. The bishop addressed the congregation at the morning service, and one of the visiting divines gave an excellent discourse to the young people in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Miss Jennie Lambert of Holyoke presided at the organ, and Mrs. Bouley and other local talent sang very creditably. The auditorium was filled to its greatest capacity, as there was a large representation from all the other churches present at the exercises. The church is now furnished with one of the best heating systems in this locality, and is in remarkably good repair in every particular. The new bell, which is a very superior one, will also be a great addition to the various devotional occasions. On the whole, it may justly be said that the pastor and society deserve a great deal of credit for the energy manifested in promoting the interests of this prospering church.

THE gold reserve in the treasury has got so low that President Cleveland on Monday sent a message to Congress recommending that the treasury be given authority to issue 3 per cent, 50-year bonds, payable in gold, the bonds to be sold for gold for the reserve, or to retire and cancel the greenback and Sherman coin notes, or for both.

OCCASIONALLY justice overtakes a man with rapid strides in New York state. A couple of weeks ago Quigley, the forging broker, was one of the popular men about town; now he's quartered in Sing Sing, with a fifteen years job ahead of him. All because he couldn't get rich fast enough by honest methods.

IT'S expensive business all around, running a strike. It is estimated that it will cost the taxpayers of Brooklyn about a million dollars for the expenses of keeping the mob in check during the recent strike of the street car employes.

A TERRIBLE story of the perils of the deep is recorded this week in the loss of the 303 lives on the steamer Elbe of the North German Lloyd line, bound from Bremen for New York, which went down early Wednesday morning about 50 miles off Lowestoft, the easternmost point of England. The night was very dark, but lights about showed that other craft were in the vicinity. Rockets were sent up at regular intervals to warn other craft to keep out of the Elbe's way, when suddenly the lights of a steamer were seen approaching. The number of the rockets was doubled, but the steamer came rapidly on and struck the Elbe just abaft the engine room, cutting deeply into the vessel. As the steamer separated from the Elbe the latter filled rapidly and went down in 20 minutes. As the water poured into the vessel she listed heavily to one side, making it impossible to get at the boats on the other side of the deck. Some of the boats were lowered and swamped, while one managed to live through the seas until 11 o'clock, when the people were picked up, only 21 of the 324 persons on board being known to be saved. It is reported that the steamer which collided with the Elbe did not stay by to learn the extent of the damage done, but steamed away at once. Detailed accounts of the disaster are not yet obtainable, and the reason of the collision or on whom the responsibility rests cannot now be determined.

THE strike of the Brooklyn street railway employes has resulted in abject failure, as it was doomed to from the moment the strikers resorted to violence to gain their desired object. The strikers succeeded in stopping business on the roads for a couple of weeks and in causing them a considerable loss of revenue, besides a big bill for damages caused by the acts of violence against the property of the roads. And what have they gained? A chance to look elsewhere for work, most of them. The roads promptly engaged new men as rapidly as possible, and when the strike was lost refused to treat with the old men as a body, preferring to deal with them as individuals instead of through labor unions, and declining to let the new men go. Queer, that this lesson of so many strikes is never learned.

THE annual monkeying with the salaries of state officials has begun in the Legislature, and several applications for a raise are in. Salaries are not being very generally advanced in the business world, and there is no reason why men who have hustled to get their present places, knowing what the salary was, should not wait for the better times along with the rest. Let the salaries alone for this time, and keep the state tax down to the $1,500,000 which has been estimated on the old basis.

"NOBODY to blame" is the verdict returned in the inquest as to the deaths by the grade crossing accident at Southbridge last Thanksgiving day, when a train crashed into a barge load of young people on their way to a football game. Nobody to blame? What about the community which allows such a death-trap to exist unguarded in its midst? The way o t is easy, and the cost on the community small. And is the railroad to be freed from all responsibility in such matters?

REPRESENTATIVE BLISS of West Springfield has introduced a bill into the Legislature to prevent the offensive use of buildings for advertising purposes. While there is some question about the constitutionality of the proposed measure, there is no doubt a wide sentiment in favor of something which will enable a traveler through the country to occasionally see a barn which does not proclaim on its sides the virtues of some patent medicine.

JUDGE Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar died at his home in Concord last evening at the age of nearly 79.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, JANUARY 30, 1895.

Senator Whitcomb of Hampden has introduced a bill which provides that in every city which votes for license the board of police commissioners, and that even if the city subsequently votes no-license, the existence of the commissioners shall not be affected thereby. This bill establishes in this class of cities the same sort of police administration as was established in Boston by act of 1885, and takes from the people to a material degree the right of administering their own affairs.

The hearing on the question of compensation for cattle which have been killed for tuberculosis by order of the state cattle commissioners will be held on February 5th by the committees on agriculture and public health, sitting jointly. This matter is of more interest to the farmers of the state than any other which will come up during the session, and many petitions have been received from them. One day the House journal gave nearly two pages to mention of the petitions which were presented the day before from the farmers, and that was only one day.

Gov. Greenhalge's refusal to pardon the Old Colony officials out of Plymouth jail has pleased many people of that county, though the friends of the men are disappointed.

In spite of the difficulty which many people have in making both ends meet and of the current impression that this is not a good year for raising salaries, a good many petitions from public officials for larger compensation have been received by the Legislature. First of these matters to come up has been the case of the insurance commissioners, which was not based upon a petition, but upon his own official recommendation that his salary be raised from $3500 to $5000. It was easy to get plenty of testimony from the insurance companies that he was worth anywhere from $5000 to $10,000 a year, and the insurance committee reported unanimously in favor of $5000. But the finance committee was not disposed to pass upon it unless it had been referred to the public service committee, which passes upon salaries. The insurance committee made a warm fight for their bill and their prestige, but were beaten by 103 to 53, which does not promise well for the insurance commissioner, nor for other efforts to get more pay.

The humane society has renewed its effort to compel the use of fly-nets in summer for all horses whose tails have been docked.

Whether or not one sympathizes with the women suffragists, the hearing in their behalf on Wednesday forenoon in the old hall of the House was well worth mention. Ten o'clock was the hour for the hearing to begin. By eight the women began to gather at the doors, determined to get a good place. Lady Henry Somerset was the chief attraction, and some came more to see than to hear, as they confessed. But such a sight the old hall probably never witnessed before. It was crowded to overflowing. Doorways and galleries, aisles and stairs were filled till no more could be crowded in. The audience was naturally in close sympathy with the pleaders for women, and the other side was not at all popular. The patience of the women, some might say their desire to talk, was equal to their enthusiasm, for they continued the session till quarter of two and then adjourned with the singing of America. There is no question but that a municipal suffrage bill will be reported, and each side is hopeful of victory. The approach last year to success has been a great stimulus to the women, and also a sharp spur to the opponents of suffrage.

Some of the leading figures from the auditor's report are of special public interest. The total state debt on Jan. 1, 1895, was $29,079,767. The decrease during 1894 was $5,768,649, but this was so skilfully managed by the use of sinking funds which had been set apart for the maturing obligations that the people did not feel the burden. Last year the state tax was $2,000,000, but Auditor Kimball believes that this year a tax of $1,500,000 will be enough. The total net cost of the Hoosac tunnel to the state up to Jan. 1, 1895, has been $28,697,925, and the state's expenditure on this account is said to be nearly at an end. The running expenses of the state in 1894 were $6,966,768. This is far beyond the tax, but there are fees, corporation taxes, bank taxes and incomes from funds, in addition to the ordinary state tax to make an income. A few of the largest items of expense are these: Interest, $1,361,900; Legislature, $364,323; executive department, $147,209; commissions, $404,605; public buildings, $727,614; state and military aid and its expenses, $616,104; charities, $652,427; reformatory and correctional institutions, $847,421; extermination of the gypsy moth, $112,591. These are big sums, but we are a numerous people with a great many wants.

While the great taxation fight is going on before the legislative committee, the same contesting parties will make their appeal to the public. Joint debates will be held in many large towns. The beginning will be in Springfield on next Friday evening, at the request of the Springfield board of trade. Afterwards like debates will be he held in Northampton, Pittsfield, Worcester, Fall River, New Bedford, Lowell, Lawrence and other places. Richard H. Dana will appear in Springfield for the Massachusetts anti-double taxation league, and will be assisted by others. The side of those who would put on the screws tighter for the taxation of personal property will be represented by Representative Bliss of West Springfield and some others whom he may select.

By the report of the state inspector of gas and gas meters, it was found that one meter was registering 36 per cent too fast, and another 32 per cent too slow, and others all the way between. The Brookline gas company furnishes gas of 26 candle power, or 2 per cent better than the Bay State company. The quality in Fitchburg is 17.60 candle power; Greenfield, 16.93; Quincy, 17.60, and in Westfield, 18.43. LANDON.

Alphonzo Markham.....Charles Howard
John.....George H. Seymour
Mary Mower.....Annie P. Seymour
Betty Blood.....Musa Babbitt
Lucy Blood.....Rachel Babbitt

Monson people are interested in the statement of receipts and expenditures of the county of Hampden for the year ending December 31st, 1894, which has recently been issued, and the town's account is as follows: County tax, $2580.76; dog licenses, $449.40; surplus of dog fund, $370.97; dog damages, $89.30; thus making a net cost to the town for county expenses $2359.17. There are individual receipts, not including the sum paid jurors, to the amount of $193.50. Monson stands seventh on the county tax, dog licenses, and surplus dog fund lists, and second on dog damages.

At St. Patrick's church the feast of purification will be observed to-morrow morning at 7.30 o'clock, at which service the candles will be blessed for the year. The taking of seat money has recently been abolished, both masses being free, the church depending entirely upon the receipts from pew money, and this has already resulted in an increase of church funds to the amount of $1000. A new method of teaching Bible history has been adopted in the Sunday school; after careful revision, for the purpose of making the language more simple, the typewriter and mimeograph are made use of.

The Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps sale, supper and entertainment, which takes place next Friday afternoon and evening, promises to be an affair of unusual interest. It is probably well known that the proceeds are to be given to Marcus Keep post for the purchase of a flag, and of course everyone wants the flag to be a good one. The sale in Memorial Hall will begin at 2 o'clock. Among the attractions for both old and young will be the "wonder tree." The entertainment, the nature of which is a secret, will be at 8 o'clock and will also be in the hall. The supper will be served in Grand Army Hall from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The Junior Epworth League pink tea, given in the Methodist church last Friday evening, was a success. The little waitresses wore pink caps and aprons, and looked very pretty. The entertainment was much enjoyed. A dialogue entitled, "A Place for Everything and Everything in Its Place," was well rendered, as were the other numbers on the programme. The sum cleared was about $14, with which the children are much pleased, as this is the first social given since the organization of the League several weeks ago. Mrs. T. H. Todd and Miss Mabelle L. Fay, who are the superintendents, had the management of the affair.

Maggie, wife of Peter Kearns, died Wednesday morning about 9 o'clock at her home on Cushman street, after giving birth to twin daughters, both of whom were doing well at last accounts. Mrs. Kearns was 40 years of age and leaves eight children, the eldest but 15 years. The family has lived in town about three years, Mr. Kearns having the position of second-hand in the weave room of Cushman's brick mill. Mrs. Kearns leaves two sisters and one brother, Katherine, Nellie and Frank, who live at Stafford Springs, and a brother, Martin Fitzpatrick, of Providence. The Ladies' Aid Society had the funeral in charge, which took place this morning at St. Patrick's church. The burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery.

The street in front of Pendergast's market at half past eight last Saturday evening was the scene of a discussion which more than a hundred persons congregated to hear, between Stage-driver Herbert M. Noble and two or more Italians as to whether or not the former had agreed to transport an "original package" from Palmer to the quarters of the latter for the sum of forty cents. One of the Italians, being in an alcoholic trance, was somewhat noisy, and Officer Thompson's attention being attracted by the commotion, he quickly put an end to the matter by clasping a pair of handcuffs on the man's wrists and marching him toward the rear entrance of Memorial Hall. One of his companions begged so piteously, however, that he should be released, and promised so faithfully that he should not cause further trouble, that the officer relented and the fellow was allowed to go. The "package" was delivered, but not for forty cents.

One of the suburban citizens came driving in full heat Sunday evening to the store. Finding it closed he remarked to a passer-by, "What time do your stores close evenings?" On being told they closed Saturday night and did not open again until Monday morning he partly came to himself, and with an oath started off.

Mill Burned.

A minstrel show was given in the old Valley mill last Friday night, followed by a dance which lasted until 2 o'clock Saturday morning. About 4 o'clock the mill was discovered to be on fire, and was wholly destroyed, with a large number of borrowed chairs and settees. Friday night was cold, and in order to warm the room in which the dance was held the stoves were crowded, and it is supposed the fire caught from the chimney. There was $1000 insurance. The mill was built in 1565 for a box and saw mill, and in 1872 enlarged and made into a woolen mill. The machinery was removed about two years ago and the mill was bought by Bradley & Heck, who used the lower part for a cider mill and the upper floor for a dance hall.

The senior class of Wesleyan Academy held its annual dinner at the Cooley House in Springfield Monday. There were about thirty present and a first class time was reported by all. The party was chaperoned by Miss Howe and Miss Nichols. Roy H. Jones was toast master. The first toast was by T. J. Stokin on the prospects of the Glee and Mandolin clubs. "Our Chaperons" were toasted by Miss F. T. Sheldon. The quartette then gave some music, after which the Young Woman's Athletic association was toasted by Miss T. E. Holden and a number of impromptu toasts were also given. Messrs. Paige, Hubbard and Pulver then gave some music on the banjo, mandolin and guitar. The party returned to Wilbraham at 9 o'clock.

A large number of the friends and neighbors of C. C. Beebe gathered at his home Saturday evening to welcome him and his bride on their return from Toledo, Ohio. After a serenade on the lawn, led by the Congregational choir, of which Mr. Beebe was for some time a member, the party entered the house, where they met with a cordial reception. Mr. and Mrs. Beebe were the recipients of a fine lounging chair and five-o'clock tea table, F. E. Clark making the presentation speech, to which Mr. Beebe responded for himself and wife, in his usual happy manner. Refreshments brought by the ladies were served, and after music the company took their departure with many good wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the newly-wedded pair.

WARE.

Found Dead in the Road.

William T. Joslyn, 63, was found dead by the roadside at the foot of the hill just above the residence of John B. Gould on Wednesday about 11.30 o'clock. The discovery was made by Henry Brown, who with the assistance of others removed Mr. Joslyn to Mr. Gould's house. Dr. W. W. Miner was sent for, but before his arrival Mr. Joslyn was dead. Dr. Miner pronounces the cause heart disease, and it is supposed the deceased either fell off or was thrown off the seat of his sleigh, and never recovered consciousness. The remains were removed to the home of his sister, Mrs. John H. Pepper, and the burial will be at the Ware Center cemetery. The deceased was for many years a peddler of butter, eggs and produce, and made the rounds each week with great regularity, regardless of weather. It was while on one of these trips that he met his death. For a long time he lived alone on the Enfield road, but for the past year he had resided on the farm of Mrs. James Gould in district No: 5. He was never married, and besides the sister leaves a niece, Mrs. Edward Cummings.

The pupils of the high grammar school had a sleigh ride to Palmer Monday evening with a chicken pie supper at the Converse House.

It is proving more difficult to collect taxes this year than usual; with hard times and continued hard times it is not always easy even for property holders to realize the money to pay promptly

Rev. A. M. Osgood will preach Sunday morning on "Nerve, Grit, Grip, Grace," at the Methodist church. In the evening there will be a missionary concert, with the theme "An Evening with Mary Reid, the Leper Missionary.

The winners in the series of whist games at the Bearer Lake club house were: Frank J. Browning, George B. Canterbury, Henry C. Davis and H. O. Robinson. The games were finished Monday night, having been in progress the past four months.

There are a number of candidates for the position of enumerators to take the decennial census in Ware, which must be attended to in the thirty days following May 1st. The selectmen are to send the names of six men to the office of the state census department, who will appoint three for Ware. The pay is $3 per day.

Dr. E. H. Guild has bought, it is reported, the place occupied by the late Nancy Hitchcock, corner of Church and Pleasant streets, for $4000. The lot joins the doctor's home place on Pleasant street, and is one of the most desirable lots in the village. There was talk at one time of the Methodist society buying the lot for their church.

Mrs. Mary E. Tucker, aged 78, widow of Dea. Hiram Tucker of Hardwick, died at her home on the corner of Bank and High streets Tuesday morning. In September she had a shock of paralysis, and has gradually failed since; for a long time before this she has been an invalid. She united with the Baptist church in Hardwick when quite young, and was later a consistant member of the church in Ware. Mrs. Tucker leaves two daughters, Lucy A., who has lived with and tenderly cared for her in her declining years, and Mrs. J. F. Lathrop of Newtonville, and four sons, William H. of Lee, George E. of Ware, Fred H. of Newton and Nelson H. of Newtonville.

A fashionable wedding took place at 8 a. m. yesterday at the church of Notre Dame on Bank street, when Victor R. Brassard, head clerk at D. Robertson & Co's. store, and Miss Eleenna M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thibeault of West street were married. The bridemaid was Miss Alice Thibeault, sister of the bride, and the best man was Charles Thibeault, cousin of the bride. The bride wore a white lansdowne dress with train and a veil. The bridemaid wore white cashmere and a wreath of flowers. A nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. John T. Sheehan, pastor of the church. The choir was assisted by P. J. Mulvany and Miss Kate Mathieau. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in the evening. The presents were numerous and very valuable.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

Much for Little.

We cannot refrain from further mention of that most beautiful of all monthly publications, Sarony's Living Pictures. It so highly meritorious and so fitly calculated to afford to its possessor the greatest amount of entertainment for the smallest outlay, that we are doing our readers a kindness in again calling their attention to it. Compared with its real worth, its cost, 25 cents, is but a trifle.

PHOTOGRAPHS IN A NEWSPAPER.

The Boston Sunday Journal Prints Half Tone Illustrations, Similar to Those of the Magazines.

In no line has there been such a marked advance recently as in newspaper illustration. The most conspicuous example of this is to be found in the handsome photographic pictures published in the Boston Sunday Journal, which takes the lead of all papers in New England in this respect. The ordinary newspaper engraving misses the accuracy and beauty of a photographic picture, and the Journal's artistic illustrations combine these in a marked degree. Of course, the process is an expensive one, but the Journal intends to give its readers the very best Sunday paper possible. Just at present a series of living pictures, with famous actors and actresses posing specially for these illustrations, form a novelty in the Sunday Journal. Another series, of equal interest, treats of the Boston artists, whose masterpieces are reproduced with all the faithfulness shown by the most expensive magazines. Ladies will find in the Sunday Journal fine pictures of the latest Parisian costumes, equal in all respects to those of the high-priced fashion periodicals, and portraits, with snap shots of city and country life, go to make up a publication of novel and artistic worth.

What to do with Milk Pails!

Clean them with Pearline. You can't get them so thoroughly sweet and pure in any other way. "The box and barrel churn are not hard to keep clean. A little hot water and a little Pearline will clean any churn or do away with any bad odor."—The Dairy World, Chicago.

Perhaps you think that some of the imitations of Pearline, that you'd be afraid to use in washing clothes, would do just as well in work like this. They wouldn't hurt tinware, certainly. But they wouldn't clean it, either, half as well as Pearline — besides, "don't play with the fire."

THAT'S QUEER!

You say a collar and cuff that are waterproof?

Yes.

And perspiration will not affect them?

Yes.

And when dirty you need only wipe them off with a wet cloth or sponge?

Yes.

Wonderful! How are they made?

A linen collar covered on both sides with waterproof "CELLULOID." Looks exactly like a linen collar.

Is it the only waterproof collar and cuff made?

No, but it is the only one made with the linen interlining and consequently the only one that can give entire satisfaction, because it is the best.

How can I know that I get the right kind?

Because every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Inquire for that and refuse anything else, or you will be disappointed.

Suppose my dealer does not have them?

He probably has, but if not, send direct to us, enclosing amount. Collars 25c., Cuffs 50c. State size, and whether collar wanted is stand-up or turned-down.

LIKE A MIRACLE.

In the town of Amherst, Mass., Mr. George B. Pierce and his mother are the proprietors of the Amherst Creamery Association. Mrs. Pierce has suffered for a long time with salt rheum and a cough that forboded consumption, but they have given way to health and vigor. Hearing of this a reporter called on Mrs. Pierce, and the following experience was related:

"For a long time I suffered from salt rheum," said Mrs. Pierce, "but about two years ago I slipped and hurt my knee, which made it worse. I can't begin to tell the agony I was in, my limbs became a mess of raw flesh covered with running sores. My friends would say I could not live long, and I thought so too. Well, I heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream; I commenced using them, and in three weeks I walked out of doors. Last night I walked a mile, and I am 63 years of age. It shows that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Salt Rheum Cream can do more than the physicians, for they made me well after my doctor told me I was incurable. I must also tell you of another preparation Dr. Kennedy advised me to use, which did as much for me. It was Dr. David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. I have had a wretched cough for the past fifteen years, the best doctors in the state united in saying that it was only a matter of time before my lungs would give out—my sleep was restless, I would lie awake for hours. I well recollect the first time I used Dr. Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. It relieved my throat at once, and I slept all through that night, the first full night's rest I had in several years. It seemed like a miracle, I took but two bottles and was cured."

Dr. David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam cures asthma, bronchitis, coughs, colds, incipient consumption, whooping cough or croup. Taken with Favorite Remedy, it never fails. Price 25c., 50c. and $1.00 a bottle. Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream is sold at 50c. a package. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy costs $1.00 a bottle, or six bottles for $5 00.

Favorite Remedy ranks with the medical profession as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver to a healthy condition, and cures constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to women, and affords protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, tumors, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease. In this last disease it has cured where all else failed.

WHY GOLD IS EXPORTED.

If it be true that Europe no longer sends us large quantities of securities, and since the merchandise balance is very considerably in our favor, whence then comes this unsettled debt which keeps clamoring for payment in gold, and which it seems we can liquidate with nothing else? The explanation is simple enough.

The United States owe to Europe (apart from the ordinary merchandise balances as evidenced by the Custom House returns) annually:—

1.	For money spent by American travelers abroad, about	$100,000,000
2.	For freights carried in foreign ship, about	100,000,000
3.	For dividends and interest upon American securities still held abroad, minimum	75,000,000
4.	For profits of foreign corporations doing business here, and of non-residents, derived from real estate investments, partnership profits, etc., about	75,000,000
	Total	$350,000,000

These figures have been carefully gone over and represent a very conservative estimate, so that the actual total is more likely to be larger than smaller. In order to pay this vast annual indebtedness to Europe the balance of trade in merchandise would have to reach at least this sum, but it has never done so. The merchandise balance (including exports of silver) in our favor in 1894 was $264,000,000, and large as this was, it still left a very large amount to be paid for. This balance could be paid only in securities or in gold. So long as European creditors were willing to take our securities or reinvest their balances in American enterprises, there was no inordinate call for gold, but as they no longer seem to wish to take our securities to any extent nor to make permanent investments here, there is nothing left but to ask for and insist upon payment in gold.

This leads up to the question: Why do they not wish to take our securities or make investments in our enterprises? Simply because the developments in our railroad management have filled would-be investors with disgust and anger, and above all because they are dismayed at the condition of our treasury and our currency, and fear that if they leave or invest money here, they may not be able to get back as good money as they gave. They have no doubt of the good intentions of the government to uphold the parity of gold, silver, and paper, but they cannot help doubting its ability, under the present conditions, so to do. Thus, fear is one of the main causes, and this fear will not be dissipated until we are on a sound basis, and no basis is sound that does not provide a redemption of all currency in the money of the world—gold.—Alfred S. Heidelbach, in the February Forum.

EVERYBODY "AT HOME."

A story has been current among the students at Aberdeen, and gets into Tit-Bits, which shows that, up to a comparatively recent date, ancient prejudices were retained by the old Scotch professors. It related to the late Principal Pirie, who had a weakness for the refinements of life.

Just after "at home" cards became fashionable one of the dryest specimens of the old professional regime was surprised to receive a missive which read as follows:

"Principal and Mrs. Pirie present their compliments to Professor T—, and hope he is well. Principal and Mrs. Pirie will be 'at home' on Thursday evening at eight o'clock."

This was something which evidently required an answer, but the recipient of it was quite equal to the occasion. He wrote:

"Professor T— returns the compliments of Principal and Mrs. Pirie, and informs them that he is very well. Professor T— is glad to hear that Principal and Mrs. Pirie will be at home on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. Professor T— will also be at home."

The Rochester Post-Express says that when the University of Chicago was opened two yells were proposed for adoption as the official college yell. The first, which was adopted temporarily, was as follows: "Chicago! Chicago! Chicago! Go it Chica, go it Chica, go it Chicago!" The other, suggested by a Madison paper, was, "U. rah, rah! Wee, wee, wee! Spare ribs, pork chops! U of C!"

"They tell me your servant is a jewel," said the caller. "Yes," replied the hostess, wearily, "she's so much more ornamental than useful."—Hartford Courant.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner, with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler County, W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds."

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and that she has also used it for lame back with great success.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

DEPUTY MARSHALL WOOD.

A Man Everybody Knows Tells of His Wonderful Cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura. The Strongest Evidence Possible That This Great Medicine Will Cure You.

DEPUTY MARSHAL A. B. WOOD.

When such a widely-known public man as A. B. Wood, Deputy Marshal of West Indianapolis, Ind., makes a statement, the world knows that it is true—that he means every word of it. Mr. Wood resides at 91 Marion Ave., West Indianapolis, Ind. He has been cured by the great medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, from utter nervous prostration and exhaustion. He deems the cure most wonderful, and the medicine which cured him a most wonderful remedy. He is anxious, therefore, to tell the world of his remarkable restoration to health, and to thus lead others to health by the use of the same grand remedy.

"I had been troubled," said Mr. Wood, "for twenty years with nervousness, heart disease and gastric catarrh of the stomach, ending two years ago with a complete prostration, and was taken to my bed.

"I was under the care of two eminent physicians. Finally through a friend I was induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"After taking one bottle I began to improve, and after using three bottles, my usual health was restored. I can now eat anything set before me. I have gained 30 pounds in flesh, now weighing 165 pounds.

"My wife is similarly diseased and is now taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, so far with beneficial results.

"Thus knowing by personal experience the great value of this grand medicine, I write this that others, who have similar troubles, may be induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and be cured."

People who are sick or ailing in any way make a serious mistake if they delay a moment longer to use this, without doubt, greatest medical discovery ever made. Even if you have been disappointed because other medicines failed, we promise this remedy will cure.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by any one at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

THE GOOD WOMAN BOTHERED HIM.

On a Back Bay car the other day, a young man of elegant appearance sat reflectively, resting his hands on the head of his cane. On the opposite side of the car sat a stout, cheery-faced Irish woman of middle age, with a large bundle, wrapped in a newspaper. The car stopped and two got in. They took the only two seats that were vacant together, and these were at the side of the Irish woman. They nodded pleasantly to the young gentleman and smiled, and he took off his hat with the proper sweep and bowed and smiled in a flattered way, and was about to speak to young ladies when the Irish woman, leaning far over and looking scrutinizingly into the young man's face, put up her hands and exclaimed:—

"May the Lord bless me, it's young Misther Clifford!"

The young man started and then stared at the woman and grew very red. The beautiful young ladies looked wonderingly.

"Ah, now," the woman went on, "ye're not denyin' that ye're Mr. Clifford."

"M-y-y name is Clifford," the young man faltered.

"That's right—the dear b'y!" said the Irish woman. "And don't ye know me, now? Don't ye remember Nora, that used to cook wid yez?"

A slight grin on the young man's face betrayed the fact that he now remembered Nora. The young women were enjoying the scene immensely, but young Mr Clifford was very nervous.

"Ah, honey," the woman went on in a loud voice; "but ain't I glad to see ye again! An' don't ye remember whin I let ye in that night by de kitchen windy, when yer daddy was watchin' by the front dure wid his cane in his hand? Ho! ho! ho! ho!"

Mr. Clifford made no sign of remembering it, but looked more and more foolish.

"An' how is yer mother—the dear ould woman? Well, is it? That's good! May the Lord have her health! An' yer sister? What! Not married? Is that so? Upon my wurrud! Bless her dear heart, the little jade! Ho! ho! ho! ho! An' is there a baby? There is? Upon my wurrud! Betther and betther! And is it a little gyurl? No? A b'y, thin? Oh, that's byootiful! How glad I am I seen ye the day! Ho! ho! ho! ho!"

Then the young man, who had answered the good woman's questions merely in nods and shakes of his head, who had grown redder and redder through the whole inquisition and who was fully conscious that not only his friends the young ladies, but everybody else in the car, was laughing at him, rose and fled through the car and jumped off the platform.

MARS' TOM'S GRAVE.

"I saw a pathetic instance at Greensboro of a negro's fidelity," said W. L. Williams, a traveling man. "About ten miles from the town I saw a grave with a marble slab at its head. Seated near it was an old negro with a bunch of flowers which he was placing over the mound. I stopped my horses and spoke to him.

"Whose grave is that, uncle?" I asked.

"'Mars Tom's, boss. I m his nigga'.'

"'Oh, no; you are no man's nigger, now. Didn't you know that you were free?'

"'Dunno nuffin' 'bout dat, sah. I's Mars Tom's nigga, she an' he's waitin' foh me suah up dah. Dese hands dun tote him frum dat place dey call Shiloh, an' he died while I wah a-totin' 'im; jest closed his eyes an' went to sleep, an' when I comes ter cross de ribber of Johdan, he jest hol' out his han's an' he teli de angel at de gate who I be an' he let me in. I dreamed 'bout it las' night, boss.'

"I was interested in the old fellow and wanted to hear his story. The slab at the grave told me that it was that of 'Col. Tom Winn killed at the battle of Shiloh,' and I questioned the faithful negro further:

"'How old are you, uncle?'

"'Mos' a hundred, I reckon, sah.'

"'Was you in the war?'

"'Went wif Mars Tom, sah. I'se his nigga' an' he's in heaben. I'se jest a-waitin' till dese ole bones, weary wid trabbling over de road, 'll take me to the ribber, when Mars Tom'll help his ole nigga ober.'

"'Was you with him when he was killed?'

"'I was right dar, boss. Done pick 'im up an' toted 'im to dat place dey call Corinth; den I foun' a train, got to de place dey call Chattanooga; de nex' day we wah in Atlanta. Mars Tom den in his glory. Disheah nigga' lef' to ten' his body. Dey buried 'im when I got 'im heah, an' dis nigga lef, to ten' his grabe an' keep de flowers hyah.'

"I found upon inquiry that the story was true, and for a quarter of a century the faithful negro has done nothing but attend the grave of his young master, whose body he brought from northern Mississippi to central Georgia."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HOW SANDWICHES GOT THEIR NAME.—"Did you ever hear how the common articles of diet called sandwiches received their name?" inquired Alonzo P. Margraff of Harrisburg, as he sat conversing with a party of friends in the corridor of the Southern last evening. "It came about in this way: The Earl of Sandwich, a prominent English nobleman of the last century, was a notorious gambler, having such a passion for this sport that he would not leave the gaming table, even for his meals, but satisfied his hunger with slices of bread and meat, which he carried with him in a little basket whenever he started from home to visit the gaming halls. This practice finally became so well known that lunches prepared in that way were called 'sandwiches'."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PLAYS POKER NO MORE.—An extraordinary case of absent-mindedness superinduced by stimulants, is reported from Calais. At breakfast time in a boarding house in that city the other day, while the knives and forks were rattling merrily, a boarder zigzagged in, apparently fresh from a revel. He sat down at the table and said abstractly to the man who was peeling a potato opposite: "I'll raise you ten." Then while the boarders looked on in astonishment, the preoccupied individual held a spirited dialogue with an imaginary opponent, "raising" with eager vehemence. At last he inquired "What have you got?" A low number was evidently named by "the man in his mind," for he said exultantly, "It's no good. I've got a full house," and wound up the game by raking the pot, which composed everything within reach of both arms, including meats, vegetables and two or three cups of tea. He has forsworn poker for all time.

Your Wife's Cough needs attention. Don't neglect it because she don't complain. Delays are dangerous. Disease does not stand still. The little cough grows in volume: soon a thick, yellowish matter is expectorated; loss of strength and flesh follow; pus is developed, then hemorrhages and the glassy stare of the eye, which is the beginning of the end. This is how consumption runs its pace. Be warned in time. When the first symptoms appear

The Sunrise Gun.

The morning sun booms o'er the bay,
And lo! the glorious sun appears;
Night, swift and silent, steals away
To hide her crimes, her wrongs, and tears;
Sweet Home returns to haunts of men;
The old are strong, the young are gay,
And enterprise awakens when
The sunrise gun booms o'er the bay.

The hilltops glow with roseate fire
That smites the cruiser's lofty sails,
And leaps o'er grove, and roof, and spire,
And creeps amid the distant vales;
While far and near begins the roar
Of millions in life's busy fray,
When, echoing loud from shore to shore,
The sunrise gun booms o'er the bay.

And there, against the azure sky,
Waves out the banner of the free,
To gladden every patriot eye
Which loves that sign of liberty—
The Stars and Stripes that to the air
Are flung with each returning day,
When, breathing smoke and lightning glare,
The sunrise gun booms o'er the bay.

Hail to the flag old "Ironside" bore
Triumphant o'er the stormy sea;
The flag so often to the fore
In many a hard-won victory;
The flag that flies in many a port,
That many a war ship's masts display,
That waves its folds o'er many a fort
When sunrise guns announce the day.

Cheers to the flag that flies so brave
From Oonalaska's wintry shore
To where Floridian palm trees wave;
From silver-flashing Appledore
To California's mines of gold;
Our foeman view it with dismay,
The flag our children shall behold
When sunrise guns announce the day.

Hurrah! the flag that tells the world
In every land, on every sea,
Where'er its glory is unfurled,
The joy and blessings of the free,
Who spurn sleek priestcraft, bigot's spite,
Red apachy, and tyrant's sway,
And hail the passing of the night
That yields to freedom's broadening day.

"UNTO THE LEAST OF THESE."

Congregations, like individuals, are apt to have their idiosyncrasies, their odd traits, which set them apart from their contemporaries. The prominent trait of the congregation of the First Church in Hillsburgh was an entire, perfect satisfaction with their condition and with themselves—a complacency which almost amounted to swagger.

It first began to show itself when the new organ was built. It was hard work to pay for that organ. Nobody outside knew how many small sacrifices—sugarless cups of tea and turned gowns, besides the open efforts which annoyed the town, cash-boxes in shops, raffled cake, etc., went into those great gilt pipes. The congregation called it the "work of the Lord," but when the pipes were up and blew forth triumphant tones into the summer day it was natural that the people below should triumph, too, and feel that their perseverance and success was a godly effort. When good old Dr. Crowell said, "Thy saints arise and praise Thee," every man and woman then stiffened, glancing about, feeling vaguely that the text had a personal reference.

No other church in town had an organ; it gave at once a savor of fashion, of exclusiveness, to Dr. Crowell's congregation which they greedily accepted. All kinds of complacency, of arrogance, then began to crop out in individuals. Not aggressively. The doctor's flock were kindly, good-humored folk. They did not sneer nor boast, but each of them showed a solid faith in his own paramount importance in the world, and looked down as from a high peak on Hillsburghers and the rest of mankind. The reasons on which this superiority was based were the common foundations of aristocracy in our small towns. The grandfather of the Burts, it is true, could not read nor write, but he had staked out the first lot in town; Squire Vaughan's new house was faced with a huge Grecian portico; the Jacksons were third cousins to a great California millionaire, etc. Each family, to the Pantings in the back pew, grew in self-satisfaction and bore itself each Sunday with a loftier hauteur before man and God.

The mild old man in the pulpit looked on with dismay. Surely the building of the organ had been a righteous effort to honor the Lord. Had the devil perched upon the keys and breathed evil into the solemn notes of prayer? As time crept on his flock tired of self-approval and craved applause from each other. They began to search for higher stilts on which to mount. When the Burts had a crest engraved on their note paper, the Vaughans soon displayed a coat of arms; when the Jacksons discovered a bishop in their family tree, the Bigbys promptly flaunted a baronet. When one family astounded Hillsburgh by a dinner of nine courses, another followed by a grand reception, with sugar temples and a brass band from Harrisburgh.

The emulation spread from the houses into the pews. If Mr. Bigby subscribed ten dollars to charity, Judge Jackson gave twenty. When a missionary made an appeal for the freedman, first nickles dropped into the plate, then quarters, dollars, gold,—each pew rising higher than the last. The doctor's "Thank you, brethren," was colder than usual. But old Ben, the sexton, when the heaped plate passed his corner, kneeled down, the tears rolling over his black face, and prayed for God's blessing on these people. Some of that money might go to his grandson—who knows?—Jo, the baby that had been carried with its mother, Cely, away from him, twenty years ago, and whom he would never see again.

The new spirit in the church showed itself, oddly enough, against Ben. The Vaughans had much to say of the black-robed vergers whom they had seen in city churches, educated, dignified men, so much more fitting figures in the temple than that shambling old negro!

Even the doctor was hopeless about Ben. The war was over six years ago, yet he hardly understood that he was free. In that time the entire Crowell family had tried to teach him the creed and his letters in vain.

"It's all good, boss," he would say cheerfully, "I'd like to read de good Book, but I onderstand all de meanin' of it. We'se all His chillen an' He died foh us. De petticlars don't count. Nobody kin read me bigger whods dan dem."

Ben had brought out of slavery a blind veneration for "high white famblies," and it certainly added a throb to the rapture of being saved that God owned him as His child along with them. "You is mighty fortunate," he told Jem Vaughan, when he came back first-honors man from college.

Jem stared. "Why?" he said.

"I hear you is quite a scholar, sah. You kin know all about His sayin's and doin's, I can't. But I'm one of his chillen, too," nodding and smiling. Jem did not smile. But he was very kind to Ben that summer, and silenced his sisters sternly when they talked of vergers.

But Ben was old and rheumatic. His work was rapidly growing too heavy for him. He lived in a miserable old cabin and barely bought food enough to keep him alive, bringing his wages every week to the doctor to "bank" for him.

"When I hab two hundred dollahs," he would say, "I kin go into de home foh old cullohed folks in Philadelphia."

He had seen this great gray stone house, which stands among its gardens on the edge of Fairmount Park, and it seemed as pleasant to him as the gates of Paradise. Old Uncle George and Mom Beesy, who had been slaves with him in Virginia, were there, "an' de oder folks was certainly agreeable an' friendly. Nuffin' to do in deir old age but talk ober ole times. Dey'll like to talk lots 'bout Cely and little Jo."

He had saved all the money requisite in the winter of '92, and the doctor sent in his application to the home. There was a vacancy. Ben would be admitted in a week. The doctor drew out his money and gave it to him, with many charges as to its safe keeping.

"I am going to the city on Monday," he said, "and you will go with me. God's blessing go with you, my brother. We shall miss you greatly in the church."

Ben tried to answer, but choked with a laugh and sob. It was the happiest moment of his life. The doctor had called him brother!

They had halted at a street corner. Squire Vaughan crossed to meet them.

"Ben," he said, "I see that those gypsies that we ordered out of town yesterday have stopped their van in the swamp near your shanty. I wish you would see what they are about."

"They are expert thieves," said the Squire to Dr. Crowell. "These gypsy gangs are queer blots on our civilization. They acknowledge neither our law nor religion."

"No, a remnant of paganism. Impossible to convert to Christ, I fear," said the minister.

"Well, they must clear out of Hillsburgh," blustered the Squire.

But Ben did not need to visit the van. The news had already reached the town and spread with terrible swiftness that two of the gypsies had been stricken with malignant smallpox. The members of Dr. Crowell's church gathered after prayer meeting with pale faces in the aisles.

There had never been a case before in the town and the community had grown careless. Many of the children had never been vaccinated. Urgent telegrams had been sent by the two physicians to the vaccine farm for virus. The swamp in which the van stood was quarantined and no one was allowed to pass near it.

"But of what use is that?" little Mrs. Burt began to cry hysterically. I know Jennie will have it! She takes everything! And Paul had his fortune told by one of those wretches!"

"The creatures should have been drummed out of town at once!" said Mrs. Jackson, hotly. "Men never think of preventing an evil. If woman were municipal officers"—

"My dear," said Dr Jackson, mildly," we are doing all we can. There is no danger of contagion if these tramps are isolated."

"Isolated! If anybody goes near them they shall stay with them! I'll see to that!" declared the lady, loudly, the feathers in her hat nodding angrily.

The old physician turned away. Ben followed him. "An' what's to become ob de tramps, sah?" he whispered, anxiously.

Dr. Jackson beckoned his young rival, Bigby. "They ought to have medical attendance," he said.

"Yes, but if either of us goes he will not be admitted afterwards into a house in town. I have too many critical cases to abandon them," said Dr. Bigby.

"And I. It is most unfortunate," puffed the older man. "But these Romany folk have their own drugs and methods. We must, I suppose, trust them to those and to God."

"To God? Dey is his chillen, too, then," thought Ben, as he plodded home. He met one of the gypsies. The man had gone to the village to beg for help and had been driven back by the constable. Ben parleyed with him awhile. His keen interest in a child of God, who was also a pagan and a thief and cast out by all the rest of the world, made him almost forget the smallpox. He found that these Romany, though they might have drugs and methods, had neither food nor money. One of the children was dying; two women were sickening with the disease.

Ben stared gravely in silence at the man as he talked excitedly. He said slowly at last: "I onderstan' de case. De way is clar foh me to go to my frens in de home. Pears as ef I had! I dunno. I'll go t'ink it ober."

He turned abruptly, went to his cabin and shut himself in. His hair trunk stood on the floor, packed. On top of his clothes were his poor little treasures—some photographs, the carved cane his old "Mars" had given him, a red apron of Cely's and Jo's strings of blue beads. He had planned just where they should go in his room at the home.

"After an hour he came out and went to the village, where he spent some of his long-saved money for bread and provisions. On the way back he met Squire Vaughan.

"Don' let nobody come to my house, sah," he said, sharply. "I'm going to bring dem pagans to it and take keer ob dem. No, sah, don' say nuffin or I'll go back on dem!" his voice rising almost to a shriek. "I don' want to do it! I don' want to do it! I don' keer foh dem no-count folks. But pears as ef I heered a call from dat van: 'Hyah's My chillen, Ben, same as you.' An' I'm goin' to do it."

The old man fairly ran down the hill. Squire Vaughan told the news through the town with a cowed look.

A strange quiet fell upon the First Church in the week that followed. Ben had brought the outcasts to his cabin. Two children died and were buried by him in his garden.

The congregation brought quantities of provisions, medicines, every comfort they could devise, and left them on the edge of the quarantined ground. But they did not vie with each other in their charity, as usual. They were sincere, earnest people at heart, and for some unspoken reason each one of them felt humiliated. He had been tried and found wanting. The things on which they had so long based their triumph in life—the Grecian portico, the big bank account, the baronet ancestor—suddenly became paltry and worthless.

When Dr. Jackson said one day to his wife, "I am going to Ben's," she stuffed his pockets with camphor and kissed him without a word. After that he and Dr. Crowell came and went to the cabin.

One morning the van was gone. The load of paganism and misery had vanished. But Ben lay sick unto death. The old minister himself nursed him through to the end. When he was in the coffin Dr. Crowell, glancing about that no one should see him, laid Cely's apron and Jo's beads beside the old man. "It may please him—who knows," he thought.

Ben's old cronies in the gray house waited for him in vain; he had gone to a home made ready for him long before, and where Cely and little Jo are not forgotten.

His grave is near the church door, and the people passing it every Sunday find some message in it which humbles them and brings them closer to their Master than before.—Rebecca Harding Davis, in Congregationalist.

Fenton, who was sitting with his back against a post, fired a bullet through his head, and then before any of the other officers could interfere sent a shot crashing into his own brain. The men were firm friends, and the only theory for the deed is that Devereaux was mentally unbalanced from brooding over the thought that he might be discharged from the force.

Liluokalani, ex queen of Hawaii, has abdicated in favor of the republic, and announces that she gives up all claim to the Hawaiian throne and recognizes the republic as the only lawful government. As she was arrested a few days ago for participation in the attempted overthrow of the government, and is awaiting trial, there is some suspicion that she is not exactly sincere in her statements, but has mainly in view the saving of her precious neck. Many of the papers throughout the country have of late dropped her royal title in alluding to her, and call her by the name to which she is entitled by marriage, Mrs. Dominis.

The cold wave of Tuesday and Wednesday was the most severe experienced in this section for years, the mercury touching 30° below zero in some places, while the record averaged 10° and 15° all through Massachusetts. The wave extended as far south as Baltimore, and west to Oklahoma, the coldest place yet heard from being White River, Can., where it was 60° below. At Grantsburg, Wis., it was 50° below. All through New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and even Maryland, it is reported as being the coldest known for years. The high wind which prevailed Tuesday and Wednesday added much to the suffering, and much damage has been done. Great Britain and Italy are also suffering from severe snow storms and extreme cold, many deaths being reported.

PALMER NEWS.

Frank A. Royce to be Postmaster.

Palmer's new postmaster will be Frank A. Royce, whose nomination was sent to the senate by President Cleveland Tuesday, the news reaching Palmer that afternoon. The choice is a good one, and will give general satisfaction to the citizens. Mr. Royce has had experience in this line of work before, and may be relied upon to give the people the best service possible.

Mr. Royce was born in Wales October 15, 1846. When a young man he obtained a situation as clerk in a grocery store in Springfield, and also spent some time in Worcester as a clerk. He then returned to Wales and accepted a position as bookkeeper in a woolen mill, where he was employed many years. He was married in Wales in 1876, and in 1879 removed to Montville, Ct., accepting a position as superintendent in the mill there. While there he was elected to several public offices. In 1881 he returned to Wales, where he remained until he came to Palmer five years ago. While in Wales he went into business as a merchant, and also had charge of a branch post office, which was located in his store. He was for several years town clerk, and also held various other offices. On his removal to Palmer he began traveling for Haskell & Adams, wholesale grocers of Boston, and is still in their employ. He will resign his position as saleman, and will take charge of the post office at the expiration of Postmaster Knox's term, March 3d. Mr. Royce is a prominent Mason, an Odd Fellow, a member of the Royal Arcanum and of the United Workmen.

A Week of Blizzard.

It has been winter with a great big W this week. It commenced Monday night, and from the present indications we are not yet through with it. Tuesday morning the mercury stood some half dozen degrees below zero, and a cold wind from the west seemed to reach the very vitals of all who had business out of doors, and they were few indeed. The wind continued all day, and at noon the mercury had only reached zero. Then it took another drop, and Wednesday morning 16° below was reported. The cold had worked into the houses, and the plumbers had all they could do to respond to the calls for repairs on broken water pipes. So strong was the wind on Tuesday that it was with difficulty at times that persons were able to keep their feet, being nearly blown from the sidewalks. As the Monson stage was crossing the Fay bridge on its afternoon trip to Palmer a sudden gust of wind blew the rear end around against the side of the bridge and damaged the sleigh somewhat. Had it come a little sooner the stage might have gone down the bank into the river. Trains on the railroads Wednesday, especially those from the west, were decidedly off the regular schedule. The one due from the west over the Boston and Albany road at 1.20 was three hours late, while the boat train from the north over the New London Northern road, due about 7 p. m., came in about 10. A freight train was stalled in the snow at State Line and had to be dug out, the conductor, S. H. Falkins of Palmer, having his feet badly frostbitten while working in the snow. Thursday was cold but with little wind, and last night about 7.30 a snow storm set in, there being about 12 inches of light snow on the ground this morning. The wind came up with the day, however, and the weather turned cold, the light snow drifting badly and filling up the paths about as fast as they could be cleared out, making this decidedly the worst of the season for either man or beast to get about. The trains from the east on the Boston and Albany road were about 40 minutes late this morning on account of the wind, while the trains from the far west were three or four hours behind. On the New London Northern road the morning train from the south was nearly on time, but the one from the north did not get in until about three this afternoon. The one which should have gone north at 11 a. m. left at 12.10 p. m. All will be still later if the wind continues. The weather bureau announces another cold wave for to-night.

A Rich Musical Treat.

The concert given Wednesday evening by the choir of the Congregational church and the Alpha Mandolin and Guitar Club of Springfield proved that a good audience can be obtained in Palmer even in the most severe weather, and those who braved the storm spent a delightful evening musically.

The Alpha Club was delayed a little owing to the western train being late, but the audience soon forgot the delay when the club made its appearance. Of their work nothing but praise can be said; few clubs of this kind play with their delicacy and precision. Their finest work was in the rendering of Rubenstein's melody in F., although the audience evidently liked the solo xylophone, with club accompaniment, better. The piano solos by Mrs. Small were artistically and delightfully played, and received merited enchore. Of the soloists for the evening, unquestionably the finest work was that of Miss Georgia Packard, whose singing of "Day Dream," by Strelezki, was a surpise to her many friends, and showed a clear well-drilled voice of promise. Mrs. Rufus Flynt's deep clear alto voice was heard to good advantage in her songs, and the warm reception which she received showed her unquestioned popularity as a singer. The work of the quartette—consisting of Miss Packard, Mrs. Flynt, Mr. McGregory and Mr. Clark; afforded the people an opportunity to hear them in secular music, and their work was in no way a disappointment. The "Rose of Avontown," by Smart, was a delicious thing and finely rendered, although coming first on the programme as given, it was not tendered the encore which it deserved. The cuckoo song was somewhat marred by too much hilarity, but was well sung. The many friends of Mr. Charles H. Clark were glad to see him again and hear his deep rich bass voice, which has been so much missed since his departure. He came on from New York expressly to assist in the concert, which had been arranged for before he left.

Taking the concert as a whole it was a splendid success, and those who stayed away missed a rich treat from a musical standpoint. The members of the Alpha Club were entertained at the rooms of the Palmer Club after the concert, and were very much pleased with their warm reception by Palmer people.

The aejourned meeting of the Universalist parish will be held next Tuesday evening.

Three persons were baptized at the evening service of the Baptist church last Sunday.

Mrs. F. E. Smith of Montpelier, Vt., was the guest of her niece, Mrs. C. E. Fish, Sunday.

The scholars in the grammer school in this village had a sleigh ride last Friday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Ross of Springfield will preach in the People's church on Park street next Sunday.

H. M. Sager went to his home in Gardiner, Maine, last week sick, and has not yet returned.

G. H. Foy, wife and son of Athol were guests of G. H. Lord at the Converse House Tuesday.

Mrs. W. A. Barnes has been confined to her bed for a week or more with a severe attack of the grippe.

C. F. Orcutt of Monson has been engaged to sing bass in the Congregational church choir until the first of April.

At the Congregational church next Sunday morning Rev. F. E. Jenkins will speak on "A Test of Creed and Life."

The Palmer Business and Social Club admitted eight new members at its monthly meeting Wednesday evening.

The subject of the sermon at St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday morning will be, "Why is it Good to be Here?"

The junior department of the Congregational Sunday school is preparing for an entertainment, to be given week after next.

Mrs. Albert Bogue was called to Mittineague on Monday to care for her father, who had his leg broken by a log falling on it.

Dr. Ellery's bay mare "Ruby" fell on the ice at Brimfield Sunday afternoon and broke a leg, which necessitated the killing of the animal.

A number of the young people of the village will have a valentine party, with dancing, at the New Weeks House next Thursday evening.

Although the storm kept many away, the ladies of the Baptist church cleared about $20 by their chicken pie supper Tuesday evening.

Miss Clara D. Eddy, now teaching in Spencer, has been engaged to teach the grammar school in the place of Mrs. F. E. Cady, resigned.

A sleighing party of ten couples went in one load to Belchertown last evening, where they had a supper and a good time at the Belcher House.

Next Sunday is Septuagesima Sunday, and mass at St. Thomas's Catholic church will be at 10.30 a. m., with Sunday school at 3 p. m. and vespers at 7.30.

The feature of the meeting of the Quaboag Historical society next Friday evening will be a paper by O. P. Allen on "The Derivation and Etymology of Local Names."

L. B. Fish has moved from Springfield to Palmer, and is occupying one of Mrs. Maria Lawrence's houses on the west side of Central street, between Pleasant and Park.

G. W. Randall has leased his house near Shearer's Corner to G. W. Ely, and will take an extended trip for his health, going to Boston, Malden, and Bangor, Me., to be gone a year or more.

The Ladies' Social Union of the Universalist church will give a supper in the church parlor next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Mary C. Shaw will entertain, assisted by Mrs. Charles Keith.

Another installment, unavoidably delayed for several weeks, of the list of books other than fiction to be found on the shelves of the public library, will be found on the fourth page of this week's paper.

C. E. Getchell, recently retired from the superintendency of the Boston Duck Co. at Bondsville, is now located at Waltham, where he is superintendent of the Waltham Bleachery and Dye Works.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The union will send delegates to the winter convention of the Hampden County W. C. T. U., to be held in Springfield the 19th.

The Boston & Albany road will sell round-trip tickets to the G. A. R. encampment at Springfield next week for 45 cents. It will also sell round-trip tickets to the mid-winter prophetet convention at Boston for $2 85, good going the 12th, 13th and 14th, and good returning the 15th.

Mrs. C. N. Coleman, who has been employed by the Springfield Homestead for the past four years as correspondent in Palmer, has severed her connection with the paper, and will be succeeded by a reporter who will, under the Homestead's new arrangements, report for several towns.

It would hardly seem necessary to again remind persons sending news items to this office that the name of the sender must invariably accompany the items, but several such have been received this week from unknown sources, and have consequently found a place in the waste basket.

All men of Precinct A who believe that the policy of no license thoroughly enforced would be better for this town, are invited to meet in the district court room next Monday evening at 7.30, to discuss the matter and take steps to secure a no-license vote, and toward organizing a town Law and Order League.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins began at the Congregational church last Sunday evening a series of four sermon-lectures on "Christ and Modern Wants," taking for his subject "Wanted—a Solid Fact." The other subjects will be: Feb. 10, "Wanted—Bread for the People;" 17, "Wanted—Light on Dark Subjects;" 24, "Wanted—a Way out of a Hard Place."

Only about 40 attended the exhibition of the phonograph in the chapel of the Universalist church Tuesday evening, but those who were present were given an enjoyable treat. The entertainment will be repeated, and prices reduced to 10 and 15 cents, giving all the people of the village another opportunity to hear this wonderful instrument.

G. M. Atkins & Co. have secured the contract to build a dam across the Ware river at Gilbertville for the Geo. H. Gilbert Mfg. Co. The structure is to be 25 feet high and 150 feet long. The work will not be done until summer, and the job will last about four months. The Gilbert company has also given Atkins & Co. the contract to build a foundation for a chimney and boiler house at Ware. The stone for this work will be quarried by the Mount Bunyan Granite Co. of Palmer.

On account of the extreme cold of Wednesday the auction of G. W. Randall on West Main street was postponed until one o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Randall is one of the oldest auctioneers in the county and has had a great deal of business; whenever he saw an ancient piece of furniture or a good article of any kind going at a low price he bought it, and now has a large assortment of furniture, wagons, sleighs, farming and carpenter tools, which will be sold to the highest bidder, as he has leased his place.

The friends who were escorting the body of John Dunn from Monson to the Catholic cemetery at Thorndike this morning had a hard time of it in the face of the driving storm. When they reached here it was found that James Dunn, a brother of the deceased, had his hands frozen and was almost insensible with the cold, and he was taken into the Nassowanno House. The relatives decided that they would go no further on account of the cold, and the bearers accompanied the body to the cemetery.

Daniel Shea, a former Palmer boy and an employe of the New London Northern railroad as section hand, brakeman and yard-master, recently in the employ of the New York and New England road, has been appointed road foreman of engines on the western division of that line. Mr. Shea left the New London Northern road to become a fireman on the N. Y. and N. E., and has been steadily advancing until he has reached his present position, which gives him full charge of engines and enginemen on his division.

At a session of the probate court held in Springfield Wednesday the following was among the business transacted: Administration granted in the estates of—John Scanlon, late of Palmer, A. M. Copeland administrator; Elisha W. Marcy, late of Holland, Sarah A. Marcy administratrix; Mary J. Gage, late of Monson, Carlos M. Gage administrator. Wills approved of—Mary Finnerty, late of Palmer, Charles L. Gardner executor; Laura L. Cushman, late of Monson, Leonard G. Cushman executor. Charles L. Gardner was appointed guardian of Etta A. Turner of Palmer, minor. A petition for a widow's allowance in the estate of Michael O'Grady, late of Monson, was denied.

State Primary School Notes.

Rev. Mr. McDonald of Palmer spoke to the children last Sunday.

Miss Mabel G. Moore has been very sick during the past week, but is now in a more comfortable condition.

Mrs. L. W. Parkhurst of Spencer is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Buss.

During the past week the boys have enjoyed the pleasure of a good coast. Starting from their play shop they coast down the road through the garden, and stop in W. H. Williams's meadow. A number of the smaller boys have enjoyed a sleigh ride through the surrounding villages.

District Court.

These civil entries were made in the district court last Saturday: Joseph Phaneff, administrator, against Frank Stone and trustee, all of Warren; H. C. Strong against William Wright and trustee, all of Palmer; J. M. Chaffee of Stafford against John Brown and trustee of Wales; J. M. Chaffee against Joseph Hill and trustee of Wales; O. A. Lariviere against Joseph Come and trustee, all of Three Rivers; E. F. Shaw of Three Rivers against Joseph Come; R. L. Saville of Boston against W. A. Fitzpatrick of Palmer.

On Monday William B. Smith of Wales was sent to the house of correction for 30 days for having assaulted his mother-in-law, Mary Meagher. She claimed that he tried to choke her with a rope around her neck, but Smith denied this, admitting that at one time while angry he did throw a rope about her neck, though not intending to do her harm.

On Tuesday morning Mary Ring of Monson was declared insane and committed to the institution at Northampton. W. H. Williams, who has been under $2000 bonds in two cases brought by carriage manufacturers for obtaining money under false pretences, was surrendered by his bondsmen, but on Wednesday got his bail reduced to $1600 and secured other bondsmen.

On Wednesday Frederick C. Thompson of Staffordville paid $5 for drunkenness.

THORNDIKE.

The rink was crowded as usual on Saturday evening.

The benefit dance last Friday evening for Mrs. Dano was well attended.

Dr. Deauterac has given up his practice here and has moved to West Warren.

The Whist Club met at Mrs. E. W. Andrews's home on Wednesday evening.

Miss Mary McFarlane entertained the whist club at her home on Wednesday evening.

The West Warren Cornet band is booked for an entertainment and dance at Union Hall the 25th.

A supply of clothing and food has been sent to the sufferers in Nebraska by the Mooers family.

Frank Root, Sr., was taken with a shock on Tuesday afternoon, and at this writing had not fully recovered.

John Foster, an old resident of this place, died at the Springfield hospital last week. His funeral was held Friday.

The surprise given Master Francis Nelson at his home on the Ware road on Friday evening was an enjoyable affair.

Mrs. Patrick Riley returned Monday from her visit with her daughters, Mrs. E. Lyons and Mrs. James Garland of Springfield.

William Moran has been drawn as juror for this term of the superior court at Springfield, and is now acting in that capacity.

The temperance society will hold a special meeting in the vestry of St. Mary's church on Sunday after the morning service. A full attendance is desired.

Miss Mabel Van Henson left this place the fore part of last week for a visit in New York city of a month, when she will travel south in company with friends.

Several couples from this place joined the sleigh ride from Three Rivers and Bondsville to Belchertown on Tuesday, and despite the cold weather an enjoyable time was had.

The Foresters' concert and ball this evening will be the event of the season, and a crowded house is assured, as parties from Ware, Springfield and Monson are to be present. Lovers of good music should avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Bird's orchestra of Marlboro for the first time here.

BONDSVILLE.

The W. C. T. U. meet next Thursday with Mrs. A. P. Knowlton.

Leon Ryther left Tuesday morning for Orno College, Orno, Me.

Mrs. H. D. Shaw, who was seriously sick with the croup last week, is better.

Mrs. Emerson Hastings of Forest Lake spent Thursday with Mrs. F. H. Carroll.

James Fuller, who has been quite seriously sick the last two weeks, is somewhat better.

The Misses Shea gave their scholars a sleigh ride to Palmer and back Monday night.

Miss Cleaveland's grammar school scholars had a sleigh ride Saturday afternoon to Monson.

Mr. and Mrs. Macomber of Northampton were the guests over Sunday of Mr. and O. A. Parent.

C. S. O'Regan was confirmed by Bishop Lawrence in St. Anne's Episcopal church in Lowell Jan. 27.

Miss Ora Parent and her friend, Miss Lang, of Northampton, spent three days last week with O. A. Parent.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davis of West Warren made a flying visit Saturday on Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller.

The Epworth League had its business meeting and an entertainment Friday night in the M. E. church.

Quite a party went from here Tuesday on a sleigh ride, and had a turkey supper at the Belcher House, Belchertown.

The W. C. T. U. has engaged Mrs. M. E. Gleason of Roslindale to give an address on "Narcotics," Feb. 25th, in the M. E. church.

C. E. Getchell of Waltham, formerly agent of the Boston Duck Co's. mill, made short calls on some of his old friends here Tuesday.

A horse owned by John Hannifin, attached to a sleigh, ran away Sunday afternoon. The sleigh was smashed badly and the horse was cut and bruised some, but no one was hurt.

A little boy in this town who is learning to read, and who does not enjoy the task very much, was saying his prayers one morning when suddenly he looked up and asked, "Do they have to say the alphabet up in Heaven, Mamma?"

About twenty-five couples chartered the Union House four-horse 'bus and had a sleigh ride, with a supper and dance after, to John Kirk's at Ware Saturday night, and presented Mr. and Mrs. Kirk with an easy chair and banquet lamp.

C. S. O'Regan, formerly of this place, was married at Lowell January 22d to Miss Annie Andres of that place. The ceremony was performed with a ring by Rev. George S. Sinclair, curate of St. Anne's Episcopal church. Dr. William A. Johnston of Lowell was best man, and Miss Georgia A. Stevens of Lowell bridesmaid. They were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents from their friends in that place, where the bride was a favorite with all. They will be at home to their friends after the 8th, at 261 Fourth street, Lowell.

THREE RIVERS.

Mrs. John Wilson is quite ill with a severe cold.

Gilbert Forte has been confined to the house this week with throat trouble.

Brown & Co. have purchased a young horse, which is reported to have some speed.

One of Dr. Bell's horses took a lively run through Main street one day this week, but was captured before doing any damage.

Herbert Barker's many friends will be pleased to know that he has recovered sufficiently to be able to take short rides.

Under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. a temperance meeting will be held in the Baptist church this evening. Rev. Mr. Jenkins of Palmer will be the principal speaker.

Professor Hamilton, who has been giving lessons in vocal culture for several weeks, will continue to give instructions for some time yet, as his pupils are making remarkable progress.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Morin were made sad this week by the death of their little daughter, Albino, who succumbed to pneumonia on Wednesday. And Mr. and Mrs. Maybert have occasion for sorrow on account of the death of their little daughter, Ida, from the same disease this week.

On Monday evening six couples of young people, under the chaperonage of Mrs. Nutting, enjoyed a sleigh ride to Monson and took supper at the Cushman house. The outing was very pleasurable to all of the party, who returned the following morning, after some of the small hours had gone by.

On Tuesday evening James Needham entertained his Sunday school class at his home on Maple street. Music by several of the company, and some of Mr. Needham's famous songs were features of the entertainment. A well prepared repast was partaken of, while the young people indulged in story telling and held a lively conversation. As the class was about to leave, after thoroughly enjoying the occasion, Arthur Brown, with his usual eloquence, presented Mr. Needham with a valuable token of their esteem.

One day this week, while a few men were engaged in repairing some water pipes which were damaged by the frost at Rev. Joseph Marchand's residence, a copper boiler exploded and caused quite a panic for several minutes. The cause of the accident was probably the freezing of the pipe which supplied the tank. However, it fortunately happened that no one was injured, and no damage was done to anything but the boiler.

About fifteen couples from this place indulged in a sleighride to Belchertown Tuesday evening, and were met at the Belcher House by twelve couples from Bondsville and a few couples from Thorndike. The night was extremely cold, but every one went well prepared to "stem the storm," and consequently no one was the worse for the ride. The party had a very enjoyable evening and an excellent supper, which makes it probable that a similar ride will be taken before the sleighing weather ceases.

Will They Get The Stoves?

That is the question which is troubling a number of people just now regarding cooking stoves which have been promised them, and on which they have paid freight to the amount of $1 each. A few days ago a man appeared in the village and claimed to represent a Springfield grocery house which would sell goods at unusually low prices, and if customers would agree to buy $100 worth they would be presented with a fine cooking stove free. As they were not obliged to buy the groceries all at once, but as they wanted them, simply agreeing to buy $100 worth in the aggregate, many fell in with the scheme, especially as the prices quoted were very low. The stove was to be shipped at once if the customer agreed to buy the required amount of goods, but it was stated that the freight would have to be paid when it were shipped, and a dollar was asked with which to prepay the charges. It is not known how many stoves he collected freight for, as he worked mainly among the French residents, but it is reported that about 40 are waiting for new cook stoves. No one seems to know, either, what Springfield grocer the man claimed to represent. The chances are that those who accepted his terms are a dollar out, and will continue to pay the old price for their groceries to the local merchants.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 30, 1895.

A movement is on foot to investigate the larger salaries which are paid to the state officials. Mr. McCarthy put in an order that the state auditor report forthwith to the House all salaries over $1500 which the state is paying, and the person to whom and the exact sum which is paid. This course has been taken in consultation with leading members of the House, and there is a disposition to look into these things and see what the state officials get in comparison with the salaries paid for the same grades of ability in private life. Ever since the general cutting down all around in 1879, the retrenchment year when Thomas Talbot was governor, there has been a general upward movement of salaries. The men who thought they had been cut down too much in 1879 came back pretty soon, those who had the strongest cases, and ever since then there have been many petitions every year for an advance of official salary. The officials are never thrown out by a shut-down, and their salaries are sure as long as the people can pay taxes, which must be a great comfort to them to think of.

The opponents of woman suffrage are more active this year than ever. In every previous year but one they have made but little stir, or none at all, until the debate was reached in the Legislature. A few years ago the prominent women of Boston presented a remonstrance against the suffrage, which doubtless had weight with the Legislature. This year a similar effort is being made, and the remonstrance has already been signed by Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall and several hundred of the most prominent women of this part of the state,—measuring prominence by social position, wealth and the standing of husbands. They object to woman suffrage, "because we regard suffrage as a duty involving certain obligations which we have no wish to assume, believing their full exercise by the majority of women to be incompatible with the proper fulfilment of equally important duties which none but ourselves can perform; because we regard such exercise by a small minority of women, as is at present the case with the school suffrage, as useless and even mischievous, since it involves the creation of a large class of inactive voters. We wish to be represented by no such minority, believing that our interests are safe in the hands of our fathers, brothers, husbands and sons."

The committee on constitutional amendments gave its last hearing Wednesday forenoon on the petitions for biennial elections, and gave the last chance to the remonstrants. In executive session afterward a majority voted to report the resolve. There are three dissenters, G. H. Newhall of Lynn, a Republican, Senator Corbett of Suffolk and Mr. Rourke of Lowell, Democrats. Last year there were 44 Republican votes in the House against the measure, and about all the Democrats. Some of the ablest men of those 44, such as Mr. Irwin of Northampton and Mr. Jones of Melrose, are in the House this year. With the feeling in the Republican party this year, though such men as Senator Hoar, ex-Collector Beard and ex-Gov. Long are against biennials as hostile to the public good, it would not be strange if the resolve should be passed. Whether it would have a majority of the popular vote is a question, for the labor unions, claiming to represent 100,000 votes, are solid against it. The Republican party has a material minority against it, and the Democrats a majority against it. The press of the state and the Republican managers are largely for it.

It does not look as if there would be so great a contest as was promised over the plan to pay the farmers full compensation for their cows which are killed by order of the cattle commissioners for tuberculosis. Great numbers of farmers turned out at the protracted hearing on the matter the first day, Tuesday, more than filling the green room. The cattle commissioners had the floor first and occupied much time in showing the correctness of their case. They held that it was proved that tuberculosis is exactly the same as consumption in human beings, that it is a contagious disease, that it is not hereditary, and that it can be caught by inhalation, by drinking the milk of an infected animal, and through a wound in the flesh. It was proved that tuberculin is practically far the best test that has ever been found, that it does no harm to a healthy animal, that it checks the flow of milk for one milking either way slightly or not at all, and that it is practically sure to reveal the existence of disease. It was admitted that some mistakes had been made in the early application of the test, but experience in use adds to the certainty. It appeared that the farmers are abating their opposition very much, being apparently convinced that the doctor's way is the best, and being anxious to get full compensation for the cattle killed. The dread prevalence of consumption among people,—one of every 14 people in Massachusetts dying from this cause,—makes of vital importance every promising effort to reduce its ravages. It was said for the farmers that all the public have as much interest as they in the exterpation of the disease, and that it would ruin many if they were obliged to bear the full loss alone. The cattle commissioners favored paying full compensation, and the farmers who testified all thought it was only fair to them.

A plan is pending by which the state board of education is to organize the normal schools which were authorized by the act of the last Legislature, and buildings may be occupied temporarily till the new ones are built. Meanwhile Lowell wants $100,000 extra for her new school, and Fitchburg $50,000 for hers. The others have not put in a petition yet for an extra allowance.

MONSON.

John Dunn Killed by the Cars at West Springfield.

John Dunn of this place, an employe of the W. N. Flynt Granite Company at the quarry as a stonecutter, was killed by the cars at West Springfield Tuesday night. He went to Springfield to make arrangements for an entertainment to be given in Monson, and then went to West Springfield to look up the deed of a building lot which his mother had recently bought there. He was last seen riding upon the step on the rear end of the switching engine bound for West Springfield. When the engine returned he was not on the step, and nothing more was seen of him until his body was picked up between 6.30 and 7 o'clock. The body was taken to the emergency room, and then removed to Washburn's undertaking rooms Medical Examiner Breck found the left leg and thigh had been broken, the skull fractured and cut, the hands crushed and frozen. His name was found upon a card, which stated that he was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. He leaves a mother, Mrs. Catherine Dunn of this place, besides three brothers and a sister. The family lived near the quarry, where Mrs. Dunn kept a boarding house. The funeral was held this morning at 9.30 in St. Patrick's church, Rev. Thomas O'Keefe celebrating requiem mass. The burial was at Thorndike.

Mrs. George C. Flynt has returned from Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Cable Lee of Somers Ct., have visited Mr. and Mrs. George H. Newton this week.

The Dorcas society of the Congregational church met Wednesday with Mrs. Alfred Norcross.

William Crosby of Mansfield, formerly of Monson, has been stopping at the Cushman House the past week.

Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, attended the superintendents' convention in Worcester to-day.

A daughter was born Sundayto Mr. and Mrs. William C. Stacey. A son was born on that day to Mr. and Mrs. Morris Welch.

A family party was given one evening last week by Mr. and Mrs. William Beebe in honor of Mr. Beebe's fifty-seventh birthday.

There will probably be a sheet and pillow-case masquerade at the close of Prof. Treadway's dancing school the 25th of the month.

Five boys of the junior class of the Academy are taking one of the studies of the junior middle year. The boys are all from No. 8.

Presiding Elder Thorndike will hold the fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist church one week from Monday evening, in the vestry.

The first class at the Green street grammar school finishes United States history this term, and will be given the Academy examination at its close.

The concert by the Wesleyan Glee Club last Friday evening was enjoyed by a fair sized audience. A party from Stafford Springs was present.

The north half of the collecting well for the water works has been excavated to the depth of sixteen or more feet. The digging is better than on the other side.

About a dozen friends and relatives of Charles E. Stebbins made him a surprise visit Tuesday evening in honor of his sixty-second birthday. He received numerous gifts.

The Cushman fountain has been very beautiful this week. The water in the waste pipes froze, causing an overflow which also froze, making parts of the fountain masses of ice.

Having duly organized, with Edward D. Cushman chairman, Charles W. King secretary, and Lyman C. Flynt treasurer, the republican town committee is ready for business.

The sociable given by the Ladies Circle at the Universalist church Tuesday evening was well attended, considering attractions elsewhere and the weather. The ladies cleared $12.

H. M. Noble, driver of the Monson stage, takes exceptions to the item in last week's paper concerning the "original package," and denies that he delivered it, stating that he refused to have anything to do with the stuff.

The Ladies' Aid Society will give an entertainment for the benefit of the poor about the 20th. This society was founded about a year ago by Rev. J. F. Lee as an auxiliary of the St. Vincent de Paul, which is also a charitable society.

The high winds of Tuesday overturned many small buildings, and the intense cold of Tuesday and Wednesday caused much trouble with water pipes, many freezing and bursting. But as "it's an ill wind that blows nobdoy good," the plumbers undoubtedly were correspondingly happy.

Herbert C. Norcross' store horse, which was standing in Arthur D. Norcross's yard Tuesday noon, became frightened and left on a lively run. When near the Cushman fountain the sleigh to which he was attached was overturned, and the groceries spilled out. When in front of Gage's store he was stopped and found to be cut rather badly on the legs, but otherwise uninjured.

John W. Ferry, an old resident of the town, died Sunday at his home in Silver Street at the age of 79. Although lame he carried on the business of market gardening for many years. For the past year he has been paralyzed. He leaves three children, two daughters, Mrs. William Thayer of this place and Mrs. Samuel Ferry of Palmer, and a son, Albert Ferry, also of Palmer. The funeral took place Wednesday, Rev. Harry Blackford officiating.

Mrs. Julia Ketcham and Miss Alice Crossman gave a delightful whist party at the Cushman House Tuesday evening. During the evening the comqany were favored with two songs by Rrof. Treadway of Westboro, the only out of town guest, a piano solo by Miss Georgia Cote, and a piano duet by Miss Ethel Rood and Joseph Chandler. Miss Lena Babbitt won the first prize, making 39 points out of 45, and Clarence King was given the consolation prize. Refreshments consisting of cake, ice cream and chocolate were served.

The second farmers' institute of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society will be held in Grange Hall next Tuesday at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. Dr. J. B. Lindsey, associate director of the state experiment station at Amherst, will read a paper on "Barnyard Manures and Commercial Fertilizers; what they are and how best to turn them to account in growing farm crops." All are invited to be present. Dinner will be served at the Cushman House at 25 cents a plate. An afternoon session will also be held.

Rev. Hollis Jordan will preach in the Congregational church next Sunday morning. The special services will continue next week.

Arthur F. Johnson is sick with rheumatism; Mrs. David B. Needham, Miss May Messenger, and four children of Peter Kearns have the measles; Miss Nellie Gordon, Charles F. Orcutt, and the children of Rev. F. S. Hatch have the grippe; Mrs. Harriet C. Fenton, Mrs. Lucinda White, Arthur D. Norcross, Ralph Clifford, and Mrs. Susan E. Thrall are recovering from severe colds; Mrs. Juday, Frank E Howe and a brother of Rev. Harry Blackford, who is his guest, are ill.

L. W. Sargent, assistant state supervisor of drawing, gave an interesting talk to the teachers and others at the Green street grammar school yesterday afternoon, taking for his subject "Design." Mr. Sargent has recently returned from abroad, where he took a course of study in art, and this is his first visit to Monson since his return. All the teachers but one were present. Miss Wood distributed some pamphlets in the interest of dumb animals. It is desired that there be "Bands of Mercy" organized in the schools, in order that the children may grow up trying to be kind to all harmless living creatures, and trying to protect them from cruel usages." One of the mottoes is:

"I would not enter on my list of friends,
Though graced with polished manners and fine sense,
Yet wanting sensibility, the man
Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm."
—Cowper.

Last Saturday afternoon several Monson horses, as well as "Watch Eye" from Palmer, were out for a little practice on Main street. Among them was L. G. Cushman's black horse, driven by the hostler at the Cushman House. When turning around in front of Howe & Pease's store the sleigh struck the ridge left by the pipe-layers and was quickly overturned. The horse plunged about, and in some unexplainable way managed to get over the shafts and fell, one of the calks striking her leg cutting it so badly that the blood spurted from the wound. Tom and Joe Proulx attempted to hold her down, but in spite of their efforts she sprang up. Just then Peter Ward appeared on the scene, cut the traces and freed the horse, Thomas J. Sault righting the sleigh and throwing it aside; then Mr. Ward led the horse to R. M. Reynolds's stable, the whole affair taking place in probably less than five minutes.

BELCHERTOWN.

A. E. Alden of Boston is spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. William Carter.

Mrs. Jennie H. Hook and Miss M. L. Allen have gone to Atlantic City, N. Y., for a visit of several weeks.

The Methodist church people give a sociable and supper this evening, followed by an entertainment.

A sleigh ride party came to the Belcher House Tuesday evening for a jolly good time; they were from Palmer, Thorndike and Three Rivers, numbering about 35 couples.

WEST WARREN.

The thermometer registered 17° below zero Wednesday morning.

The premises of Daniel Sullivan were raided Tuesday night by Officers Dawson and Dufresne, and a small amount of whisky found. The liquor was found in a building a short distance from the saloon.

Scarlet fever is becoming prevalent here, and an epidemic is feared. A four-years-old daughter of Mr. Jendure on School street died Tuesday of the disease, and another child is sick now. Four children in the family of M. J. Shea also have it, and a large number of children are known to have been exposed.

BRIMFIELD.

The ball given by the Brimfield Social Club Friday evening was pronounced a grand success; fifty couples attended, and all agree that it was a joyful occasion.

News reached town yesterday of the death of Edwin Lawrence, a former resident of Brimfield, at Needham. The remains will be brought to Brimfield for burial Saturday noon.

A loan exhibition was held at the residence of Rev. W. K. Pierce Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and evenings. The weather not being as "balmy" as at some seasons of the year, not as many attended as had planned, but in spite of the bitter cold, people from adjourning towns were present. A great many rare and valuable relics were on exhibition, and visitors were surprised that so rare a collection could be found in this town with such little time spent to collect them. At some future time it is proposed to canvas the town more thoroughly and have an exhibition in the town hall.

WARREN.

The ladies of the Methodist church gave a chicken-pie supper in the chapel Wednesday evening.

The Congregational church, the library, E. Fairbanks's store, the post office, and a number of residences are being wired for electric lights.

The poverty party at the Congregational chapel Tuesday evening was very successful in spite of the weather. The costumes were very appropriate and unique.

Quaboag Historical Society.

The Quaboag Historical Society met in Library Hall Wednesday afternoon and completed its organization. The society starts with a memership of nearly 100, from the different towns in this section. The object of the society is to unite the citizens of those towns which include the ancient Quaboag district in an effort to collect and preserve all the historical matter relating to this section and to stimulate a local pride in and love for antiquarian research, by the preservation of relics and the marking of memorable sites within the borders of these towns. Each town can have its own collection without interfering with the work of the society. The following officers have been chosen: President, Robert Batcheller, North Brookfield; vice presidents, George W. Johnson, Brookfield, J. T. Wood, West Brookfield, Daniel G. Hitchcock, Warren, William Bowdoin, New Braintree; secretary and treasurer, George A. Larkum, North Brookfield; board of directors, Rev. J. J. Spencer, North Brookfield, Dr. D. W. Hodgskins, East Brookfield, L. H. P. Gass, Brookfield, Dr. A. G. Blodgett, J. G. Shackley, West Brookfield; Isaac E. Moore, Dr. J. W. Hastings, Warren; George K. Tufts, J. E. Barr, New Braintree. The honorary members: Senator George E. Hoar, General Francis A. Walker, Elbridge Kingsley, Edwin D. Meade, H. Q. Butterworth, Rev. Dr. Lyman Whiting, Dr. E. E. Hale, Dr. Samuel A. Green. The next meeting will be held in West Brookfield early in June.

WALES.

C. G. Needham is employed in the carpet mill at Palmer.

Elijah Shaw and wife are in Raleigh, N. C., where they will spend several weeks.

Mrs. Kline is making rugs of very beautiful design, the centers of which are very artistic.

Miss Mamie Royce, of the Monson state primary school, is spending a few days with friends.

The young people of the M. E. church held a social Wednesday evening. A baked bean supper was served, followed by ice cream.

Miss Anna Burley did not teach Wednesday. She reported for duty, but finding only two scholars present she closed up for the day.

Considerable complaint is made because the boys coast in the main streets. The by-laws of the town provides a fine of $20 for coasting or playing ball in the streets.

Mercury struck the lowest mark for many years Wednesday morning, registering 10° to 18° below zero. Water pipes were frozen, as were also vegetables in many cellars.

Mrs. Baldwin gathered a box of clothing for the sufferers out West and forwarded it last week. This week Mrs. Ida Needham is packing a large box for the same purpose.

The sleig bride to Fiskdale last week was a failure. Owing to some misunderstanding of the managers only one couple went instead of 30, as were provided for by Landlord Hubbard.

The Excelsior Woolen Co. and the Berkley Mills have restored one-half the cut-down of wages made last March. The Excelsior cut 15 per cent and restored 8; the Berkley cut common laborers 20 per cent and overseers 25 per cent, and restored 10 per cent. This makes the help feel encouraged, and they are promised their former wages as soon as possible.

WARE.

William T. Joslyn, whose death was reported last week, was buried at the expense of the town, although it is supposed he had quite a sum owing him.

The cold wave came this week with a vengance, and the plumbers have been kept busy with the water pipes. The worst case reported was that in the house of Frank M. Sibley, where the pipes burst and the hot water boiler collapsed.

Patrick Fitzgerald, aged 60, died at his home on South street on Monday of diabetes. For about 30 years he has been in the employ of the Geo. H. Gilbert Mfg. Co. until Saturday last, when he was taken ill. A widow and five children, all grown up, survive him.

A Small Fire.

An alarm of fire was rung in from the hose house on East street at 9.15 Sunday evening for a fire in the office of the Massachusetts Central freight house. The night operator had left the building for a few minutes, and during his absence it is supposed the fire took from the lamp either bursting or falling and setting fire to the place. The firemen, as usual, were promptly on hand, so the fire was confined principally to the office, none of the freight stored in the building being damaged. The loss is reported as about $600.

Farewell Reception to Mr. E. H. Baker.

The farewell reception given by the Young Men's Bible class of the East Congregational church to their former leader, Edwin H. Baker, was in every way a success. Seldom has anything been carried out with such enthusiasm, members vieing with each other in suggestion and endeavor to make the occasion a genuine expression of the respect and esteem entertained by them for one who had so long been their able and valued leader. At the close of the very pleasant social hour which was spent in the chapel parlors by the members and their wives, the chairman of the evening, Rev. A. B. Bassett, with lady led the march into the chapel where the banquet was served. The beautifully arranged tables, the profusion of flowers and many-colored banquet lamps made a very pretty picture. The chairman in his opening remarks spoke in a very happy way of the occasion of the gathering, the many years that Mr. Baker had been connected with the class, and its growth while under his leadership. Thomas Naylor, Jr., and Fred E. Marsh, two of the members of the class first taught by Mr. Baker some 25 years ago, related many incidents of the class life and work during their long connection with it, and prized as a great privilege the help that had come to them from their Bible study while members of this class. W. G. Hamilton, who had been class secretary for several years, spoke of the class in its relation to the church life and activities, and quoted from his annual report of 1892. He said: "That while this was simply a Sunday school Bible class, it was one a little out of the ordinary run, for while yet a class in the school it furnished the school its superintendent and his two assistants, the secretary, the treasurer, and librarian; in short, the full staff of officers were all members of this class. In addition it furnished five regular and a good many supply teachers, and for the past 10 years there had not been a superintendent or an assistant superintendent of the Sunday school that the membership of this class has not furnished; three out of the six deacons came from the same organization; the Young People's Association was entirely officered by it, and every effort that association put forth was under the control of young men from the Bible class. It had also furnished superintendents for Hardwick district Sunday school, and 8 of the 13 members of the standing committee of the church belong to this class, and two of the members of the parish committee, as well as the society treasurer; the church was represented by six of the members of this class in the special evangelistic effort of the "Ware Christian Workers." F. D. Gilmore, a former member of the class, expressed the pleasure he had at being with them at such a gathering, and thought a meeting of this kind could not help but make hearts tender. Remarks followed from M. F. Brown, J. H. Schoonmaker and H. B. Anderson, the present leader of the class. Rev. Alfred T. Perry of Hartford, Ct., formerly pastor, spoke of the pleasant relations he always had with the Young Men's Bible class and its leader, Mr. Baker, and of the loyal support he could always depend upon from him, even when their judgments differed. Mr. Baker in reply, spoke at some length and with considerable tenderness of his relations with the class, and thanked them for the many kind things that had been said to him that evening, and hoped that before them was a great future under their new leader.

The singing by a quartette was especially fine, and the banquet served by Barr of Springfield was all that could be desired, while Collis & Tucker, the florists, added very much to the beauty of the room by the large number of potted plants. A very pleasing incident was the presentation of flowers by the chairman to Mrs. Baker. It was very near morning when the class song, "Move Forward," brought the programme to a close.

CARD OF THANKS.—The undersigned wishes to return thanks to his neighbors and friends, the Ladies' Aid Society and his pastor, for their kindness and assistance in his bereavement.

PETER KEARNS.

Monson, Feb. 6th, 1895.

A large volume now numbering over 380 pages, but sold at the same price as when, in the Forties, it printed only 60 pages. The New York Tribune Almanac for 1895 come to us this week, revised, rearranged, freshened up to date, and enriched by the addition of new features. The book contains an almost unlimited array of statistics on every conceivable subject which concerns the whole people of the United States, with much which interests only the political parties or other large bodies of men and women. The results of the phenomenal elections of 1894 are fully reported There is no partisanship in the contents of The Tribune Almanac, and every one can accept with confidence its statistics of coinage, circulation, foreign trade, elections, population, pensions, revenues, banking, divorce, marriage, sports, legal holidays, and the hundreds of other things treated of. The facts about prominent Societies in the United States are given more space than usual, and the Constitutional Amendments in New York State are given. The Almanac for 1895 is a most valuable book for reference. It is indexed thoroughly and well. Price, 25 cents a copy.

A GRAND RECORD.

204,607 Average for January.

All previous records in Sunday journalism were broken by The Boston Sunday Globe in January—the average reaching the above superb figure. Moreover, The Sunday Globe beat itself, because the January average above given showed the magnificent gain of 45,582 copies per Sunday over the same month one year ago.

The average circulation of The Daily Globe for January was 174,990, by far the largest of any daily newspaper published in Boston or New England.

The gain in advertising, both daily and Sunday, was equally satisfactory, and 1895 starts off with The Globe holding a longer lead and a stronger position than ever before.

Mr. William F. Cook of Springfield, Mass., the monumental dealer, starts next month on his annual trip to Italy, to fill important statuary commissions. His patrons may be sure of seeing some very artistic designs upon his return, as Mr. Cook has the reputation of securing the very finest designs in the monumental line, and takes great pride in giving his customers something that will be a credit to himself as well as a fitting memorial to the dead. The Holmes monument at Monson is his work, and is the finest thing in this vicinity.

"Health Insurance."

That is almost as necessary as life insurance. It means reasonable care and occasionally a little medicine—not much. A Ripans Tabule is enough in most cases.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

"Please The People And You Win Their Hearts."

The wonder of the publishing world is the marvelous success of Sarony's Living Pictures. Though still in its first volume, this extraordinary monthly publication—extraordinary because it is a new idea, unlike anything but its beautiful self—has a rapidly increasing sale, already in excess of fifty thousand copies!

Its popularity demonstrates that the public is ever ready to show its appreciation of a really excellent thing if offered at a reasonable price. Sarony's is only 25 cents a copy or $3 a year, and it is doubtful if so much was ever before given for the money. The publishers, Messrs. A. E. Chasmar & Co., Union Square, New York, are to be congratulated.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

You Wonder why Mrs. ——— is so enthusiastic about Washing Compounds? You wouldn't, if you knew the facts You'll find that she is using Pearline, instead of the poor and perhaps dangerous imitation of it that you are trying to wash with. You mustn't think that all Washing Compounds are alike. Pearline is the original and the best. Millions know it. So does every peddler, though to sell you his stuff he tells you that it's the "same as" Pearline.

Beware of imitations 345 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

COLLARS AND CUFFS that are waterproof. Never wilt and not effected by moisture. Clean, neat and durable. When soiled simply wipe off with a wet cloth. The genuine are made by covering a linen collar or cuff on both sides with "celluloid" and as they are the only waterproof goods made with such an interlining, it follows that they are the only collars and cuffs that will stand the wear and give satisfaction. Every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

If anything else is offered you it is an imitation. Refuse any but the genuine, and if your dealer does not have what you want send direct to us, enclosing amount and stating size and whether a stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

LIKE A MIRACLE.

In the town of Amherst, Mass., Mr. George B. Pierce and his mother are the proprietors of the Amherst Creamery Association. Mrs. Pierce has suffered for a long time with salt rheum and a cough that forboded consumption, but they have given way to health and vigor. Hearing of this a reporter called on Mrs. Pierce, and the following experience was related:

"For a long time I suffered from salt rheum," said Mrs. Pierce, "but about two years ago I slipped and hurt my knee, which made it worse. I can't begin to tell the agony I was in, my limbs became a mess of raw flesh covered with running sores. My friends would say I could not live long, and I thought so too. Well, I heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream; I commenced using them, and in three weeks I walked out of doors. Last night I walked a mile, and I am 63 years of age. It shows that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Salt Rheum Cream can do more than the physicians, for they made me well after my doctor told me I was incurable. I must also tell you of another preparation Dr. Kennedy advised me to use, which did as much for me. It was Dr. David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. I have had a wretched cough for the past fifteen years, the best doctors in the state united in saying that it was only a matter of time before my lungs would give out—my sleep was restless, I would lie awake for hours. I well recollect the first time I used Dr. Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. It relieved my throat at once, and I slept all through that night, the first full night's rest I had in several years. It seemed like a miracle, I took but two bottles and was cured."

Dr. David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam cures asthma, bronchitis, coughs, colds, incipient consumption, whooping cough or croup. Taken with Favorite Remedy, it never fails. Price 25c., 50c. and $1.00 a bottle. Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream is sold at 50c. a package. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy costs $1.00 a bottle, or six bottles for $5.00.

Favorite Remedy ranks with the medical profession as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver to a healthy condition, and cures constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to women, and affords protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, tumors, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease. In this last disease it has cured where all else failed.

Mother—"Johnny, on your way home from school stop at the store and get me a stick of candy and a bar of soap." Father—"What do you want of a stick of candy?" Mother—"That's so he'll remember the soap."—New York Weekly.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner, with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler County, W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds."

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and that she has also used it for lame back with great success.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

MAJ. A. FRANK HUTCHINS.

BAND MASTER, MAJOR A. FRANK HUTCHINS.

As Sousa naturally fills the place of Gilmore, so the mantle of the great cornetist, Arbuckle, fell upon his pupil, Major A. Frank Hutchins, the leader and director of the American Screw Co.'s Band and Orchestra of Providence, R. I. Mr. Arbuckle said: "I know of no man who can produce a better tone and effect on the cornet than Hutchins." In both orchestra and band, Mr. Hutchins is distinctively a leader, and next to Sousa, undoubtedly occupies to-day the most prominent position in this country. As a musician and teacher he stands unrivalled.

In a recent interview at his home, 184 Charles St., Providence, R. I., Mr. Hutchins said:

"It is generally known that when my wife came here she was very poorly off with nervous prostration. To-day she she is the picture of health, and I must say we owe it to that splendid medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"I know of several others who have been cured within a short time by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and the quicker people affected with any nervous difficulty commence to take this great medicine, the quicker they will be cured.

"But let my wife tell her experience, which everyone, who knows her, knows is true in every particular." Mrs. Hutchins said: "I consider it my duty to state that I was permanently cured of nervous prostration by using three bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I doctored for two years or more with several eminent physicians without receiving any permanent benefit.

"My husband insisted that I should stop employing a physician at once, and commence taking the Nervura.

"It improved my health at once. It quieted my nerves; I slept well; began to have an appetite; gradually grew stronger, and after using three bottles declared myself perfectly well.

"I give my consent to publish this, and I trust it may be the means of inducing others to try this most valuable and reliable remedy."

Prominent and well known people everywhere use and recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Physicians prescribe it, and advise the sick to use it, for it is sure to give health and strength to those who are weak, nervous and debilitated. It cures headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, insomnia, nervous debility, dyspepsia, constipation, female complaints, and liver and kidney diseases. It builds up the blood, invigorates the tired brain, strengthens the weak and shattered nerves. In fact, it makes those who use it well and strong.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's

prescription, a discovery made by the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

The Busy Man.

If you would get a favor done
By some obliging friend,
And want a promise, safe and sure,
On which you can depend,
Don't go to him who always has
Much leisure time to plan,
But, if you want your favor done,
Just ask the busy man.

The man with leisure never has
A moment he can spare,
He's always "putting off" until
His friends are in despair,
But he whose every working hour
Is crowded full of work
Forgets the art of wasting time;
He cannot stop to shirk.

So, when you want a favor done,
And want it right away,
Go to the man who constantly
Works thirty hours a day.
He'll find a moment, sure, somewhere
That has no other use,
And fix you, while the idle man
Is framing an excuse.

IMPROVEMENTS ACCEPTED.

One of the best stories I have heard of late is told on a retired army officer well known in South Side circles, who is the happy father of two very pretty and charming daughters. The other day his wife was in want of a cook. A good-looking young woman called upon her with the best of recommendations, and the lady engaged her, for she was greatly pleased with the girl's appearance.

"You will understand, Sarah, however," she said, "that I cannot permit you to receive company evenings."

"You need not fear about that, ma'am," replied Sarah. "I never allow men to be dancing around me."

A few days after this the gentleman of the house invited a friend to dinner. A comment upon the excellence of the cooking led up to the subject of the cook herself. Both the Colonel and his wife were loud in their praises of the young woman below stairs.

"I caught a glimpse of her on the street the other day," remarked the visitor. "Quite ladylike and very good looking."

"Yes," replied the Colonel, "and she is as good as she is beautiful. "Why, she will not even receive any company."

"The visitor smiled at this.

"Doesn't receive any company? I think I could convince you to the contrary."

A bet of quite formidable proportions was the outcome of this conversation. To decide it the two gentlemen, much to the amusement of the wife and daughters, decided to keep watch in the grounds and see whether the pretty Sarah did or did not receive a young man, as the visitor so persistently contended.

So the two gentlemen, buttoned up to the chin in topcoats, began their vigil. It was a bitterly cold night. They were about to give it up when a side gate opened and the next moment they found themselves confronted by a good-looking young man.

"Well," said the Colonel, "who are you? Are you going to see any of the servants?"

The young man admitted he was.

"I suppose you have come a-courting?" inquired the old soldier in his blunt, old-fashioned way.

"That's a fact, Colonel," replied the young man, not the least abashed.

"And may I ask, sir, to whom you are paying your addresses?"

"To your cook, Sarah," was the reply.

"Indeed!" said the Colonel, who was somewhat taken aback at the young man's coolness. "I thought you might be after one of my daughters."

"No, Colonel," said the stranger, "I didn't think of that, but if you have anything better up stairs to offer me, I don't mind stepping along with you."—Chicago Dispatch.

Wrong.

New Woman (defiantly)—"I should like to see a man kiss me!" Old Man—"I dare say you would, but you oughtn't to admit it.

SHE SAID "YES."

A proposal of marriage by telephone is not a remarkable or infrequent occurrence in this age of electricity and bashful men, but this one is really unique.

At a certain swell club on New Year's Day a string band was in attendance, as was also a bashful young man who makes himself agreeable at regular intervals at a fashionable home in one of the suburbs. The young man's chief affability at these night sessions is centered on the daughter of the house. In fact, the young man's intentions are of a serious nature, and often has he fixed in his mind just what he would say, but when he would present himself at the house with his resolve, the honeyed sentences have died of their own sweetness, and courage has failed him.

New Year's Day, however, it all happened.

He was meditating in an easy chair at the club while gradually he was becoming conscious of something that reminded him of the young lady. It was the music. They were playing "Lohengrin," and as he listened they swept into that grand wedding march. He bounced to his feet, and in a moment the exchange had connected him with the suburban residence, and when he recognized the voice he only said:

"Listen, Clara."

The orchestra was seated just under the telephone, and the sweet strains were being reverberated to the hills.

When the band had finished he said:

"Hello, Clara; wasn't that grand."

A moment's silence, and then:

"May I engage the band to play the same march some afternoon at your house during Easter week, dear? Say yes, darling."

Another moment of silence, and then:

"Clara, I'm the happiest man alive."—Cincinnati Tribune.

WHY THE BOY CRIED.—One of the favorite winter games of the small boy who lives along the Hudson is "jumping laddie-cakes." This sport reaches its height just as the ice in the river is breaking up, and when the great cakes go floating up and down with the tide a dozen or more youngsters may be seen running from one cake to another, and sometimes making really dangerous leaps.

One day a boy, apparently about nine years old, was to be seen standing on a cake which was rocking in a somewhat alarming manner, and the little fellow was crying in a frightful sort of way.

"What's the matter," called a passer-by from the shore.

And then came the sobbing answer: "I'm afraid dis cake 'll turn over, an' if I get drowned me mother 'll lick me."—From Harper's Drawer.

A MEAN TRICK.—Patrick was one of those witty sons of the Celtic isle whose amusing sayings had entertained many transatlantic travelers.

One day, when the steamer was about leaving port, Patrick received the order to haul in a long cable that dragged astern. Patrick jumped to the task cheerfully enough, and hauled away contentedly. But the excessive length of the cable taxed his patience.

"I wonder what's become of the end of this ould cable, anyhow?" And finally, growing more impatient, he growled out: "Faith, it's no use hauling away at the baste uv a cable. Some divil's cut the end off uv it."—Harper's Magazine.

Consumption

Does not commence all at once, but a little at a time. As a rule sufferers don't know they have it until it is far advanced. Doctors cannot always tell. The trouble may not come to the surface until it has extended very far. But you know when you are running down. Stop and think; are you as well as you were a year ago? If not, take for Infants and Children.

CASTORIA

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

Mizpah.

We never used the word while you and I
Walked close together in life's working way:
There were no need for it, when hand and eye
Might meet, content and faithful, every day.

But now with anguish from a stricken heart,
Mizpah! I cry; the Lord keep watch between
Thy life and mine, that death hath riven apart;
Thy life beyond the awful veil, unseen,
And my broken being, which must glide
Through ways familiar to us both, till death
Shall, of a surety, lead me to thy side,
Beyond the chance and change of mortal breath.
Mizpah! yea, love, in all my bitter pain,
I trust God keepeth watch betwixt us twain.

The lips are dumb from which I used to hear
Strong words of counsel, tender words of praise;
Poor I must go my way without my cheer
And sunshine of thy presence all my days.

But God keeps watch my way and days upon,
On all I do, on all I bear for thee.
My work is left me, though my mate is gone;
A solemn trust has Love bequeathed to me.
I take the task thy languid hand laid down
That summer evening, for mine own alway;
And may the Giver of both cross and crown
Pronounce me faithful at our meeting day!
Mizpah! the world gives comfort to my pain;
I know God keepeth watch betwixt us twain.

—All the Year Round.

MISS THANKFUL.

It seemed to be one of the ironies of fate that her name should have been Miss Thankful Hope. Strangers smiled instinctively at the name when they first met her, for to them there was so little to be thankful for, and nothing to hope for. And yet to those of the limited number who grew to know Miss Thankful the name was, after all, quite appropriate.

She was a faded looking little woman of 45, whose plain face was only redeemed by a pair of smiling brown eyes. She was a day seamstress and made enough to pay her board and usually to keep herself suitably clothed.

It was a standing joke among the other boarders that no matter how disagreeable the day Miss Thankful could always find something pleasant to be said about it. And, no matter how unprepossessing the last new boarder, Miss Thankful's kind heart was sure to discover some excuse.

She had watched Florence, Mrs. Simmons' young daughter, grow up into womanhood and had shared her timid confidences and opinions about the different young men of the house, confidences which Florence would never have thought of telling her practical mother. There was something about Miss Thankful which invited confidence, and the two were warm friends.

It was a dull February evening, a slight snow was falling, and Miss Thankful hurried along toward home in the early dusk. The windows were lighted up and presented a tempting array of millinery, dry goods, flowers and confectionery.

But Miss Thankful did not notice any of them until she turned into Bond street, and there she walked slowly, coming to a standstill at last in front of Cooper & Cooper's large dry goods house.

She smiled as she looked in at the window. "Yes," she said softly, "it's there yet. I made sure it would be sold. So cheap, too. Only $1.50." She was gazing at a blue satin party bag, lined with delicate pink, one of those dainty French affairs which always catch a woman's eye if she has any soul for pleasing effects.

"I can't afford a new dress this year. That three weeks I was sick last month put that out of the question, and so it does seem as if I could buy that bag if I want to. Only it would be silly—downright silly!" and she sighed.

"I never had anything as pretty as that. Maybe that's why I seem to have set my heart on it. Even my dresses have been brown or black. They last better."

"I've had a kind of brown and black life anyway. But there now, that sounds complainin', and I've no cause to complain. The Lord's been good to me and prospered me right along."

"Good evening, Miss Thankful," said a cheerful voice at her side. "Right nice window. Our trimmer beats any in town. Lots of pretty things, too," he added, with the pardonable pride of a head clerk.

"Good evening, Mr. Jones," answered Miss Thankful. "Yes, I was just looking in at the goods. I"—she hesitated—"was just noticing that blue satin bag over there in the corner—see?"

"Oh, yes, that pretty bag. Pretty thing. Cheap too. I know a good piece of satin when I see it. Funny it was not sold to-day. Will be to-morrow likely."

Miss Thankful felt her desire to possess the bag increasing.

"On your way home? Let me take your umbrella," and they walked on together.

Miss Thankful had a decided liking for this one of the boarders, partly because he never forgot to show her the same courtesy that he would show to Florence or any younger woman. And this is very gratifying to a woman who has no claim to youth or beauty.

He was a timid young man, with a colorless mustache and drab hair, who talked with a jerk, but Miss thankful always liked him.

When she reached the boarding house, she went very thoughtfully up to her room. Mr. Jones had discoursed most of the way upon the amiable qualities Florence possessed, all of which remarks she had heartily seconded. When she had lighted the gas, she sat down with the thoughtful expression still on her face.

"I wonder," she said. "I do just wonder. But he would never under the shining sun have the courage to tell her," and she smiled.

"Mr Jones—a name I do abominate, and Florence so pretty—and him with those colorless eyes and washed out hair! But then he is just as kind as he can be, and I make no dout would be a good provider."

The next night when Miss Thankful came into her room she turned on both the gas jets—an unheard of extravagance. She carried a small parcel done up in tissue paper, and before she stopped to take off her bonnet she went over to the bed and untied the package. It was the blue satin party bag.

"It's a lot prettier than it was at the store," she said, smiling at it when it lay spread out on the white cover in all the arrogance of assured beauty.

"Those pink roses are lovely. I'm silly as as I can be. I know that well enough! That's why I asked Mr. Jones not to speak of my getting it. Maybe next summer I can have a lawn with a little blue sprig in it. This would go beautifully with that. I don't think I'm too old for a lawn on a hot day, and I'm just glad I got it—so there!" Then she wrapped up the bag and put it away in her trunk.

After supper Florence came up to visit her, and Miss Thankful was tempted to tell her about it. But she was full of her own plans, and the bag was not mentioned.

"There is to be a party to-morrow evening at Mary Moor's. It's the 14th, you know," said Florence happily. "I am going to wear my blue cloth dress. I've worn it a lot, Miss Thankful, but mother says I may have a new sash. That will freshen it up. But, oh, I wish, I do wish I could have a party bag that I saw down in Cooper's window. It was a light blue and lined with pink. Such a beauty! I wish you had seen it. I can't have anything but the sash, though, and so there is no use in wishing."

"I did see it," said Miss Thankful "and it was pretty. I sorter wished for it myself."

Florence laughed. "Oh, of course, you would not want it, but if you had seen it 20 years ago you might have," she said, with the serene thoughtlessness of youth.

Miss Thankful grew silent.

"Mr. Jones has asked me to go to evening service twice lately," she went on presently.

"I think he is about the best looking young man here, don't you, Miss Thankful? He never talks much, but I suppose he thinks a great deal. I used to think he disliked me, he stammered so whenever I spoke to him, but I guess it was just because he didn't feel acquainted." And then followed a recital of Mr. Jones' sayings.

After she had gone Miss Thankful sat for a long, long time in front of the grate, with sad dreamy eyes fixed on the fire. She was going over in her mind a time 25 years before.

"He was nothing like Mr. Jones," she said. "He was good looking and so tall, but he was just as timid, and I acted as careless and indifferent as I knew how. Girls are foolish creatures. He never got up courage to tell me. And then we moved away, and that was all. No other man ever looked at me, and I can't say as I want them to."

She undressed slowly. She felt old. This looking back at one's youth has a tendency to make one feel old if it lies 25 years behind one.

When she was all ready for bed, she opened the trunk and took out the party bag.

She opened the door and listened. Everything was still in the dim hall. Florence's room was only a few doors away. Miss Thankful slipped noiselessly along, and when she reached the door she hung the ribbon over the knob and as softly stole back.

She had put no card in the bag; there was no need. Florence would know who sent it, and then she went to bed and to sleep.

"Oh, Miss Thankful,' she cried, "I have had the loveliest gift! What do you think—that blue satin party bag!"

"Of course Mr. Jones sent it. I asked him last night if it was sold yet, and he grew just as red and stammered so. I know why now. Mother says I may keep it, and I wrote him a note of thanks this morning and put it under his plate. That was the easiest way of thanking him. He is having an early breakfast now, so I thought I would wait and go down with you this time." And she fluttered about the room in happy excitement.

Meantime Mr. Jones was in a very uncertain and puzzled state of bliss. The note had thanked him for his beautiful gift, but neglected to tell what the gift was.

He left the house without being able to get a glimpse of Florence.

At noon there was another tiny white missive under his door. But this, much to his disappointment, proved to be from Miss Thankful:

DEAR MR. JONES.—Florence thinks you sent that satin bag. It would be dreadful for her to know differently after thanking you for it. For her sake, please do not ever tell her that you did not. Your friend, THANKFUL HOPE.

Mr. Jones studied this note with smiling eyes.

"For her sake," that clause gave him a quick thrill of pleasure. She would be sorry to find out, then, that it was not his gift.

He must answer Florence's note, and this was the result of a half dozen attempts:

DEAR MISS FLORENCE.—That bag could not hold the valentine I would like to give you if I dared. It is the biggest and homeliest valentine a young lady ever got. If you care to have me tell you about it, please carry the blue satin bag when you come down to dinner.
ERASTUS JONES.

He could hear Florence singing in her room, and he called the bellboy and sent the note to her.

"There now," he said, when this had been accomplished, "if it had not been for Miss Thankful I would never have had the grit to send that, and, what's more, I believe Miss Thankful knew it, bless her!"

"If Florence does have that blue thing on her arm, I'll give Miss Thankful the very best dress that Cooper & Cooper have in the store."

And Miss Thankful got the dress.—Ann Deming Gray, in Hartford Courant.

BE ON HAND.

If you are going to do anything, do it promptly.

The longer you wait and think about it, and dread it, the worse it will be.

Be on hand. Life is a great deal pleasanter to the man who promptly does what he is required to do.

Don't keep your friends waiting. You have no right to waste the time of other people. If you are one-half hour behind time in fulfilling an engagement, you may cause a dozen other parties to break engagements, and untold perplexities and delays may come out of just that little shortcoming of yours which you look upon as such a trifling thing.

To an active, energetic, wide-awake person there is nothing more trying and annoying than to be made to wait.

Brace up and make an effort, you shiftless, indolent always behind hand folks and see if you cannot come to time.

If you have agreed to be at a certain place at a certain time, be there unless you are sick or dead. In either case you might be excused, but not otherwise.

If you are a man, don't keep your wife waiting dinner for you, unless there is some good and sufficient cause—and generally there is not. Waiting a dinner spoils not only the dinner, but the temper of the woman who is managing it.

If you are a woman, and your husband says he will be round at 4 o'clock to take you to drive, be ready for him. Have your bonnet and gloves on. Don't keep him dancing on the sidewalk for half an hour clinging to a fidgety horse, while you leisurely get on your wraps, and look at your back hair in a hand glass, and hunt up your gloves and your parasol, and wonder whether you had better take an extra shawl or not. Have all these things attended to and decided on before the time he has fixed.

A little system, and a good deal of determination, will help you to be prompt. And after you once get into the habit of it you will like it.

It is refreshing to do business with a party who is always on time, and who, you know, will be on time. He begets courage and confidence in everybody with whom he comes in contact. He is a power in society. He is a blessing to the world. When he dies he will be missed.

Teach the children early to be prompt. Teach them to respect a promise. Bring them up to tell the truth and stick to it. A broken engagement is a lie. Sometimes it is worse than a lie, and causes more unpleasant complications than a lie. Be careful in making agreements, but when you have once agreed, stick to the terms of the agreement. —Exchange.

ANTIQUE LOAN EXHIBITION

Considering the impromptu nature of the affair, the loan exhibition of antiquities held last week by Mrs. W. K. Peirce brought out a remarkable display of choice and interesting relics. The house itself, the residence of the late Warren Tarbell, formed an appropriate setting for the collection, having passed its hundredth birthday by more than a decade. It was built in 1783 by Maj. Abner Morgan, who distinguished himself in the expedition against Quebec under Montgomery, and who was the delegate from Brimfield to attend the Massachusetts convention which ratified the constitution of the United States. The modern furniture of the parlor of this "aristocratic mansion," as it was called in its day, was replaced by ancient chairs and tables; hand-woven spreads and linen served as draperies and table covers, while antique looking glasses, profiles, samplers, ancient documents and various issues of paper money decorated the walls.

More than a hundred pieces of crockery, china and glass were artistically arranged on the shelves of the deep parlor cupboard and in the window seats, as well as upon tables; pewter mugs, platters and porringers, ornamented the chimney mantel, above which were suspended against the broad panelling two styles of flint-locks and a sword used on training days. In another room the young folks watched the process of spinning yarn with wide-open eyes, and listened for the mysterious clock reel to strike. Then they rocked the cradles of the great-great-grandfathers with their doll-occupants, ancient and modern, and marvelled at the foot-stoves, the big oven shovels, long home-made boiled dinner forks and other utensils of ye olden time.

In the evening a few rays of light struggled through the perforations of the tin lantern swinging on the porch; a lantern of little later style illuminated the hall, while tallow candles in various kinds of candlesticks added to the cheer within. In addition to the articles already mentioned, there were bead bags and saddle-bags, trunks and trays, tiny balances, odd bottles, wedding finery and exquisite embroidery, women's bonnets and children's caps and shoes, and many other things illustrating the life of the last century. While a large share of the six hundred contributions were over a hundred years old, the following dated further back: Looking-glass 250 years; pewter mug, brass candlestick, pepper box, plate and cup, each 200 years; a piece of hand embroidery and several other articles 150 years.

An immense blue platter, like the one on exhibition at the old state house was shown. This belongs to large set decorated with views of public buildings and has a representation of the capitol at Washington. Several other pieces of the set were shown whose illustrations are designated as "Beauties of America." A dozen varieties of blue ware, including two historical plates were counted. There was a curious plate of stone ware made by Gen. Stacy before the Revolution, now in the possession of his great-grandson, Postmaster Pierson. In glass, there were fine decanters, toddy glasses and wine-glasses. The article of handiwork which called forth most exclamations of wonder was a quilt bearing the inscription: "Wrought by Eliza Sumner," who was a sister of the late William Sumner of Worcester. The design consists in part of a representation of some of the heavenly bodies, several constellations being accurately reproduced by stars of fine white silk upon a blue ground. The conception and skillfulness of this peice of handiwork make it a work of art, considering the times when women had fewer ways of expressing their genius and artistic sense.

Curiosities from India, Turkey and the Sandwich Islands had added interest attached to them on account of their associations with missionaries who once lived in Brimfield. Fine specimens of Indian relics found on farms in town received careful inspection. Among the old books were Henry's Works, 1726; a Latin grammar, all in Latin, printed in 1793, supposed to have been used by Timothy Danielson, and having the name of Frederick Lincoln on the fly leaf, and a score more of ancient volumes. "A geographical grammar," having the chief towns of North America put down, as Mexico, Boston and Quebec, astonished the pupils of the present day. A Harvard commencement programme of 1769, John Winthrop, president, showed among twenty-two striking subjects the following remarkable thesis: "An Lazarus, si, priusquam mortuus fuerit, res suas per Testamentum distribuisset, post resuscitationem jure vendicate potuerit," which translated means "Whether Lazarus, if he had distributed his property by will before he died, could by law claim it again after he was restored to life." A dentists' bill dated Marlborough St., Boston, 1759, advertises "artificial teeth which give a youthful air to the countenance," adding that canes, umbrellas and musical instruments are found at the same place, besides electrical treatment so much in demand. The bill was made out to W. John Nyles. There was an autograph letter of Daniel Webster's, now in the possession of Rev. Webster Peirce; also two letters of special local interest historically, from Gen. Eaton and Gen. Gates. The former was once a resident of Brimfield and Gen. Gates's letter dated at Albany, May, 1777, is addressed to Gen. Timothy Danielson of this town, great-grandfather of Mrs. Peirce. Gen. Danielson had command of the troops of Western Massachusetts at that time, and is called by Dr. Holland "the leading spirit of this region in the Revolutionary period." Delegations from the Hitchcock Free High School and pupils from the grammar school were present at different times, thereby gaining valuable lessons in history. Mr. and Mrs. Flynt braved the severe weather to drive from Monson. The oldest visitor was Amos Munroe, the youngest, Munroe Tarbell. Several ladies were finely attired in the costumes of past days.

Brimfield, setted at an early period by Springfield families and originally including Monson, Wales and Holland, has a rich historic record. It is to be hoped that the interest awakened by such an exhibition will not die out but that it will cause further, research, and careful preservation of relics and finally result in some permanent organization.

THE DOG NEEDED SAND.—Among the Indians who sell baskets to the city visitors at Elizabethtown in the Adirondacks is a sturdy young buck of about 17. Recently he delivered a basket to a guest at the Valley house. He was followed by a yellow dog, which attracted the gentleman's attention.

"Is that a good dog?" he asked the Indian.

"Yes," said the latter, "he's a good fighter, but he didn't used to be." "How is that?" asked the gentleman.

"Well, I asked a white boy why he was always running away from the other dogs, and he said he needed sand; so I took him and stuffed his throat with it. He almost died, but I guest he's got plenty of it now, for he can lick any dog in the village."—New York Sun.

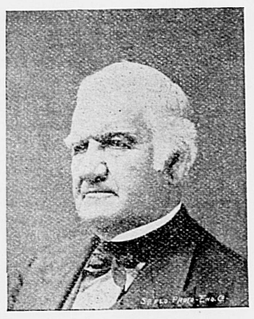
PALMER NEWS.

LYMAN DIMOCK.

Death of a Prominent Citizen, Well Known in Other Localities.

Lyman Dimock, for many years a well-known resident of this town, died at his home on Park street on Sunday night last. Mr. Dimock was born at Huntington June 14th, 1811, and lived there until 1855, when he removed to Westfield. While residing in the former town he was for a number of years engaged in manufacturing, and later for about twelve years in the mercantile business, which he continued to carry on during his residence in Westfield. He came to this town in 1863 and opened a boot and shoe store at the place now occupied by W. A. Weld. This for a long time was the only store in Palmer devoted exclusively to the boot and shoe trade, and it was successfully conducted by Mr. Dimock until 1878, when he disposed of it and retired from business. While thus engaged Mr. Dimock established a reputation for strict integrity, and by close attention to business he was able to retire with a competency amply sufficient for all his needs.



During the active portion of his life Mr. Dimock was an intelligent observer of social and political events, and at all times kept himself thoroughly informed regarding current public affairs. In town matters he was always deeply interested, and no duty which confronted him as a citizen, however trivial it might seem to be, was ever left by him unattended to. He was in no sense an office seeker, but his fitness for public service was so generally recognized that he was frequently called to positions of responsibility and trust. He was repeatedly elected to town office in the different municipalities in which he resided, and very soon after coming to Palmer was made its clerk and treasurer, offices which he held for some years. At Huntington he was postmaster for four years, and represented that town in the Legislature. He was returned to the Legislature from this town soon after his removal here, and in 1859 and 1860, while residing in Westfield, was a member of the governor's council, Gov. Banks then filling the office of chief executive. Mr. Dimock was always an earnest Republican, and heartily supported the candidates of his party. During his residence in this town he has been a leading member of the Baptist church, contributing liberally toward its support, active in church work, and ready in every way to promote its prosperity and widen its influence. Mr. Dimock has been twice married, his second wife, who survives him, being a daughter of the late Rev. Ambrose Day of Westfield, and a sister of Rev. H. Day, D. D., of Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. Dimock was a direct descendant of Thomas Dimmock, the first of the name in America. This Thomas Dimmock helped in the settlement of Scituate, near Boston, and then went further down the Cape to Barnstable, of which town he was one of the most prominent settlers, and where he died in 1669. Thomas Dimmock had but one son, Shubael, who lived to have descendants, and he moved to Mansfield, Ct., and among his descendants was Joseph Dimock, who married Elizabeth Kimball and went to Massachusetts, settling at Norwich (now Huntington). Lyman Dimock was one of the few descendants of this Joseph Dimock who still bore the Dimock name, many of them having been daughters who have married into other families. A prominent descendant of Joseph Dimock, and consequently a not distant relative of Mr. Dimock, was Hon. Kimball H. Dimock, who was a noted man in the early history of California, and whose life was given in the American Whig Review many years ago.

For more than thirty years Mr. Dimock has been a prominent figure on our streets. Cordial in his manners and kind and friendly to a marked degree in his relations with those with whom he chanced to come in contact in business and social life, he was everywhere highly esteemed and commanded universal respect. Advancing age and the infirmities incident thereto have kept Mr. Dimock in doors a large part of the time for the past two or three years, so that he has been but little seen excepting by his immediate neighbors, but he will be long remembered as a man of sterling character, a citizen who for many years has been an honor to the town, and a most worthy example of all that goes to make up a pure, ripe and earnest manhood.

Death of Charles Tesch.

Charles H. Tesch, 75, died at his residence on Thorndike street Sunday night at 11.30 o'clock. Mr. Tesch has lived in his home alone for some time, and worked regularly at his trade as a tailor. The Tuesday preceding his death he complained of not feeling well and went home early in the day. As he did not go to work Wednesday, his employer, F. J. Wassum, called at his house. He found Mr. Tesch very ill and unable to do anything for himself. A physician was summoned and friends did everything possible to aid the sick man. His daughter, Mrs. Mary H. Leedham of Reading, Pa., was telegraphed for but did not arrive until the morning after his death. Mr. Tesch's disease was pneumonia, and he never before suffered from any illness which necessitated calling a physician. He was born in Germany, and came to this country in 1852, locating in Monson, where he was married. After a residence of three years in Monson he came to Palmer, where he has since resided, being all that time in the employ of Mr. Wassum, with whom he worked three years in Germany. Mr. Tesch buried his wife about 12 years ago, and Mrs. Leedham is the only child. She has been appointed administratrix of his estate, and will remain in Palmer some time before her return to Reading. The funeral was held at his late residence Wednesday afternoon.

James C. Burnham Passes Away.

James C. Burnham, one of the oldest residents of the town, died at 6 o'clock this morning at the age of 79, having been born in Woodstock, Ct., March 16, 1816. Mr. Burnham came to Palmer when quite a young man and has since resided in town. He followed the occupation of farming all his life until the last few years, when his health failed him. In his younger days Mr. Burnham was a very active politician, being one of the first in this vicinity to join the ranks of the Republican party. He has been a prominent and leading Adventist for many years. In 1840 he was married in Brimfield to Harriet Ferry, who died about five years ago. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 1.30, in the Advent chapel on Park street.

Will be Worth Hearing.

The next entertainment in the Palmer high school course will be given in the Congregational church next Wednesday evening by the Amherst College Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs. Honors for a Palmer Boy.

Cyrus F. Stimson, a Palmer boy, now of Yale Theological Seminary, was examined for licensure to preach by the Hampden County Ministerial Association at its quarterly meeting Tuesday in Springfield. It is unusual for seminary students to be licensed or to be permitted by the seminary faculty to preach before the last part of their second year. But Mr. Stimson had been voted a special permission by the Yale faculty, and came before the association in the middle of his first year for a regular license. He was given a searching examination, which he sustained with intellectual vigor, and was granted the license, contrary to custom, on the ground that his case was a special one. Mr. Stimson will preach next Sunday in the West End Congregational church, Bridgport, Ct.

William Merriam has his house connected with the telephone exchange.

Miss Blanche Hatch of Ware has been visiting Miss Hattie Paine this week.

H. N. Sager has returned from Gardner, Me, where he has been sick for some time.

Red Cloud, the wandering religious crank, passed through Palmer on his way to Boston Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rogers entertained a whist party at their home on Central street Tuesday evening.

H. T. Huntington was thrown from his sleigh Thursday by his horse shying, and was slightly injured.

The junior department of the Congregational Sunday school is arranging for an entertainment March 1st.

The body of Joseph C. Burgess of Collinsville, Ct., formerly of Palmer, was brought here for burial Tuesday.

Mrs. W. A. Barnes is still quite ill at her residence, but is slowly recovering, and is considered out of danger.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Burgess and daughter of Plymouth have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Eager the past week.

There are about 800 feet of hose coiled up in the engine house, near the door, which can be put upon a sled in case of fire.

Johanna Kinlary, 72, an insane person, who has been an inmate of the town poor farm for several years, died there Sunday.

The Democratic town committee has organized with J. F. Foley chairman, F. L. Pierce treasurer, and T. F. Sullivan secretary.

The Universalist parish meeting, which was called for last Tuesday evening, was adjourned until a week from next Tuesday.

A private cue rack has been placed in the rooms of the business and social club, for the use of members who own their own cues.

The Ladies' Tuesday Social Club will be entertained by Mrs. C. K. Gamwell at her residence on Park street next Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Silas H. Ellery is driving a new trotter purchased in Boston the last of last week. The doctor hopes he will prove to be a snow horse.

The ladies' society of the Congregational church will send a barrel of clothing to the western home missionary association in a few days.

Rev. John Richards of Boston gave a lecture on London yesterday afternoon at the house of Mrs. A. W. Thayer to a few invited friends.

The attraction this week in D. L. Bodfish's show window is a miniature Brooklyn bridge made of cakes of castile soap, and is well worth inspection.

The slaters are at work on the roof of the new Odd Fellows' building, and the interior is being cleared of the debris left by the carpenters and bricklayers.

There were 184 cases of drunkenness in the district court during 1894. Of this number, 88 were residents of the town of Palmer and 96 were from various other towns.

Next Thursday will be observed as parents' day in all the schools of the town, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present and witness the exercises.

Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst entertained her Sunday school class of the Baptist church at her residence on the corner of South Main street and Fox avenue Wednesday afternoon.

The Democratic town committee has engaged the town house for the evening of the 8th of March, at which time their caucus to nominate officers for the annual town meeting will be held.

F. F. Marcy's horse indulged in a run from the post office to the lumber yard Monday morning, having been left unfastened for a few moments, but no damage was done, the sleigh not even being overturned.

The Union Association of Universalist Churches of Western Massachusetts will hold a convention in Worcester next Tuesday. Rev. H. F. Moulton will present a paper on "The Observance of Lent," and several members of St. Paul's will attend.

A week from Sunday will be Temperance Sunday in Palmer. All the pastors of the town will preach on the subject of temperance, and will endeavor to arouse the interest of their congregations in the struggle which is to come at the next town meeting.

A very successful social and an exhibition of the phonograph was held at St. Paul's church Wednesday evening. The occasion was the 20th anniversary of the first preaching service held by the church in Wales Hall, when a sermon was delivered by Prof. Shipman.

The morning sermon at the Congregational church next Sunday, will be on "A Silenced Conscience." In the evening the pastor will give a sermon-lecture on "Wanted, Light on Dark Subjects." The quartette will be assisted by Mr. J. Eberhardt of Springfield, with his cornet.

Mr. Elmer, the cracker man, arrived in town Tuesday, and says Palmer is far ahead of its neighbors in the matter of breaking out roads. He had made the trip from Belchertown to Bondsville that day, and had tipped over four times, three times being compelled to get help to shovel out.

In the suit of Lizzie Cross of Westmoreland, N. H., against Dr. Cyrus W. Cross of Palmer for alienating the affections of her husband, Chester W. Cross, son of the defendant, which was tried in the superior court at Springfield this week, the claim being $5000 damage, the jury awarded the plaintiff $450.

About 40 of the young friends of Miss Dora Todd made her a surprise visit at her home on Pine street Tuesday evening, and presented her with a handsome plush rocker, Thomas Roche, Jr., making the presentation speech. The company spent the evening pleasantly, with music, dancing and games. A collation was also served.

Rev. E. Owen and wife of Albion, Maine, and E. Scott Owen of Portsmouth, N. H., are in town this week, guests of Mr. Owen's sister, Mrs. C. N. Coleman, being called this way by the death of Mrs. Owen's mother, Mrs. Ezra Walker, whose funeral will be attended to-morrow afternoon at Ludlow at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Newell Alden. The burial will be at South Belchertown.

D. D. G. M. Mrs. Hunt and suite of Springfield, with 12 assistants, will install the following officers of Good Cheer Lodge, D. of R., at its next regular meeting, Feb. 26th: N. G., Mrs. Ella Washburn; V. G., Miss Jennie Eastman; recording secretary, Mrs. L. G. Parkhurst; treasurer, Mrs. Georgia Fuller; financial secretary, Miss May E. Robinson. A collation will be served after the installation.

The dates for the annual cattle show and fair of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society have been fixed for September 17th and 18th. The directors have not fully arranged the premium list, but have it all completed with the exception of two or three items, and have arranged for some new attractions which they think will prove satisfactory to both exhibitors and the attending public.

John G. Woolley, probably the greatest temperance orator in the world, will give a lecture in Palmer on Tuesday evening, Feb. 26, under the auspices of the Palmer No-License League. Mr. Woolley is engaged for fifty lectures in New England, and Palmer is so fortunate as to secure one of his dates by making application on the next day after it was known that he was coming to New England.

The choir of St. Paul's Universalist church has organized with George W. Ely as director and bass; Miss Clara Sexton of Springfield, soprano; Miss Effie Moffatt, alto; F. A. Royce, tenor. Mrs. H. M. Auger resigned her position as organist in December, to take effect on January 1st, but has been playing since then as an accommodation to the parish. She has consented to preside at the organ till August 1st, after which Miss Annie Fish will take her place.

The Quaboag Literary Circle will meet in the library rooms this evening, and the public is invited to attend. Dr. O. P. Allen will read a paper giving the derivation and history of eighty of the more prominent family names of Palmer, many of them being traced back to England and other old countries. Miss Ethel Ely will render Margaret Sangster's "Maid of the Legion of Honor," and Miss Anna Shaw will read the varied selection of the Round Table.

Fred H. Clark of North Brookfield came before the district court Monday for drunkenness. His case was continued till March 16, and he was allowed to go without bail. John Bystry was up for assault the same day. He furnished $25 bail and had his case continued one week. On Tuesday John Bystry and Antonio Boro each paid $10 for assault. Antonio Boro, Alex Dobules and Michael Buck were up the same day for overdriving a team, and Antonio paid $7, Alex $5, and Michael was discharged. Charles E. Bacon and George E. Sibley of Brimfield each paid a fine of $5 this morning for drunkenness.

A meeting of the men in precinct A who are interested in carrying the town for no-license next year was held in the court room Monday evening. The Palmer No-license League was formed, and these officers chosen: President, L. H. Gager; secretary, A. W. Thayer; treasurer, William Merriam; executive committee, L. H. Gager, A. W. Thayer, William Merriam, George H. Hastings, Hubbard Lawrence. The league proposes to do all in its power to carry the town for no-license, and its members are sanguine of success. It was also voted that in case a Law and Order league is former later the no-license league should lend its aid in the formation. It is proposed if a no-license vote is secured, to form a Law and Order league, whose duties will be to see that the law is enforced.

The road across the flat west of the Fay bridge on the road to Monson is one that needs the attention of the highway commissioner. There is a great amount of teaming over the road, and this flat is usually swept bare of snow if there is any wind when the snow falls, and generally soon after the storm at any rate, but a little work would put it in good condition for sleighs. A local man who this week had a large amount of teaming to do across this flat found that he must either go to a large expense for horses enough to haul wagons through the heavy snow each side of the flat, or else snow it at his own expense, and adopted the latter course as the least expensive. He was surprised to find that two men working three hours each, the total expense being 90 cents, put the road in good condition for sleds hauling heavy loads. This is a matter which the town ought to attend to.

Miss Minnie Dunn of Monson was taken to her home Monday afternoon, having been ill at the Converse House since Friday. Miss Dunn was one of the funeral party which followed the body of John Dunn to the grave, and upon reaching Palmer was unable to go on. Several of the party suffered severely on the trip from Monson to Palmer and were forced to return to Monson without continuing to the cemetery. A brother of the deceased was so badly chilled as to require the services of a physician to restore circulation. Miss Dunn had been suffering from nervousness for several days preceding the funeral, and had experienced several fainting spells during that time. Upon the arrival of the party at the Converse House it was found to be impossible to restore Miss Dunn to consciousness, and Dr. L. H. Hendee was called. He attended her until her removal to her home, assisted by her friends and the people of the hotel. Miss Dunn is said to be slowly recovering, and is considered out of danger.

If water takers who get their supply from the pipes of the Palmer Water Company have noticed a peculiar odor and taste, something like decayed wood, in connection with the water during the past few weeks,—and who of them have not?—they may be interested in knowing the reason. It is because the water is now being drawn from the center or largest reservoir, which the company had hoped it would not be compelled to draw on this winter, but the continued cold weather has so diminished the flow of water in the brook that there was nothing to do but draw on this reserve supply, the reservoir having been filled with the rains of last fall. A large part of the ground flowed was bare all last summer, and when cold weather came was covered with more or less vegetation, which was of course killed by the frost, and was not removed before the reservoir was flooded. This is the cause of the taste and odor in the water. Mr. Gamwell, manager of the water company, announces that he is making arrangements to have pumping machinery located over the artesian wells drilled at the reservoirs last summer, and hopes to have it in operation soon, when the quality of the water will be improved.

A Correction.

A statement made by me at the meeting in which the Palmer No-License League was organized needs correction. I should have said that 184 cases of drunkenness came before our district court in 1894. Of these 180 arrests were made in Palmer, 3 in Monson and 1 in Holland, showing the relative facilities for drunkenness in the three towns. The statement at the meeting was made through a partial misunderstanding of the explanation of the court records given me. The above facts are as strong against license as the statement made at the meeting, if not more so, but I wish to be absolutely correct in my statements; hence this correction.

FRANK E. JENKINS.

Mr. Editor:—Permit me to use a few lines in this week's issue of the JOURNAL to call attention to the Quaboag Literary Circle. The few of us who have kept this organization alive for the past months have been sometimes pained because more do not afford themselves of its splendid opportunities for a refreshing of their historical knowledge and a quickening of their intellectual life. Every country village is in need of a society like this one, and it should receive the hearty cooperation of a large number of persons. We are now dealing largely with English history. The essays show wide reading, careful thinking and literary ability. The other exercises of each meeting, such as our paper, "The Round Table," and a select reading, are always instructive and interesting. A historical student and lecturer has recently said: "The study of history will give vigorous power of attention, memory, judgment, imagination; knowledge of the thoughts as well as the deeds of the past, which shall give guidance for the present; and an acquaintance with noble lives which will inspire to noble living." Friends, you are all invited to meet with us.

H. F. MOULTON.

State Primary School Notes.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins spoke to the children last Sunday.

Willie Strong Thorne, age 10, died at the school yesterday morning, after an illness of a few weeks.

Mrs. W. A. Wheeler has been very sick with the grippe during the past week, but is now much better.

Supt. Chapin and the boss farmer at the Lyman School at Westboro made a visit with Mr. Walker, one of the board of trustees, to the school Monday.

BONDSVILLE.

Henry Hobson attended the Grand Army encampment in Springfield this week.

Mrs. Child's father and mother from Lowell have been visiting her this last week.

Miss Edith Hobson is expected home from the training school in Springfield the 21st, for a week's vacation.

Mrs. Annie Crouch, who has been taking care of her father, who is sick, has returned to her home in West Warren.

Mrs. E. J. Fuller and son of Forest Lake is stopping with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller, for a few weeks.

Mrs. Henry Hobson spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week with her aunt, Mrs. Henry Abbey of Walnut street, Springfield.

The W. C. T. U. has engaged Mrs. M. E. Gleason of Roslindale to give an address on "Narcotics" next Thursday in the M. E. church.

The plumbers were kept busy Saturday and Monday thawing out pumps. About every pump in the place was frozen up. People could not keep warm, and one woman shut her blinds and lighted her lamps to keep warm, but with stoves and a furnace running she was unsuccessful.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Jennie Kendrick has been quite ill with a cold this week.

Arthur Bates of Monson was Miss Carrie Johnson's guest Sunday.

Mrs. Marble of Webster was the guest of Mrs. Newell a few days this week.

Mrs. Bell of East Chatham, N.Y., is spending this week with her son, Dr. Bell.

A number of the young people are planning to have a sleigh ride to-morrow evening.

Mr. Abare, who has been suffering for some time past from varicose veins, is slowly recovering.

Dr. Bliss's many friends will be glad to know that he is now convalescent, and is at his home in this place.

Mrs. Ed. Carroll, who has been ill for several months, was taken worse yesterday, and there are slight hopes of her recovery.

The teachers of the public schools have been availing themselves of the opportunities of the good sleighing and fine weather of this week, by giving the pupils some delightful outings.

Charles Russell traded horses with a man in Ware one day this week, and although both animals are old Mr. Russell got the big end of the bargain, as the Ware man had some difficulty to urge his equine to its destination.

Mrs. C. Russell, while out sleigh riding one day this week, had a close call from being injured. The horse became frightened at a team coming in an opposite direction and ran over a snow drift, throwing the occupants out. Mrs. Russell is an excellent driver, and had several of her children with her, but fortunately none of them were hurt.

One man on East Main street whose residence has suffered so much from Hyperborian gales and western blizzards during the past week, is determined to be prepared for such emergencies in the future. He has spent some of the fine days this week in fortifying every aperture in the mansion which was intended for a casement with double windows.

The W. C. T. U., will meet with Mrs. W. Twogood next Friday afternoon, as the meeting which was to be held last Friday was postponed on account of the storm. The temperance meeting which was to be held in the Baptist church was put off for the same reason. Arrangements will be made next Friday for holding the temperance rally at a future date.

THORNDIKE.

Dr. Bell of Three Rivers is to have an office in this place.

The whist club met with Miss Anna Bishop Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Bishop of Millbury spent Tuesday in town.

Mrs. James O. Kensington of Yorktown, N. Y., is visiting in town.

Mrs. H. Adams of Hartford, Ct., is visiting Mrs. W. Trumble and Miss Laura Johnson.

The rink will be open as usual this week. A large number was present last Saturday evening.

Misses Annie Johnson and Nellie Connor of Northampton were guests of Miss Maggie McKelligett this week.

Dentist Flynn of Pittsfield was in town for a few hours this week, being called to Monson to attend the funeral of a relative.

F. E. Walker and family have removed from Wilson's building on Church street to the other end of the village, into Mrs. J. W. Molloy's house.

About 12 couples from Monson took a sleigh ride to this place Wednesday evening, taking supper at the Clinton House and enjoying a dance in the hall.

There is some talk of organizing a camera club in the village, several young women having expressed a desire to become members should one be formed.

The phonograph exhibition in the Congregational church Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society, was largely attended and much enjoyed.

Frank Root, an old resident of this place, died at his home Saturday quite suddenly, having had a shock, from which he did not recover. His funeral took place Tuesday morning from St. Anne's church.

Several from this place went to West Warren on Tuesday to attend the funeral of Michael Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan was well known in town, having married some years ago Hannah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. McCormack.

While two Poles were driving down Pine avenue on Sunday they were thrown out of the sleigh. The horse ran and brought up at the electric light pole near No. 1 mill. The occupants were uninjured, but the sleigh and harness were somewhat damaged.

The Foresters' Ball.

The most brilliant ball ever given in this place was that which took place last Friday evening under the auspices of Court Hampden Order of Foresters, the occasion being the second annual concert and ball of the society. The concert, given by Bird's Orchestra of Marlboro, was finely rendered and heartily encored, "The Trip to Coney Island," a descriptive piece, being worthy of mention. Dancing began about 9.45, and despite the very severe weather a large number were present. The following persons took part in the grand march:

Thomas J. Moran and Miss Bridgie Moran, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Keefe, Michael and Kate Loftus, Mr. and Mrs. John Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gay, C. L. McCarty and Miss Maggie Longtine, John and Katie Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan, George Hutchinson and Mary Keefe, M. J. Roche and Nellie Riley, William Gerald and Nellie Coffey, Mr. and Mrs. David Grigware, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Coffey, Chester Cross and Mary Labonte, E. Hodge and Mary Moran, J. J. Kelly and Miss Keefe, Charles Hamilton and Hannah Lynch, J. Gebo and M. Hartnett, Maurice and Katie Lawlor, Michael McKeltiget and Minnie Lawlor, John Gebo and Lena Fortune, E. Longtine and Cora Furkey, F. Flemming and sister Katie, Thomas Longtine and Lizzie O'Connor, Michael Sullivan and Mary Stokes, Dennis Daily and Lizzie McAuliffe, M. Hurley and Lillie Murphy, M. Longtine and Josie Mannix, Michael and Katie Daily, Fred Gebo and Miss Chemaine, Mr. and Miss Frindable, John Stokes and Lizzie Hartnett, John and Katie Murphy, D. J. Sullivan and Katie Donovan, P. Stokes and Nellie O'Connor, W. Coleman and Miss Remie, George Hutchinson and Mary Keefe, Joseph Gerua and Minnie Lafara, Bessie and Kate McCarty, Maggie and Mary Murphy, Estella Trimble and daughter, Mary Murray, Minnie Murphy, Josie and Nellie Riley, Misses Kennedy, Mary Roach, Hannah Ford, Mary and Bessie Healey, Agnes and Hannah Stokes, Kate Lynch, Amanda Gay, Josie Murphy, Nellie Fleming, Clara and Maud Young, Mamie Fleming, Nellie Hartnett, Josie Sullivan, Nellie Murphy.

To the committee of arrangements of the affair is due no small share of credit for its success. During intermission supper was served at the Clinton House. Several from out of town were present, parties coming from Springfield, Ware, Palmer, Three Rivers and Northampton. Those present danced until the 24 numbers on the programme were exhausted, and then wended their way homeward to dream of the happy hours passed at the Foresters' ball.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 13, 1895.

The mass of legislative business which the people have brought to the state house this year is in considerable excess of that of any year before, and Clerk McLaughlin says that a short session is impossible. Yet he suggests a way in which a material saving of time could be made. If members who introduce bills which are their own pet ideas and not the desire of any large number of petitioners were called before the committees and required to explain them, with less formality than is now observed, these matters might be disposed of more rapidly.

The chief differences between the Norwegian liquor license bill of this year and that of last year are that the new bill permits only 5 per cent profit to be made, instead of 6; the law is to apply to only places of 5000 people or more, and part of the profits is to be used for coffee-houses and reading rooms to be located not nearer to a saloon than 400 feet.

One of the petitions has been called out by the brutality of college foot ball games, and proposes to prohibit any such games hereafter between students of colleges or other educational institutions. In spite of the brutality last November at Springfield, it is not to be expected that this bill will become a law.

All pessons in the employ of state, city or county, who come under the civil service rules, have an interest in a bill introduced in the House by Mr. George of Haverhill to provide that they shall all be reëxamined every four years regarding their fitness to hold office, and if they cannot pass the examination they must forthwith be removed. The bill seems to proceed upon the singular theory that a person who has been found by examination to be qualified to hold office and has added to his qualifications by four years of continuous service, will in some way be less capable. It will be strange if the bill passes.

In a broad way the demands of the Hub upon the outlying country are illustrated by the plan for a water supply for the metropolitan district, which contemplates not only taking the water-sheds of the eastern part of the state, but also the Deerfield and Westfield rivers as the city and suburbs grow. Piles of Boston business have been introduced into the Legislature this year, and the city seems to dominate the time of members, as it wants to do with the water courses of the state.

The Senate voted on Monday on the amendment for biennial elections, and the division was on party lines exactly, Republicans for the resolve and Democrats against, the vote standing 27 to 3 and one pair. They were amended to take effect in 1898, instead of 1897, so that congressional and presidential elections should not come in to make an election every even year.

Though no report has been made on the tuberculosis question, which is exciting such great interest among the farmers, yet it is pretty certain that a report for paying full value will be made. Not a person before the committee has objected to such payment, but the understanding is that the value for beef or milk only is to be counted, not any fancy price for good looks or for well established pedigree. It is also pretty well established that the use of tuberculin as a "diagnostic agent," as the doctors call it, will not be prohibited, except by written permission of the owner of the herd, for in that case many would be liable to refuse permission and their cattle would remain as a possible source of infection. Most of the farmers are satisfied that tuberculin is the best test that can be applied, and that it is the only means of extirpating the disease. Physical examination is a broken reed to rely upon, compared with this scientific discovery.

It might seem as if payment of the full value of slaughtered animals for beef or milk was establishing a dangerous precedent for making the state protect every person from loss by causes beyond his control, but the reply of those who favor the bill is that farmers are already selling their cows because of the excitement over this disease. If compensation is refused, then they will sell out largely, getting what they can while the cows seem to be in good condition and taking no chances for the future. This will cut off to a great degree the source of milk supply in this state, and milk will be brought in from other states where the inspection is not as strict. Thus the danger to the public health would remain, and it is believed to be better public policy to pay the farmers full beef or milk value. They lose much anyway. Their business is badly broken into. They must be at expense to renew their herds from inspected, healthy animals. So it is best all around, the argument is, to be liberal with the farmers.

The rate of increase of wealth in Massachusetts, even right through the hard times, is perfectly amazing. Tax Commissioner Endicott prepares once in three years a statement of valuation as a basis of the state tax. In 1892 the taxable property in the state was $2,429,832,966. In 1895 it was $2,653,934,509. This is a gain of $224,101,543 in three years, or over $204,000 every day, on the average. How is that for the energy and intelligence of the Bay state? The polls have gained from 631,247 to 677,740, or a gain of .074 per cent in the three years, against a gain of .092 per cent in taxable property, thus showing that the wealth of the people is increasing faster than their numbers.

Gov. Greenhalge has sent to the House his first veto of the session. It is of the bill to permit shad and alewives to be caught in the Merrimac river. The bill is much like what he vetoed last year, and its friends thought they had avoided his objections, but he objects on the broad ground of the public policy to protect food fishes. He says that this bill would permit them to be taken in spawning time.

LANDON.

THERE appears to be something a little peculiar about this asking the state to pay full value for a cow killed because it is afflicted with tuberculosis. No farmer would buy an animal thus afflicted at any price, and he cannot sell one which has the disease if its presence is known. Such an animal is a menace to the rest of his herd and the health of his family, if he uses the milk from it. It has no market value whatever, except possibly what the hide and hoofs will bring, and that is little. It is a hardship on the farmer, of course, to have his cows afflicted with this disease, and be obliged to lose them, but the hardship will be all the greater if these are allowed to remain and the rest of his herd become worthless, and why animals so afflicted are worth to the state three or four times what can be obtained from any other source, is one of the questions yet to be satisfactorily explained.

COL. YOUNG of Springfield, with his four years of citizenship in Massachusetts, is getting about as much notoriety as any other member of the Legislature, especially the first-termers. The colonel is the exponent of the A. P. A., and the introducer of some peculiar bills, when they are analyzed. He is a good deal of a political hustler, owing his election more to aggressive work before the caucus in a stong Republican district than to a spontaneous uprising of the voters. His introduction into Massachusetts politics has so far been a good deal after the pyrotechnic order, and many a previous politician has gone up like a rocket only to come down like the stick.

As predicted by many, the A. P. A. is losing its hold in the places where it first started, and its members are leaving it in large numbers, entire councils having seceded in Illinois. In this connection the remark of Delegate Satolli concerning the order is interesting. He was at New Haven the other day and was asked how he regarded the A. P. A. His reply was, "Just as every sensible person does, as beneath my notice."

BETWEEN the additional appropriations already asked for the new normal schools and those likely to follow, and proposed changes in the state house, the state stands in a fair way to blow in considerable money before these buildings are in a condition to satisfy all concerned. The normal schools ought to have been given to understand that last year's donation was all they would get.

THE proposition to change the front of the old State House at Boston is plainly an attempt to make the tail wag the dog. It is a generally accepted theory that the caudal appendage does not possess the power to move the animal to which it is attached, and there is no reason of making an exception in this case.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Farmers' Institute.

Tuesday, this week, Grange Hall at Monson was filled with an appreciative audience, gathered to listen to Dr. J. B. Lindsey, associate director state agricultural experiment station at Amherst, on the subject of "Barnyard Manure and Commercial Fertilizers, what they are and how bes to turn them to account in growing farm crops." The speaker began by giving the component parts of plants, and used a pound of dried hay for an illustration, which he said is composed of water 15 parts, ash 5, cellulose 26, fat 2.3, protein 8.5, extract (or starch, sugar and gum) 43.2, which substances were exhibited by the speaker. Ninety-five per cent of the above substance is taken by the growing grass from the air, the balance of five per cent comes from the earth. It was a long time before it came known whence the ash in plants came from, but the problem was solved by Liebig in 1840, who found it came from the earth, and five per cent of ash is composed of potash 1.530 parts, phosphoric acid .29, lime .36, sand 3.5. Now to build up plant life we must supply nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid; where shall we get the material? The first and most natural source is barnyard manure, which is the undigested part of the food coming from our stable animals. This with the urine from the same animals forms the most natural and perfect fertilizer known. Barnyard manure contains in 100 parts—water 75 parts, nitrogen 5, potash 45, phosphoric acid .30, and balance an important material.

The speaker believed in barnyard manure. The farmer should make as much of it as possible and save it all, especially the liquid portion, which is often allowed to flow off and go to waste. As a rule it supplies what is taken off in the shape of crops, but it sometimes happens that the earth becomes exhausted in some material more than in others, and when this is found to be the case the material lacking should be supplied. This is only found by experiment, after the manner adopted at the experiment station at Amherst by applying different chemicals to adjacent plots and noting the results. This is what each farmer should do for himself, for no two farms are just alike in soil or condition. The speaker strongly advocated the use of commercial fertilizers, as supplementary to barnyard product, and in the case of potatoes believes them to be superior, and gave the results. Here commended the following formula for potatoes, roots and vegetables, for one ton:

459 lbs. ground fish or dried blood.
300 " sulphate potash, high grade.
950 " acid phosphates.

This contains 7½ per cent of potash. Apply 1200 lbs. to the acre. It will cost about $36 per ton.

Formula for oats and vetches sown for fodder:

1200 " acid phosphate.

Apply 600 lbs. to the acre, and sow four bushels oats and 40 lbs. vetch to acre.

Formula for peas, beans and clover.

1100 " acid phosphate.

Apply 700 lbs. to the acre.

Formula for corn or grain.

450 lbs. fish or blood.
450 " muriate potash.

Apply 1200 lbs. to the acre, two-thirds of it broadcast and balance in hill.

Formula for grass.—If you have it, lay down your field with six cords of manure to the acre, and seed in the fall; then in the early spring of the second year sow broadcast 150 lbs. nitrate soda to the acre. In the spring of the third and fourth years sow broadcast a mixture of 100 lbs. muriate potash and 150 lbs. of nitrate potash. If you have no manure when you lay down field for grass, then use this formula:

At one o'clock the audience adjourned to the Cushman House, where ample justice was done to the appetizing dinner spread for the occasion. In the afternoon session the farmers plied the speaker with questions which brought out many valuable hints concerning the application of fertilizers; also the fact that much of the soil in our state is deficient in potash. The ready answers given by Dr. Lindsey proved that he has been an apt scholar in experimental work. His formulas and suggestions are all practical, based on exact knowledge, and are worthy of trial. Allen March of Ashfield, for two winters employed at R. M. Reynolds's straw works, visited friends in town this week.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Methodist church held a business meeting, followed by a sociable, Monday evening.

The Current Events Club met with Mrs. Edward D. Cushman Wednesday, and will meet with Mrs. Rufus P. Cushman next Wednesday.

Mrs. Susan E. Thrall, president of the Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps, attended the department convention in Springfield this week.

The fourth quarterly conference, which was to have been held next Monday evening, has been postponed till March 4th on account of the illness of Presiding Elder Thorndike.

William Bugbee, who was hurt by being thrown from a sleigh several days ago, was seized yesterday with severe pains in his chest, and at last accounts was suffering a great deal.

The friends of Mrs. C. H. Haskell of Lynn, formerly of Monson, will be pleased to learn that she is slowly recovering from the effects of having a large and very painful tumor removed a short time since.

Mrs. Lucinda A. Bliss, 73, widow of Aaron Bliss, died Wednesday at her home in the Pease district. She leaves three children, Miss Bliss, Mrs. Erskine Lull, and Oliver Bliss. The burial was at Longmeadow today.

The service at St. Patrick's church at 7.30 Sunday evening will be the reception of new members to the Young Ladies' Sodality. Rev. W. E. Foley of Worcester, a former curate at St. Patrick's, will preach the sermon.

The entertainment which was to have been given Feb. 21st, under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, has been given up on account of the death of John Dunn, who was one of the prominent members of the order.

Assistant Civil Engineer Taylor is engaged in drawing complete plans of the pipe lines, hydrants, etc., connected with the Monson system of water works. These plans, which are in sections, are, when finished, to be in book form and used for reference.

On account of the severe cold of last week work was suspended at the collecting well for two or three days, but was resumed this week. The excavating is nearly finished. The water is more plentiful on this side than on the other, and is being pumped out at the rate of one million gallons a day.

Green street grammar school has organized a "Band of Mercy," consisting of 26 members, and the following officers are appointed: President, Marion Tucker; secretary, Annie Murphy; treasurer, Ralph Morris; executive board, George Shannon, Maria Leahy, Amelia Bacon, John Nelligan, Cecil Grant.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Methodist church will hold a social and entertainment in the church vestry next Thursday. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock, followed by an entertainment consisting of an old folks' concert and appropriate readings. A clam chowder supper will be served.

Prof. Treadway's dancing class will have a poverty ball the 25th of this month, instead of a sheet and pillow case as was first expected. There are to be two prizes given, one to the lady and one to the gentleman wearing the most unique costume. Tickets will be on sale next Wednesday at Chapin's drug store.

Monson lodge of Odd Fellows held a very pleasant sociable at the Cushman House Tuesday evening. The early part of the evening was spent in whist playing. After an excellent turkey supper, served in Landlord Cushman's best style, the dining room was cleared and the dancing began. The Monson Orchestra club furnished music, and Richard Ritter prompted.

The Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps sale, supper and entertainment, which was to have taken place last Friday, was postponed until to-day on account of the storm. The sale began at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Memorial Hall, and will continue through the evening. The supper will be served from 6 to 8 in Grand Army Hall. The entertainment will be at 8 o'clock.

There is a great deal of sickness in town, severe colds and the grippe claiming many victims. Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich, Mrs. M. Howe, Mrs. David Sullivan, Mrs. Bartholomew Donovan, Edward D. Cushman, Alonzo Plum, Mrs. James Murphy, Mrs. John Moriarty, R. Clifford Millar, Mrs. Frank D. Beach, Mrs. William J. Ricketts and William L. Ricketts, Rev. William H. Marble and Mrs. Richard S. Coleman are among the number.

About fifty of the Academy students will take a sleigh ride to Belchertown this evening, and have supper at the Belcher House. Carl M. Blair will be toastmaster, and the following will respond: "Our School," Prof. A. N. Burke; "The Faculty," C. D. Stephanoff; "The Sleigh ride," Gertrude B. Gage; "Societies," R. O. Watkins; "Athletics," C. M. Wing; "Class of '95, Opinions of a Junior," C. P. Dorr; "The Boys and Girls," Miss H. R. Pease.

A message was received yesterday announcing the death at Warren of Joseph Kennedy of this place. The body was brought here last evening. It seems that Mr. Kennedy died from internal injuries received Tuesday while lifting. He was 62 years of age, and a wool sorter, being employed in one of the mills in Warren. Mrs. Kennedy is in a critical condition, having been sick for five weeks. Mr. Kennedy leaves eight children.

Frank Blackford, a divinity student at Tufts' College, has been very sick at the house of his brother, Rev. Harry Blackford of this place. He had been ailing for about two weeks, when he consulted a Boston physician, who told that he had appendicitis, and urged immediate treatment. Mr. Blackford came to Monson a week ago last Monday. On Friday afternoon Dr. Seeley of Springfield performed an operation, Drs. Fuller, Ellis and others being in attendance. For several days his life hung in the balance, but it is thought now that he will recover.

Edward D. Cushman's residence narrowly escaped destruction by fire last Friday morning. A window in one of the sleeping apartments was left open while the family were at breakfast, an oil heater being left burning in the room. Ned, Mr. Cushman's sixteen-years-old son, was sent to close the window, and upon entering the room he found that the wind had blown the lace window drapery against the heater and set it on fire, and the flames had spread to the woodwork. With a coolness which many an older person might envy the boy shut the door and proceeded to put out the fire with water which was in the room, without alarming the household. The damage was about $80; insured.

The storm of last Thursday night and Friday is worthy of mention, as it was the most severe one Monson has experienced since the blizzard of '88. All day Friday the wind blew and the snow drifted. The thermometer embraced zero, and people who were not obliged to go out stayed indoors and fed their fires. The schools were not in session, and many of the stores closed early in the evening; some of the employes at the shops and mills did not return to their work at noon. On Saturday the town sent teams to break out the roads. There were numerous drifts from four to six feet in height, and in some places there were long stretches which were absolutely impassable.

The special meetings at the Congregational church have been well attended this week, and will continue next week, beginning Tuesday evening. There will be a woman's prayer meeting to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock.

A very enjoyable Valentine German was given by the members of Mrs. David's dancing class Tuesday evening. The German, led by Mr. Cushman and Miss Flynt, was preceded by dancing from eight till nine o'clock. The dance order was inscribed with sentiments appropriate to the week of St. Valentine. Owing to a prevalence of colds a very appropos favor for the first figure was a small imitation frog attached to a sample package of "Frog in the throat." The figures danced were the Mask, Conundrum, Prize, May Pole, Fan, Serpent, Base Ball and Mulligan Guards, with favors of heart-shaped boxes of candy, minature ball clubs, drums, fifes, etc. Miss Blanche Cushman, assisted by Masters Ralph Morris and William Flynt, presided over the favor table. Those participating were Mrs. David, Misses Flynt, Terrill, Gage, Cook, Cushman, Davis, Manchester, Gilligan, Morris, Converse, Hattie Flynt, and Stacy, and Messrs. Cushman, Severy, Cristy, Needham, Prouty, Parsons, Blair, Morris, Cook, Fitz, Peck, Stebbins and Foskit. Miss Terrill of New Hartford, Ct., and Miss Converse of Mt. Holyoke College were the guests from out of town.

GLENDALE.

Alfred Brewster lost a valuable horse recently from kidney trouble.

There was no preaching at the church Sunday. The roads were so full of drifts the pastor could not get here.

House Burned.

A vacant house belonging to W. A. Mowry was burned last Wednesday afternoon. The fire caught in the ell part, and is supposed to have been incendiary, as there was no one near the house when the fire was first seen. Mr. Mowry had gone to an auction, and on returning found his house on fire and past saving. The neighbors got out the furniture, and the outbuildings were saved. Loss slight; insured.

BELCHERTOWN.

D. P. Clapp arrived in town Tuesday from New York.

A. L. Blackmer is confined to the house by illness, and is unable to attend to his business.

Arthur Brown and wife of Three Rivers visited Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Foskit Tuesday and Wednesday.

J. R. Gould and wife, with their daughter and her family, returned Monday night from Hackensack, N. J., to spend the rest of the winter in Belchertown.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins took a sleigh ride to Springfield Tuesday evening to attend the theater.

E. F. Towne gave a chicken pie supper at the chapel Tuesday evening for the benefit of the choir. About 25 couples came from Holyoke, and all seemed to have a good time.

BRIMFIELD.

The Ladies' Whist club meets with Mrs. Dr. Chamberlain this evening, gentlemen being invited.

An interesting account of the recent loan exhibition held at Rev. W. K. Pierce's will be found on the first page.

Miss Fannie Warren of Worcester arrived in town Wednesday, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tarbell.

George Streeter had the misfortune to lose by lung fever the new horse which he recently purchased in Vermont.

Miss Lydia B. Hitchcock has returned home from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Frank Boardman, at Meriden, Ct.

Mrs. William Ducker and young daughter returned to New York city last Thursday, after a stay of four months in town.

Mrs. Henry F. Brown and daughter Julia arrived home Thursday evening, after a stay of three months with relatives at Port Chester, N. Y., and Springfield.

The second meeting of the Brimfield Hotel Association, to complete the organization of the company, will be held at the town hall Feb. 22 at 1 o'clock p. m. Members of the alumni of the Hitchcock high school, and all others interested, are particularly requested to be present.

WALES.

The Epworth League held a social at the M. E. parsonage Wednesday.

George W. Dimmick lost one of his horses this week by having its leg broken by a kick from a horse that got loose in the stable.

It seems early, but A. E. Freeman had a brood of a dozen chickens come off during the cold snap. With his earnest efforts and the old hen they have been saved so far by keeping them in the house cellar.

Mail Driver Pease deserves much credit in his heroism in braving the storms and giving us the mail every day. He had to dig his way through with his shovel in many places, and Road Breaker White in Brimfield was very prompt in assisting him through.

Isaiah Hiscock has received intelligence that his orange grove in Florida was ruined by the cold weather. He has had several boxes of nice oranges sent him every winter, which he has generously divided among his neighbors, who will much miss the luscious treat this winter.

The friends of Mrs. William Bayman made her a surprise visit this week and carried her many articles of necessity in housekeeping, which were much appreciated by her. She has been living alone since her husband suddenly disappeared last spring. He has not been heard from since, and she fears he has died in his wanderings, as his mind at times had not seemed quite right. He was about 70 years old and a hard working man until the last few years, when his health gave out.

WARREN.

Fred W. Kimball has been appointed justice of the peace.

Miss Jennie M. Ramsdell is visiting friends in Ashland this week.

The doctors are kept busy these days, as there are many sick with grippe and colds.

Rev. M. C. Mason, secretary of the Freedmen Aid Society, preached in the Methodist church last Sabbath.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Herbert D. Burroughs and Miss Julia S. Howe of East Brookfield next Wednesday.

The project of an electric road connecting Warren with West Brookfield and West Warren finds favor with many in this village.

Many of the farmers were unable to get in with their milk last Friday on account of the storm, and the schools were closed in the afternoon.

Daniel G. Hitchcock has taken Mrs. William H. Hallow's place as organist at the Universalist church for the remainder of the church year.

The body of Edward Lawrence of Needham was brought to Warren Saturday for burial at Brimfield, but owing to the condition of the roads it was found necessary to place it in the receiving tomb in the village. He was a brother of John W. Lawrence.

Washington Keyes, 80, of East Greenwich, R. I., died suddenly Saturday on the streets of Boston, where he was visiting with his wife. Mr. Keyes was born in Warren, where he lived till he was about 40 years old, when he went to Montague to live. He was a brother of Danforth Keyes.

The West Brookfield Farmers' Club met in the town hall Wednesday and discussed in the morning, the question "Can the raising and fattening of swine be made profitable, and what breeds and feeds are best for New England?" L. H. Chamberlain was speaker. In the afternoon, "Poultry for profit, what breeds and feeds are best?" was discussed, with N. L. Day for speaker. Essayist, Nellie J. L. Chamberlain.

WARE.

A case of scarlet fever is reported from a house on North street. This is the first case in town for nearly a year.

Twenty-four members of the Barre high school came to Ware for a sleigh ride Monday evening and had supper at the Mansion House.

The only sleighing accident reported in this vicinity is that of Mr. and Mrs. James McMahon, who were upset in a drift on Ragged Hill, Mrs. McMahen being thrown out, breaking her leg above the knee.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS MATTERS.

Trinity College School at Port Huron, Mich., suffered a loss of $6000 by fire Saturday night.

A lively fire in Greenfield last Friday night did $11,000 damage to a Main street building and contents.

A Georgia man, whose wife died a few months ago, recently married his wife's mother, and now is supposed to be his own father-in-law.

Thomas Jefferson Lummus, a schoolmate of the abolitionist leader, William Lloyd Garrison, died Sunday at Lynn, where he was born in 1804.

The annex of the state printing office at Harrisburg, Pa., was burned early Sunday morning. The loss is $100,000, nearly covered by insurance.

Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson of Malden, one of the earliest advocates of woman sufferge, wife of the late William S. Robinson ("Warrington"), celebrated her 70th birthday last Friday.

The trouble among the treers at the factory of the Ashland Shoe and Leather company has been adjusted and the works started. It is estimated the operatives have lost $4000 during the time they have been idle.

The French steamer, La Gascogne, arrived safely in New York Tuesday. A piston rod broke on the third day out from Havre, which disabled her, and that with the recent terrific ocean gales, was the cause of the delay.

While waiting for a train in a New Brunswick station a wealthy Maine farmer formed the acquaintance of a young woman whom he liked so well that he proposed marriage on the spot, was accepted and married, all before the train was due.

Rockville industries are reviving, nearly all the mills running on orders, and the receipts at the station of the New York and New England Railroad for the month of January there show an increase of over $3000 over the same month last year.

Leon Turner of Northampton was seriously wounded Sunday morning by the accidental discharge of a pistol which he was cleaning. He dropped the pistol on the floor, when it went off, the bullet entering his left leg near the groin. There is some fear of blood poisoning setting in.

John Hofner, who has run a small shoe store and cobbling shop at Greenfield, is an embezzler and a fugitive from justice. It appears that he has appropriated to his own use $1479 left in his trust for three minors, of whom he was the legal guardian. He used the money in enlarging his business.

M. H. Spaulding, employed in a mill at Shelton, Ct., got $2000 at a Birmingham bank Saturday and started for the mill on foot with the money in a bag in his hand. When he was within a short distance of the mill he was knocked down by a man who had followed him on foot, who took the money and jumping into a sleigh with two other men made his escape.

There is a man in Chicago who, if reports are true, holds the record of being the champion bigamist of the United States, or probably any other country. He is a riding school teacher, and the chief of police of that city says he has been married forty times. He is a fine looking fellow and is alleged to have married every woman who would have him, especially if she had money.

A movement is on foot for the erection of an Odd Fellows' temple at Springfield, in order that all the societies of the order in the city may meet under the same roof. The project is yet in a crude state, but it seems probable to some of the projectors that it will be decided to tear down the present Odd Fellows' building on Court Square and erect the new home on that or a new site.

EIGHT PAGES OF PHOTOGRAPHS.

The Handsome Gift of the Boston Sunday Journal to Its Readers.

The half-tone photographs printed every week in the Boston Sunday Journal are attracting the attention of everyone. The artists of Boston—eminent painters like Enneking, Vinton, Caliga and others—are permitting their greatest works to be photographed especially for the Sunday Journal Art Supplement. In the next issue, Feb. 17, twelve noted paintings will be reproduced. There will also be a full page group of the noted opera singers coming to Boston, handsome fashion photographs, pictures of New England women and other interesting photographs, all together making eight pages of superb photographs, besides the sixteen pages of regular Sunday features

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

The Reasons For Its Great Success.

The remarkable success of Sarony's Living Pictures, of which so much is being said by the press and public, is due, in our opinion, more to high character and its refined treatment of well-chosen subjects than to its novelty and originality, though these latter are not to be considered lightly by any means.

By some subtle touch the pictures are made to carry at once an expression of loveliness which appeals to our enthusiastic admiration, and of delicacy and refinement which compels our profound respect. Then they are of such variety that no cultivated taste can fail of finding in them something almost magically fascinating. They are interesting to all, young and old, and it is little wonder they have been and are still being so generously praised.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

Are You Car-Sick When Travelling?

Car-sickness is as trying to many people as seasickness. It comes from a derangement of the stomach. One of Ripans Tabules is an insurance against it, and a box of them should be in every traveler's outfit.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

PERSONAL MEMOIRS OF GENERAL PHILIP H. SHERIDAN—$1 FOR THE TWO VOLUMES.

Sold by subscription when first published for $7. Just why we are selling them so ridiculously low is of interest to you: The publishers seem to have issued several thousand volumes too many at the tremendous price they were charging, and in their perplexity applied to our New York organization, the Syndicate Trading Company, who took the entire surplus off their hands. We make the price low enough on our share to place them into the hands of everybody.

Won't be here till the end of week, probably — leave your orders.

Two octavo volumes of 500 pages each. Steel and wood portraits of Sheridan and his famous generals. Engravings of his famous War-horse, "Rienzi," Dinwiddie Court House, and Rebecca M. Wright, the Loyal girl of Winchester. Fac-similes of famous letters, twenty-six maps prepared specially for this book by the War Department. An exhaustive index.

Sheridan must rank as the ablest Calvary general of modern times, and his career is as romantic and interesting as it is wonderful. Of all our great generals, his life was the fullest of adventures, and his "Personal Memoirs" reads like a work of fiction.

Farms in village, owners of which had members working in mill, all of whom are now married and left the farm.

I have hen farms from 3 to 5 acres in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, good buildings for less than $700.

FROM PROMINENT PEOPLE.

A great many persons to our knowledge have voluntarily pronounced Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy successful in curing disease. Here are a number of statements that demonstrate the value of this medicine.

Commander James S. Dean, of Gen. Grant Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y., contracted an aggravated stomach trouble, which resulted in chronic dyspepsia. He suffered misery until he used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. "After using it a week," says Commander Dean, "I felt better, and in a short while was entirely cured, that terrible distress and food breaking up sour in my throat, had all gone."

Rev. I. W. Hill, Pastor Methodist Church Accord, N. Y.: "I can speak highly of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as a blood medicine. Ten years ago I had a cancer removed from my lip. I then began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and to this day no sign of it has reappeared.

The Sisters of Charity, St. Mary's Female Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "The satisfaction we realize from the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy surpass all expectation." The worst cases of eczema, salt rheum and scrofula yield to its curative power, nervousness, sleeplessness, liver and kidney complaints and all urinary troubles are cured by its use.

Shuffle-Shoon and Amber Locks.

Shuffle-Shoon and Amber Locks
Sit together building blocks;
Shuffle-Shoon is old and gray,
Amber Locks a little child,
But together at their play
Age and Youth are reconciled;
And with sympathetic glee
Build their castles fair to see.

"When I grow to be a man"
(So the wee one's prattle ran)
"I shall build a castle so—
With a gateway broad and grand;
Here a pretty vine shall grow,
There a soldier guard shall stand;
And the tower shall be so high
Folks will wonder by-and-by!"

Shuffle-Shoon quoth: "Yes, I know;
Thus I builded long ago!
Here a gate and there a wall,
Here a window, there a door;
Here a steeple wondrous tall
Riseth ever more and more!
And the years have levelled low
What I builded long ago!"

So they gossip at their play,
Heedless of the fleeting day;
One speaks of the long ago,
Where his dead hopes buried lie;
One with chubby cheeks aglow
Prattleth of the By-and By;
Side by side they build their blocks—
Shuffle-Shoon and Amber Locks.

A RELIGIOUS STUDY OF A BAPTIST TOWN.

The familiar differences of theology and practice which elsewhere divide Christians become here (Westerly, R. I.,) however, minor and unimportant in the presence of a controversy which rends the religious, social, and commercial life of Westerly to its foundation. The one great fact concerning the town, the shadow upon its existence, the block in the path of its progress, the strange, distressing and bewildering occurrence which weekly chills its religious enthusiasm, is the observance of different holy-days by two parties who, denying each other by their most apparent feature, keep up the ghastly farce of calling each other "brother." Three of the Baptist churches keep Saturday and disregard Sunday.

The membership of these societies constitutes, if not now numerically half the community, practically more than half of it. It includes the proprietors of large machine shops, and many shopkeepers and employers of labor. Until lately, it was impossible on Saturday to make a purchase at a single retail shop in town; the supplies for the day's table had to be bought on Friday. On Saturday, Sunday-keeping Christians are embarrassed in their work by the cessation of labor on the part of half the population, as on Sunday, Sabbath-keepers are by that of the other half. No device could more completely disorganize society or disturb business. The consciences of Sabbath-observers are offended on every Saturday by the behavior of their neighbors, while on Sunday, Lord's-Day Christians are awakened by the scream of factory whistles, go to church to the unedifying music of lawn-mowers, pray and sing amid the shouts of boys at play, and listen for the benediction over the rumble of carts. It is a singular sensation for New England Christians, sons of the Puritans, to reflect that while they are at worship, drills are resounding in the quarries, and that the machinery of the factories is in operation.—Rev. William Bayard Hale, in the February Forum.

HISTORY AS SHE LEARNED.

The University correspondent having offered a prize for the best collection of "howlers," it is able this week to print a wonderful batch. Here are a few from the history section.

"The Constitutions of Claredon were a set of regulations by which Henry 11 increased the standing army. Their modern representative is the Claredon Press.

"Cardinal Wolsey....had an attack of dynastery, and died in Westminster Abbey."

"The chief object of Magan Charta was to secure prompt injustice for all."

"The Armada was a great ship that sailed round the world once a year."

Sir Walter Raleigh "was born at Ipswich when he was fifteen and soon became an able seaman and soldier on land and sea. One day Raleigh was smoking his footboy when he threw the bear over him. He was so fond of enjoying the fragments of the weed."

New lights on the old reformers are always interesting. Here we find John Wicliffe in two totally unfamiliar positions:

"John Wicliffe was a highwayman, in Hampshire, and conspired against the royal family, who sent out troops against him, but whenever they sent the troops he was always somewhere else."

"Mary Queen of Scots was sitting in her private room with Rizzo having supper. Darnley rushed in with a sword and took hold of Rizzo and so did Mary, but he got killed. Chaucer rushed in and threw him out and Wicliffe was having supper with them but he said nothing."

How the children acquired the idea of Wicliffe's subtlety is a mystery.

From the miscellaneous selections we cannot resist taking four luminous specimens:

"What is a mortgagee?—The wife of a mortgagor."

"Bismarck was a famous musition in England, and used to sing at all the conserts."

"One of the chief works of Carlyle was Ratus Tatus."

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner, with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler County, W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds."

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and that she has also used it for lame back with great success.

ANTI-TOXINE, THE NEW METHOD OF TREATING DIPHTHERIA.

Throughout the medical world great interest is now being manifested in the new, and what appears to be wonderful, remedy for the cure of diphtheria. In order to give the readers of your paper some idea of its nature, method of preparation, and future possibilities in the cure of that dreaded scourge, of which nearly every community has had a visitation, this short paper is written.

Diphtheria anti-toxine was recently discovered by a German scientist, Dr. Behring, but its practical value in the cure of diphtheria was demonstrated through the experiments of Dr. Roux of Paris. For several months anti-toxine serum has been used in the treatment of diphtheria with great success, both in the above-named city, and in Berlin. Until the practical demonstration of Dr. Roux of the efficacy of diphtheria anti-toxine serum, the medical profession stood almost powerless to check the ravages of the disease, which, when statistics are consulted, are fearful to contemplate. As a matter of fact, the proportion of fatal cases ranges between fifty and sixty per cent. The experiments in Paris seem to indicate that with the use of the new remedy it has been reduced to about eleven per cent.

Briefly explained, the diphtheria anti-toxine serum is produced as follows: The diphtheria bacillus, or germ which causes the disease, is obtained from the human throat and highly cultivated in suitable media, which consist of beef-broth, or a similar substance. This is put in a glass tube and maintained in an incubator at a uniform temperature, which is about that of the human throat. These germs multiply rapidly, and soon from the excrement is generated a poison or ptomaine, which is known as toxine. It is chiefly the action of this poison on the system which produces the deadly work of diphtheria on the human subject. The contents of the tubes is now thoroughly sterilized in order to exclude all germs, and the toxine which remains, is inoculated into the blood of horses, which animals are not predisposed to diphtheretic affections. In the blood of the inoculated animals is developed a resisting, hostile and protective element, which when inoculated into the blood of animals suffering with diphtheria, or subject to the disease, confers an immunity or protection against the toxine developed in the system, and in nearly all cases, unless treatment is delayed too long, recovery follows. It is the serum of the blood of a horse, inoculated as above described, which constitutes the diphtheria anti-toxine serum.

The New York College of Veterinary Surgeons presents a lively appearance these days, for it is here that the physicians connected with the bacteriological division of the city health department have stabled their horses and are conducting their experiments of inoculating with the highly cultivated toxine of diphtheria. This is the first place in America where the work of producing anti-toxine has been undertaken. About forty horses have been inoculated, and the serum from one was recently tried on a Guinea pig which had diphtheria, and found to have acquired sufficient anti-toxine properties to cure the disease. This horse had been inoculated for about three months. There is a great call from the city hospitals for anti-toxine, and to meet this emergency this horse was destroyed on January 6th and his blood carefully collected, great care being taken to prevent its contamination by germs or any foreign substances during the process. This is the first diphtheria anti-toxine serum ever produced in America. The money value of the blood serum of this horse is very great, several thousand dollars probably, for at the present stage of its manufacture it is a very costly substance to produce, owing to the expert services and length of time required.

The toxine is injected into the subcutamous tissues with an hypodermic syringe, commencing with doses of about two cubic centimeters, or about half a teaspoonful, injected twice a week. The amount has been rapidly increased, until now some of the animals are receiving from 100 to 120 cubic centimeters per week. It requires, according to the best authorities, a treatment of about three months before the horse acquires sufficient immunity and the serum contains enough anti-toxine to be of much use. Frequently a longer time is required, and it is only possible to obtain the best grades of curative serum where the inoculations have continued from four to six months. The horses used for inoculation are young, healthy animals, each one being tested for glanders and other contagious diseases before the work is commenced. The horse when first inoculated suffers a mild attack of the disease. During this time each symptom is carefully watched and treated by the students of the senior class of this institution. The serum from the blood of the inoculated horses is carefully tested from time to time on animals suffering with diphtheria, to ascertain if it has acquired sufficient anti-toxine properties. Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, president of the New York College of Veterinary Surgeons, and Director of the Bacteriological Laboratory of the health department of New York city, spent two months in Europe last summer studying and investigating the manufacture of anti-toxine, and it is under his direction that its manufacture is now being carried on in this city.

It is very evident that it cannot be imported to any extent, because there is not a sufficient amount being made in Germany and France to supply home needs. The high grade antitoxine that is brought here is very expensive. It costs $12 per vial, and each vial only contains one dose.

That anti-toxine is a most important and effective cure I am fully convinced, but the utmost precautions must be taken against fraudulent preparations and unskillful administration, to prevent its being discredited at the outset. Boston and other large cities are taking measures to produce the serum in sufficient quantities for local demands, but it will probably be a considerable time before the public will get the benefit of the great remedy. We predict that the time is not far distant when the distribution of anti-toxine will be in the same manner as vaccine in time of smallpox scare. Yours,

P. J. MAHONEY.

These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of constipation and sick headache. For malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranteed to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c. per box Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

A NEW ARITHMETIC.—The lady who came into the bookstore was one of the very primmest and most particular.

"Have you any arithmetics?" she inquired stiffly.

"Yes, madam," replied the polite clerk.

"What kind?"

"Any kind you wish, madam. We keep a complete stock."

"Well, I want an expurgated edition."

"I beg your pardon?" gasped the clerk.

"I want an expurgated edition. I desire it for my daughter who is just beginning that branch of study."

"I don't think I quite understand you, madam," stammered the poor clerk.

"Don't you know what an expurgated edition of a book is?" she asked.

"Certainly, madam, but not of an arithmetic."

"You must be very stupid," she said, starting to go out, "if you don't know that it means one from which the vulgar fractions have been eliminated."

Mrs. Benedict—"Now, what would you do, Mr. De Batch, if you had a baby that cried for the moon?" De Batch grimly—"I'd do the next best thing for him; I'd make him see stars."—Kate Field's Washington.

Starvation

is not always due to lack of food. You can eat plenty and yet not be strong. Food does no good unless it is digested and assimilated. In cases of Consumption and wasting diseases the greatest difficulty is to feed the patient.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A FATAL WAVE OF THE GRIP.

Health Boards Announce That The Epidemic Has Returned in Very Deadly Form.

It is a misfortune little short of a public calamity that, just now when so large a percentage of the people are suffering with bronchial coughs and colds, the health boards should announce the reappearance of the king of epidemic terrors—the Grip.

On Wednesday of last week the grave intelligence was wired from New York that Dr. Benedict, Chief of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases of that city, as well as other leading physicians of the Board of Health, admits that an epidemic of grip is raging in that city, and that it has appeared in a very deadly form, and disastrous results are expected to follow before spring.

On Thursday intelligence was received from Providence that the plague had appeared in that city in deadly form, and already many cases are known to exist in Boston.

The deadliness, the appalling fatality of the grip lies not in its own immediate results, but in the long list of fatal ills which follow in its wake as a direct result of the virulent and weakening poisons which it leaves in the system.

Reader, look over the list of your acquaintances for the past five years and see how many cases of pneumonia you can trace directly to the grip. How many cases of consumption often galloping to death in a few weeks? How many cases of bronchitis? How many cases of deafness or blindness? How many fatal heart, liver, stomach or kidney troubles?

Fortify the system against the attacks of the enemy.

Blood Wine is your only safeguard. Thousands of people can save themselves from this terrible disease if they will keep their blood pure and tone up their system with this great remedy.

Always keep a bottle with you and take a dose three or four times a day.

Be warned in time. Get a bottle at once. It only costs 50 cents, and see that it is made by The Louis Dandelin Co., Worcester, Mass.

Songs of the Heart.

I love the sweet songs that never can die,
That gladden the heart and moisten the eye,
Echoes of song from the morning of life,
A balm to the heart when weary of strife.

Oh, sing me a song of the babbling brook,
The trees overhanging its shady nook,
Where the pebbles the purling waters part,
Murmuring music so sweet to the heart.

Sing me a song of the house on the hill,
The creaking water wheel down by the mill,
The old broken boat we rocked in our play
And laughed as the eddies drifted away.

Sing me a song of the bucket and well,
Daisies and buttercups down in the dell,
Of the droning bee and its drowsy tune
In the listless lull of the summer noon.

Sing me a song of a mother so kind;
Bring the loved features back fresh to my mind;
Over the mists of the years that have flown
Sounds that sweet voice in its tenderest tone.

Memories humble and lowly the theme,
Only the glimpse of a long ago dream,
Tenderly tuned by simplicity's art—
These are the poems and songs of the heart.
Jesse P. Tompkins.

THE FIRKIN.

Chicot, the innkeeper of Egreville, halted with his team before the house of old Mother Magloire. He carried 40 years on his shoulders, and was red, round and fat—a genuine rogue.

He fastened his nag at the garden post and entered. Long ago Chicot had cast his eyes upon the woman's little farm, which bordered directly on his large estate. Twenty times at least he had tried to get possession of it, but the old woman resisted him obstinately.

"Here I was born and here I will die!" she was in the habit of saying.

He found her before the door peeling potatoes. Seventy years had made her withered, haggard and humpbacked, yet she was active as a young girl. Chicot tapped her in a friendly manner on the back, and sat down at her side on a foot-stool.

"Well, mother, how are things getting on? Always prospering?"

"Just so—just so—and with you, Monsieur Prosper?"

"Well, well, one has one's troubles! Still things go fairly well!"

"The better for you!" She said nothing further.

Chicot looked at her work. Her crooked rheumatic fingers, as hard as lobster-claws, picked the potatoes out of the basket. Quickly she turned them and removed the parings in long strips, with an old kitchen knife, which she held in the other hand. If a potato had turned a nice yellow, it was thrown into a vessel full of water. Three hardy-looking chickens came, one after another, to her apron, picked up the parings and hastily withdrew, with the prey in their beaks.

Chicot seemed confused, timid, anxious. He wished to say something and did not know how.

At last he took courage.

"Tell me, Mother Magloire?"

"What can I do for you?"

"Don't you wish to sell your farm?"

"God help me! I don't think of it any longer. I have said so, and that settles it!"

"Well, I have found an expedient, which will help us both."

"What is it?"

"Listen. You will sell me the farm and keep it, after all. Do you understand? Listen to my proposal."

The old woman stopped her work and fastened her eyes, which still looked very lively under their wrinkled eyelids, on the innkeeper. He continued:

"I will be more explicit. I will give you 150 francs a month. Now listen. Every month I will bring thirty five-franc pieces in my carriage, and yet everything shall remain in the old way—absolutely in the old way. You live in your little house, you owe me nothing whatever, you only take my money. Do you understand?"

He gazed into her face with a merry expression.

Old Magloire looked doubtful, as if she suspected a snare. Then she asked:

"As far as this I have considered. But where do you come in? For, with all that, you haven't yet got my farm?"

He answered: "Don't bother about that. You remain here as long as God grants you life. You are on your property. Only you sign a paper at the notary's that I am to be your heir, as you have no children, except a son-in-law for whom you do not care. Are you satisfied? You keep your farm while you live, and I pay you for it. It is a fine bargain for you!"

Old Magloire seemed surprised, disquieted, but, after all, not opposed to the scheme. She answered: "I don't say no. I will think it over. Come again next week, and you shall have your answer."

And Chicot drove away, as satisfied as a king who has conquered a large domain.

Mother Magloire remained meditating. She did not sleep the following night. For four days she continued irresolute and restless. She had a presentiment that something was wrong in the matter, and yet the thought of thirty five-franc pieces every month, the thought of the beautiful, jingling money, which would roll into her apron as if fallen from heaven, devoured her.

At last she went to the notary, and related the matter to him. He advised her to accept Chicot's offer, but to ask fifty, instead of of thirty five-franc pieces, as her property was worth 50,000 francs, at least.

"If you should live fifteen years," said the notary, "he would pay you, in this way, only 45,000 francs."

Old Magloire trembled in the hope of receiving fifty five-franc pieces every month, but she did not quite trust Chicot. She was afraid of tricks and hidden snares. So she remained until the evening, asking innumerable questions and could not come to a decision. At last she bade the notary to draw up the contract. Then she returned home as if intoxicated.

When Chicot called again for an answer, he had to entreat her for a long time. She explained that he did not care to do the thing. Nevertheless, all the time she entertained a secret fear that he would not give her the fifty five-franc pieces. At last, as he did not cease importuning her, she burst out with her new demand.

His face took on a puzzled expression and he declined. To regain his favor, she mentioned the probable number of years she still had to live.

"I have only five or six more, before me. I am already in my seventy-third year and not so very strong. Lately, I have thought it would soon be over with me." Yet Chicot was not so easily caught.

"Don't mention it old woman, you canny old fox. You are as solid as our church steeple. You will live to be at least a hundred years old, and will bury me, believe me!"

They spent the whole day in haggling, but as old Magloire was not willing to give in, the inkeeper at last consented to pay the fifty five-franc pieces monthly.

They signed the contract next morning. And Mother Magloire asked for ten five-franc pieces as first deposit.

Three years passed. Mother Magloire did not seem a day older than when she made her contract with Chicot, and he was in despair. It seemed to him as if he had paid the revenue for half a century already—as if he was deceived, ruined. From time to time he made a visit to the farm, as one walks over the fields in July and looks to see whether the corn is ripe for the sickle. She received him with malicious glances, as if she congratulated herself on the clever trick she had played him, and he quickly entered his carriage again, murmuring: "Will you never die, old skeleton!"

He was helpless. He felt, whenever he caught sight of her, as though he would like to smother her. He hated her with a wild, malicious anger.

He searched for a remedy. One day he came, and rubbed his hands pleasantly, as he did on the day when he had made her the proposition which she accepted. After talking a few minutes about indifferent matters, he said: "By the by, mother, why do you never stop in and dine with me when you come to Egreville? People talk about it. They say our friendship has come to an end. And that makes me feel uncomfortable. Dining with me you save money—and I will be glad to call you my guest. Come as often as you like, without further ceremony. It will be a pleasure to me."

Mother Magloire did not need much persuasion. Two days after the visit, driving with her farmhand in her little cart to market, she had her horse put into friend Chicot's comfortable stable, and asked for the promised dinner.

The host, beaming with joy, treated her like a lady, and served her with chicken, sausages, mutton and cabbage. Yet she did not eat much. Temperate since childhood, she had lived most of her life on soup and bread and butter. Chicot urged her in a somewhat embarrassed manner. Nor did she drink anything—she refused the coffee.

"But a little cordial you won't refuse?" he asked.

"That I'll take—that I can't refuse." And he called through the bar room as loud as he could:

"Rosalie, bring the best, the very best!" The servant girl appeared with a large bottle, ornamented with a paper vineleaf. He filled two glasses. "Take it, mother, it's fine!"

The good old woman sipped it slowly, to lengthen the enjoyment. On emptying her glass, she licked up the last drops and remarked: "Yes, yes, I must say that's very good."

At the same moment Chicot refilled her glass. She wished to decline, but it was too late. Slowly she sipped it, as she had sipped the first.

When he was going to fill it for her the third time, she refused. But he insisted. "It's as harmless as milk," he said. "I drink ten, twenty of such glasses without any difficulty. It goes down like sugar, and does not hurt body or soul. One feels how it melts on the tongue. Nothing is better for your health!"

Feeling a strong inclination for it, she consented, but only drank half the glass, and Chicot in a moment of extreme generosity, exclaimed: "Say, if you really like it so well, I will give you a firkin of this stuff, to show you that I am still a good friend of yours."

She did not refuse the offer, and went home a little elated.

The next morning the innkeeper called at Mother Magloire's, and drew a firkin, bound with iron hoops, out of the carriage. He asked her to taste its contents, and it was the same—the very best.

After they had each finished three glasses Chicot took leave.

"By the way, when you are through with this firkin, ask for another. Don't be bashful. I am not stingy! The sooner it is drunk, the better." Then he drove away.

In four days he called again. The old woman sat before the door, cutting bread in the soup. He came up to her and shook hands, bringing his face in close proximity to hers, in order to smell her breath. Yes, there was a faint odor of alcohol, and his face beamed with pleasure.

"Well, how would a drink suit you?" Then they clinked their glasses together, twice, three times.

Soon it was rumored in the village that Mother Magloire was tippling—on the sly.

Later on she was found lying prostrate, sometimes in the kitchen, sometimes in the yard, at other times in the streets. She was carried home as stiff and rigid as a corpse.

Chicot did not come to see her any more. And when people told him about the old peasant woman, he murmured, making a sad face: "'Tis bad at her age to fall into such a habit. When one is as old as she, there's no remedy for it. I tell you it will play her a bad trick yet!"

And it did play her a bad trick. She died during the following winter, near Christmas. She was found lying drunk in the snow.

Monsieur Chicot took possession of her property. He used to remark: "Poor old Mother Magloire! If she had not become a drunkard, she could have lived ten years more at least!"—Guy De Maupassant.

HINTS FOR DYSPEPTICS.—Some trusting soul has written to the secretary of the Anti-Sedentary Club to know how to cure dyspepsia. His reply may do suffering thousands good:

"Never eat a meal when you are tired. Either sit down or lie down ten or fifteen minutes to rest before eating, if you have been walking or doing anything of an exciting nature. Half of the cases of dyspepsia are due to nervous debility.

Eggs, if eaten three times a day for any length of time, will produce biliousness and often dyspepsia.

Never go to bed with cold feet.

Gentle exercise before retiring is conducive to sweet slumber and a healthy digestion Exercise a little before breakfast and never eat oat meal with cold cream.

Avoid stimulants, for they only give a false appetite and no relief.

Exercise moderately every day in the open air and healthy digestion will drive away dyspepsia. These are the hygeinic rules of the club."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Curran's ruling passion was his joke, and it was strong, if not in death, at least in his last illness. One morning his physician observed that he seemed to "cough with more difficulty."

"That is rather surprising," answered Curran, "for I have been practising all night."

While thus lying ill, Curran was visited by a friend, Father O'Leary, who also loved his joke.

"I wish, O'Leary," said Curran to him abruptly, "that you had the keys to heaven."

"Why, Curran?"

"Because you could let me in," said the facetious counsellor.

"It would be much better for you, Curran," said the good-humored priest, "that I had the keys to the other place, because I could then let you out."

PALMER NEWS.

More and Better Water.

The voters of the fire district will probably be called upon at the spring meeting to decide an important question. There has been a feeling for some time among many that the fire district should own its water system, but the question of expense has heretofore been unsurmountable. An offer, it is said, will be made the district this spring which will make it possible to increase and improve the water supply in the depot village at a small cost. On the farm recently purchased by Rufus Flynt and A. T. Wing is a brook known as the Wellman brook, which was never known to run dry. The water is said to be pure, and during the dryest time last summer a quantity of water was flowing in the brook equal to over 60 gallons a day for each individual in the fire district, while at the present time the supply exceeds 200 gallons for each person. Messrs. Flynt and Wing are willing to sell their property to the town for a nominal price, reserving the right to use the brook for trout breeding purposes. There is a good place for a large reservoir, and it is said the expense of bringing water from this source to the mains of the Palmer Water Company would not be great. To carry out this plan it would be necessary to buy or duplicate the system now owned by the Palmer Water Company. It is estimated however, that the system would pay well, as a large number of people are supplied from these pipes. The Wellman brook is fed entirely by springs, and the entire course of the brook is over a gravelly bed. It is thought that by this move the tax payers would not only not be called upon for any increased payment, but that they would save the $1000 which is now annually paid for water.

Next Wednesday will be Ash Wednesday.

The concert given by the Amherst musical association, under the auspices of the Palmer high school in the Congregational church Tuesday evening, was well attended. Nearly every seat in the house was sold, and chairs were carried in to accommodate late comers.

The will of James C. Burnham of Palmer, dated October 21, 1893, has been filed for probate, and gives all his property to Frank Henry Johnson of Monson, who is named as executor; as a token of the appreciation of his faithful services while in the home of the late Mr. Burnham.

The Sunday morning subject at the Congregational church next Sunday will be "Cold Facts and Hot Truths." The sermon-lecture in the evening will have for its subject "Wanted, a Way Out of a Hard Place." This will be a special eventide service; J. J. Eberhardt of Springfield, cornetist, will be present, and a special musical programme is expected.

The Congregational church is taking steps toward a vigorous evangelistic movement in the town. It is expected that Rev. A. M. Hills of Ohio, a strong preacher and successful exangelist, will assist in the services. About two months of preparatory work will be done before the coming of Mr. Hills. More definite arrangements will be made at the business meeting next Thursday evening.

Two sleigh ride parties, one to Belchertown and the other to Wilbraham, left the Converse House about 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. Both were well attended, and all expressed a thorough enjoyment of the trip the next day. One young man who took a young lady in a single rig, tipped over and damaged the girl somewhat, but not seriously.

A car loaded with oats was being unloaded at Holbrook's grain store Saturday afternoon when it started on a run down the siding. It is supposed that the dog holding the brake slipped, letting off the brake, and when the grain had been removed from one end the car was so lightened that it commenced to move. A man who was inside the car could do nothing, so jumped out. The car struck a timber placed across the track just above Eager's block, jumped the track and crashed in the rear of Eager's building. The building was badly shaken and the wood work where the car struck was splintered, but no serious damage was done.

The overseers of the poor have finished their inventory of the property at the town farm, and find that they have now property as follows: Live stock, $756; farm tools, $384.25; hay and grain, $34.20; wood and lumber $280; provisions and supplies, $164.80; beds and bedding, $219.80; tinware, glassware and crockery, $111; furniture, $350.65; total $2300.-70, an increase of $91.40 over last year. The whole number of inmates at the farm during the year has been 28, the largest number at any one time 21; the average has been 17¾, and there are 19 now there. The average cost per week for their support has been $1.38.

A sad bereavement has fallen upon the family of L. E. Chandler, associate editor of the JOURNAL, this week, in the death of his little son, Ray Fiske Chandler, after a two-weeks' patient struggle with bronchial pneumonia. He was a bright, active and cheery lad, winsome and intelligent beyond his years, and had won a warm place in very many hearts in the community. His illness was not considered dangerous for some days, but after the first week it became critical, and he failed steadily, passing away quietly at 4.45 Monday afternoon, his last spoken words, a short time before his death, being a request for another kiss from his broken-hearted mamma. The funeral was held from the residence of his parents Wednesday afternoon, Rev. F. E. Jenkins officiating. Appropriate music was rendered by Mrs. Rufus Flynt and Miss Packard, and the large attendance and the liberal and beautiful floral offerings gave touching evidence of the wide circle of sympathizing friends who mourned with the family. The burial was private, the little body being laid away in the tomb by loving hands as the sun sank to his rest behind the western hills.

Hon. John G. Woolley, the distinguished lawyer, statesman and orator, will lecture in the Congregational church next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Palmer No-License League. Mr. Woolley is well known in the West as a peerless orator, great statesman, and a genuine patriot; a temperance worker brave in heart and lofty in purpose. Much has been written of his life, his success, his fall through drink, his conversion, and his devotion to the cause of temperance. He is of English and Scotch-Irish descent, and was born in Collinsville, Ohio. He was a fine scholar, gaining and holding the position of head master in the public schools at the age of 17. He graduated from Ohio Wesleyan College in 1871, and in 1873 was admitted to the bar in the supreme court of Illinois, when the chief justice pronounced his examination the most brilliant of all he had known. After four years practice he removed to Minneapolis, entered supreme court practice and became state's attorney and the leading lawyer in all criminal cases. He was called to the supreme court of the United States in 1885. Up to the time he had become state's attorney he had been engaged in civil practice, and had conducted to a successful issue the most important litigation in the northwest, in which he attacked a transfer of property on the ground of fraud, and by one argument recovered $2,000,000 for his clients. He is said to have received the highest fees of any lawyer in Minnesota, having once been paid $500 in gold for a speech of five minutes in a successful plea for mercy for a convicted criminal. In 1888 Mr. Woolley was offered by Gen. Fiske and his associates a large salary to take up the practice of his profession in New York city, but declined in order to become a temperance worker without any assured salary, and has since that time declined bona fide offers of $25,000 a year to re-enter legal practice. From the first Mr. Woolley has declined to be under anybody's management, or to be held by any society or political party. He maintains that the hope of the country is the church, and believes it will be equal to the situation, and compel and deserve the admiration of the world. He is of retiring disposition, but when he speaks does so with intensity, his whole soul in every word, and possessing the power of fastening his words in the memory of his hearers.

Mr. Prue of Holyoke and Arthur Grise are negotiating for an exchange of their property, located on Main street.

Mrs. Talbert's mother, Mrs. Turner, who has been ill at the former's home for several months past, died last Monday and was taken to Vermont for interment Wednesday.

At the meeting of the W. C. T. U. which was held with Mrs. Twogood this afternoon it was decided to hold the postponed temperance meeting next Friday evening at the Baptist church, with Rev. Mr. Jenkins of Palmer as speaker.

Next Sunday temperance sermons will be preached in both churches, and the clergymen are working hard this week in order to have some interesting facts to present regarding the temperance question, for they hope to have large congregations on the coming Sabbath.

Miss Matilda Remie had a narrow escape from being seriously burned one evening last week, in consequence of a lamp exploding, but she retained her presence of mind sufficiently to carry the dangerous article out of the room and quench the threatning blaze before any damage was done.

A great many people are planning to hear that celebrated temperance lecturer, John J. Woolley, at Palmer next Tuesday evening. Many in this place have already heard his eloquence in advocating the temperance cause, and these advise all who possibly can too treat themselves by listening to this gentleman's oratory.

On Wednesday while William Franklin, who is employed on the N. L. N. road as a brakeman, was switching cars at Belchertown, a falling plank injured his foot, but he was not hindered from making the trip to Brattleboro. After arriving there he met with worse misfortune however, as his hand was so badly injured while coupling cars that it is thought he will lose the thumb and some of the fingers.

Yesterday was an interesting day in the public school, as both Washington's birthday and parents day were observed by appropriate exercises. A large number of the parents of the children visited the rooms, and were highly pleased with the creditable manner in which the children acquitted themselves, and delighted with the arrangements made by the teachers and committee for the accommodation and enjoyment of every visitor.

Last Sunday evening, while Rev. J. Marchand, in company with another clergyman, was driving home after visiting relatives in Ware, the sleigh overturned and both gentlemen were thrown out. The horse ran about two miles before being captured, but was finally caught by a young man near Forest Lake, and was taken care of during the night. The clergymen were obliged to walk back about a mile to Ware and procure a livery team to carry them home.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 20, 1895.

A move has been made on the part of the farmers to provide a way of determining the value of cattle killed by order of the cattle commissioners for tuberculosis, and it does not seem to be in line with the statements of members of the committee which have heard the case that only the value of the animals for beef or milk shall be counted. The bill says that the value shall be the value which is returned to the owner, according to the law for returns of personal property, or the assessed value. In the case of ordinary stock, of course, this value would not be more than the market value, but in case of fancy stock, the amount to be paid would be much more than that for milk or beef.

The Senate has finally agreed to move into the extension prepared for them. It is at the north end, under the state library, and is the room ultimately to be used for the railroad commission. The place seems close and small in comparison with the fine old chamber, but, as President Butler says, if they do not mind the show and attend strictly to business, it would be just as well for the state as if they were more imposing. By the way, look out to see Mr. Butler rise higher in politics.

A movement for bronze statues to Gen. Butler and to Wendell Phillips to be erected on the state house grounds was considered by the committee on state house, and the chief speakers for the proposed appropriation of $30,000 were Colonels Noah A. Plympton and Albion C. Drinkwater, who will be easily remembered by persons with memories 12 years old as the general chief political managers in 1882 and 1883. They told wonderful tales of the love and honor in which Butler is held, and of the fitness that he should be honored with a statue.

Now, of all persons who ever lived in Massachusetts, probably Benjamen F. Butler was the least worthy to be honored in bronze, and I am fully aware of the sweeping nature of the assertion. If the plan does not raise a storm of indignant protest all over the state, I shall be much mistaken. It may not be seemly to bring on a fight over the character of a man so recently dead as Butler, but if one is stirred up, his foolish and ignorant friends and admirers will have only themselves to blame. Some things cannot be tolerated in common decency, and one is a statue to B. F. Butler.

The outward aspect at the state house has changed greatly this week. Last Saturday the movable furniture of the Senate, which could be used in their temporary quarters in the extension, were carried over and preliminaries were taken for tearing down the rear, or Bryant, half of the state house. Since then wild confusion has reigned and the outward look of things is such as to make it seem as if the structure were in a dilapidated condition, and that it is so far beneath the new part in being worthy of the dignity and wealth of the state that it ought to be torn down. These facts are such as appeal to the average citizen, and they surely will have an effect upon the Legislature. Last year the state house commissioners were positively in favor of tearing down the old part entirely and of reconstructing it on the old lines, but larger. Their plan was defeated by a large majority of the Legislature, and they have made no sign this year of any purpose to carry out their first plan. But what is being done may be the shrewdest way to manage their case. They are waiting for public sentiment to come up to their point, or perhaps it would be better to say, till it does come up to it, and there is no doubt they would see with equanimity a strong movement in their direction, though they are doing nothing to forward it by their personal efforts, as far as can be seen.

Confusion reigns in both wings of the capitol. The senate chamber is dismantled. The furniture in the president's and clerk's rooms has been removed. The carpets are gone; the floors are ripped up. The lockers are out. Where the president and clerk used to enter is bricked up. Where the public was wont to find entrance as far as the Senate rail is now a solid brick wall. The passageways are cluttered with old desks, counters, book-cases, pigeon-holes, chairs, tables, settees and what not from the abandoned offices. They have sawed through the oak floor by the old Legislature document room. The marble pavement of the first floor has been torn up to make room for a brick wall. A brick partition has been built in the basement close to the elevator where the members used to ride up with Robert Taylor, the ever-joking elevator man, and the old scenes are gone forever. Committee rooms in both wings are in process of dissolution, and workmen with axe and crowbar are thick as vultures hovering over a feast of carrion. So the building is fast coming down, and its friends will never see the Bryant part again.

Wednesday afternoon the House took a vote on biennial elections, after an hour's debate in which speeches were limited to five minutes each. Of course it was impossible to scratch the surface of the case on either side under such conditions. The vote was remarkably full. A few men were away on committee service, but 220 votes were actually cast and four members were paired. As three members are dead and two are away sick, it will be seen that the record was as full as possible. The vote was 163 in favor to 57 against. To have defeated the amendment on that vote would have required 74 votes. Last year the vote stood 106 yeas to 83 nays. Then 40 Republicans voted against the resolve, while this year there were only 17 and two paired. Some who were re-elected changed sides to favor the resolve. Three Democrats voted for it. Otherwise the vote was on party lines, Republicans for and Democrats against. The case was worked up very diligently, and Gov. Greenhalge and Speaker Meyer used their personal influence to get Republicans to vote for the resolve. Speaker Meyer particularly, labored personally and tried to get a pair for an absent member, one vote against the resolve counting as much as too votes for it. The matter will now go to the Legislature of 1896 for agreeing to; then, if agreed to, to the people.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

A Clever Thief.

Monson was the scene Monday evening of the operations of a clever thief, who had been boarding at the house of Mrs. M. L. Cordner. The man came to Monson last Tuesday, and calling at Mrs. Cordner's asked if she could take him to board. He said he was an inspector of electric lights and poles, and was in the employ of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company. He said he would be through his work by Friday, and Mrs. Cordner took him in. The man gave his name as Bartlett, and said his home was in Mystic, Ct., although he had recently been living in Longmeadow. He was familiar with people in both places whom Mrs. Cordner knew, and was quite an interesting talker. Instead of inspecting the electric lights, however, Bartlett spent most of his time in the reading room at the library. When Friday came he said his work would keep him over Sunday. He expected a friend to spend Sunday with him, but the friend didn't appear. Monday night Bartlett left the house a little before 7 o'clock saying he was going to the library. Since that time he has not been seen, and no trace of him has been discovered. About two hours after Bartlett's departure Mrs. Cordner missed her gold watch, chain and charm from the shelf in the parlor where it had been left. As the new boarder did not appear that night she became suspicious, and reported her loss to the authorities. They notified officers in all the surrounding towns, but Bartlett has not been found. He is thought to be a man wanted in Concord, N. H., for larceny. Mrs. Cordner describes Bartlett as a man about 48, 5 feet 6 inches in height, weight about 150 pounds. Was dressed in dark clothes, black overcoat and soft felt hat. Is sandy complexioned, smooth face, and mustache.

The Normal class will meet Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

MONSON, - - MASS.

The subjects of Rev. F. S. Hatch's Sunday evening discourses, beginning March 3, are as follows: 1st, The Teaching of Jesus Concerning the Father; 2d, The Son; 3d, The Holy Spirit; 4th, Truth; 5th, The Life; 6th, The Kingdom. Services will be held every evening during Passion Week. This is the sixth year in which Lenten services have been held in the Congregational church, and they have grown steadily in interest and attendance.

The Woman's Relief Corps are very jubilant over the success of their sale, supper and entertainment in Memorial Hall last Friday evening. To the nine members of L. L. Merrick corps of Palmer they are indebted for a part of the entertainment. These ladies represented the "Sniggles Family, of Honolulu, on their First Visit to Monson," and caused much merriment. A song by Mrs. Bruce, reading by Miss Perrin, and a piano duet by Miss Rood and Mr. Chandler also came in for their share of applause.

The special meetings at the Congregational church during Lent will begin next Thursday evening with a sermon on "The Voice from Heaven," by the Rev. G. W. Winch, of Holyoke. He will be followed successive Thursday evenings by Rev. M. W. Jacobus, D. D., of Hartford, Ct., Rev. W. R. Newhall, principal of Wilbraham Academy, Rev. G. C. Baldwin, Jr., pastor of the State street Baptist church, Springfield, Rev. J. E. Tuttle, D. D., pastor of the Amherst College church, and Rev. D. A. Reed, D. D., president of the School for Christian Workers, Springfield.

Michael Hynes died at the home of his son, T. J. Hynes, Monday at the age of 80. Mr. Hynes was born in County Clare, Ireland, and came to this country in 1847, locating at Indian Orchard, where he remained 27 years. He then moved to Brimfield and remained in that town until 1892, when ill health compelled him to retire from active work. Besides a widow he leaves four sons, T. J. and W. D. of Wales, E. P. of Monson, and James M. of Lidgerwood, No. Dak. The funeral was held at St. Patrick's church Wednesday, with high mass, at 10.30 a. m.; the burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery.

Grippe has the town in its clutches. It is estimated that there are in various stages of the disease, five hundred cases. It seems to have killed out the measles, however, of which there were at least one hundred and fifty cases. Pink-eye has made its appearance and a number of cases are reported. Among those who are now sick with the grippe or have been during the past week are the following: Mrs. Annis A. Babbitt, Miss Musa Babbitt, Frank C. Park and family, Mrs. Omar Pease and children, Mr. and Mrs. Vaille, Lorenzo Hutchinson, William Pease, Miss Mabel Chaffee, Miss Lizzie Lull, Mrs. Nancy Jefts, Willard Nelson, John Sault, Mrs. Cyrus B. Patrell, Rufus P. Cushman, Mrs. Owen E. Ballou, Mrs. Fred W. Ellis, Edward D. Cushman, Misses Maria, Nancy and Delia Shea, Mrs. Hill, Miss Happy Hill, Mrs. Arthur Rood, E. D. Hines.

HAMPDEN.

The Hampden stage was overturned at East Longmeadow last Saturday evening. No one was injured except Mrs. John McCarthy of New Britain, Ct., who sustained serious wounds in the face, but was able to return to her home in the evening.

HOLLAND.

The personal property of the late Elisha W. Marcy will be sold at auction next Wednesday, at 10 o'clock a. m., consisting of 1 yoke of oxen, 1 yoke steers, horse, cow, and farming tools, and a lot of ancient household articles. The farm, containing 127 acres, will be sold at private sale.

WILBRAHAM.

A special meeting of the Woman's Parsonage Aid Society of the Methodist church was recently held, and a unanimous vote was taken to reorganize the society. The name was changed to the Ladies' Social Union, and these officers were elected: President, Mrs. Anna Brewer; vice presidents, Mrs. Chester Niles, Mrs. Charles Vinton and Mrs. E. J. Royce; secretary, Mrs. Dwight Bosworth; treasurer, Miss J. Bosworth.

BRIMFIELD.

F. Lincoln Peirce is home for over Sunday.

Mrs. F. D. Lincoln will entertain the whist club this evening.

Miss Grace Stoughton of New York spent Sunday at S. W. Brown's.

The burial will be in Oak Grove cemetery in Springfield.

The question of a water supply is interesting the people of Belchertown just now, and the matter was given a hearing before the supply committee of the Legislature last Friday. The petition presented was a repetition of the one presented last year, and this hearing was a renewal of the old fight between Belchertown and Springfield as to whether the town should take water from Jabish brook. The hearing was adjourned to March 7th, and the decision of the Legislature is awaited anxiously.

George S. Bardwell, son of the late A. S. Bardwell, died Wednesday at the age of 59. He was a descendant of John Bardwell, one of the earliest settlers in Belchertown, who came here in 1732. He leaves one sister, Mrs. Addison Bartlett of this place, and four brothers, Martin Bardwell of this place, A. J. and C. E. Bardwell of Somerville, and F. M. Bardwell of Cambridge. The members of the family have always held a high social position in the town. The funeral will be held to-morrow at 1 p. m., Rev. V. C. Harrington officiating.

A large crowd of people, coming from all parts of the town, filled the Congregational church last Snnday evening to witness the exercises attendant upon the installation of the officers of the Boys' Brigade companies and the presentation of gifts from various townspeople. The first company was presented with a very handsome flag, a gift from Mrs. Longley in the name of her husband, the late George Worcester Longley. The second company received a flag from Mrs. Alice Kendall. Two swords were given by Mrs. Maria Longley and Mrs. F. L. Stebbins, and two sashes from Mrs. Cowles and Mrs. Talmage. Bennie Snow was presented with a silver boys' brigade button as a token of his service in securing the most recruits for the companies. Following are the names of the officers of the two companies: First company, captain, Herbert Bridgman; 1st lieutenant, Henry Hoag; 2d lieutenant, Winslow Piper; 1st sergeant, Henry Dillon; 2d sergeant, Otto Shannon; 3d sergeant, Carroll Atwood; quartermaster, Bennie Snow; color-bearer, Ernest Munsell. Second company, captain, Ransom Morse; 1st lieutenant, Eddie Snow; 2d lieutenant, Ervin Strong; 1st sergeant, Robert Dillon; 2d sergeant, Master Baggs; 3d sergeant, Louis Blackmer; quartermaster, George Goodwin; color-bearer, Oscar Dillham.

He expects to locate soon at St. Hyacinth, Canada, where he is interested in a large electric lighting and power plant.

The Ware Steam Laundry Co. is about to refit, refurnish and rearrange its plant in a most thorough manner. Everything will be first-class, to allow work being turned out with the greatest economy of time and labor. Improved machinery will be added, and when completed the establishment will turn out superior work in every respect.

Prof. Beuchler gave an address to a large audience in the East Congregational church Sunday evening, which was a rich treat. No one who has any soul for music can help liking him, and if they would follow his instructions would be sure to be benefitted. This evening, instead of the usual closing of the "week of song," he will give a short address on the history of church music, with illustrations on the organ. There will also be a choice musical programme, the children taking a prominent part.

It is hoped and expected that much good will result from the work of Thomas Edward Murphy, the temperance orator, who is soon to speak here. He is the son of the well-known temperance worker, Francis Murphy. The meetings will be held in the town hall, and are to commence the evening of March 5th, and will continue every evening to and including the following Sunday evening. The singing is to be by a chorus of about 50 voices from the several churches, under the direction of H. B. Anderson.

The Olympia Club celebrated its first anniversary Monday afternoon at the rooms in Leland's block with a social and card party. Several invited guests were present. After two hours of whist refreshments were served, after which there was speaking as follows, with A. J. Mailloux as toastmaster: L. E. St. Onge, historical address; H. A. Mongrain, on the significance of the title Olympia; Joseph Dumas, Jr., on good work accomplished; P. O. L'Heureux, on the value of fraternal societies; Joseph Berube, on the importance of the club; and others.

The marriage of Miss Ellen Gleason, daughter of Mrs. John Gleason of West Main street, and James A. Marland, the well-known clerk for Isaac Jeffries, took place Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 at the residence of Rev. James Boyle. Miss Sarah Gleason, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and George A. Marland was best man. A reception followed the ceremony, at which there were numerous congratulations; the presents were many, handsome and useful. The happy couple took the 3.15 train for Boston, and on their return will make their home for the present with the bride's mother on West Main street.

The death of Mrs. Sarah E. Nickerson, at Holyoke, who for some time lived in Ware, came as a shock to the many who knew her here. She was apparently as well as usual until 11.30 Sunday night, Feb. 10, and before midnight was dead. She had been caring for her husband, who had an attack of the grippe, and at 11.30 retired, leaving instructions to call her if anything was wanted, and shortly after came back saying she could not breath. She was helped to a chair, and in a few moments breathed her last. The medical examiner reports the cause of death as heart failure. Mrs. Nickerson was 69 years of age, and leaves 7 children. Two of them are C. A. Nickerson, who has but recently moved from Ware, and Mrs. W. N. Cowee of Ware Center. Mrs. Nickerson was a member of the Highland's Methodist church at Holyoke, and a consistent christian and devoted wife and mother.

It was reported in Monday's Republican that "the selectmen, through the police department, revoked all liquor licenses Friday night, preparatory to the coming of Mr. Murphy, the temperance lecturer." What liquor licenses? The only only ones we know of that are legal are the druggist's, and they say they know nothing of it. But the rumor is rife about town that the police have notified those selling illegally to stop. A blessed thing, surely, if they will stop at a word from the authorities. But a question many would like answered is why, if the authorities have evidence sufficient to warrant them ordering parties to stop selling, they have not proceeded against them before this? The raids the police have made remind one of a local calendar that was published 20 years ago, one of the illustrations of which was a large rat eating a cheese, while the cat is jumping over both rat and cheese to pursue a very small mouse. The lines at the bottom commenced

"The rat, defiant, still holds sway,
While prudent puss seeks smaller prey."

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA.

"A Fresh English Complexion."

That healthy pink and white might just as well be the typical American complexion, if people would take reasonable care of their health. Ripans Tabules go to the root of the trouble, because a stomach in good order produces good blood.

CHILDREN CRY FOR PITCHER'S CASTORIA

A Novel Idea.

It is free, and deeply interests everybody who has aches or pains, or who is weak and sickly. Anyone can learn the surest and quickest means to get well and strong by accepting that splendid free offer of the great specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. He has established a system of letter correspondence through which all sick and suffering people can learn exactly what ails them, and how to get well, without expense and without leaving their homes. All they have to do is to write to the Doctor, stating each symptom from which they are suffering, and he will answer their letter, explaining their case thoroughly, telling just what the trouble is and what to do to be cured. He gives the greatest care and attention to every letter, and tells the cause of each symptom so plainly that the patients understand instantly just what ails them. And all this costs nothing. It is a splendid opportunity for those who cannot afford the time or expense to go to the city. Dr. Greene makes a specialty of curing patients through letter correspondence. He is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and is the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Those who write to him get cured.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

Cutting new carpets every day. Customers say the patterns were never so rich, so pretty or so tasteful. They certainly were never so carefully picked. We understand the taste of our public so well. There must be a richness about the best carpets, but at the same time a quietness that dispels all thought of vulgarity; there must be a tastefulness and cheerfulness about the more common kinds to adapt them to the cozy living rooms whose floors they're destined to grace.

It pays to be early in buying your carpets. The choicest patterns are always the first to go. Besides this, the people who select their carpets early and give us plenty of time to make them, are most likely to get them put down by appointment the very day that it is most convenient to themselves.

But our part is to serve you as well as we can whatever you do. On a pinch, we sell a carpet at 8 o'clock in the morning and have it down at 8 o'clock at night. We ought to be ready to do such things, but what would you think if we should say that we do as good work on the jump as when we have plenty of time?

TABLE LINENS.

Lost his Position. That really happened to a certain grocer's clerk, because he couldn't induce customers to take an inferior brand of washing powder in place of Pearline. The grocer said, "If you can't sell what I want you to sell, I don't want you." Now it doesn't take a very wise woman to decide whether this was an honest grocer. And a woman wise enough for that, would be likely to insist upon having nothing but Pearline. There is nothing "as good as" or "the same as" Pearline, the original—in fact, the only—washing-compound. If they send you something else, send it back. 399 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Full oft with starch and gloss serene,
The linen collar starts the morn;
Full oft at noontime it is seen
All wilted, wrinkled and forlorn.

That's what you must expect of such a collar; it's the linen of it. The stand-up collars won't stand up, and the turn-down collars will wilt down. The easy, cheap, and pleasant way out of this is to wear "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. These goods are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with "CELLULOID," thus making them strong and durable, and waterproof, not affected by heat or moisture. There are no other waterproof goods made this way, consequently none that can wear so well. When soiled simply wipe them off with a wet cloth. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Insist upon goods so marked if you expect full satisfaction, and if your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us enclosing amount and we will mail sample. State size, and whether a stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

FROM PROMINENT PEOPLE.

A great many persons to our knowledge have voluntarily pronounced Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy successful in curing disease. Here are a number of statements that demonstrate the value of this medicine.

Commander James S. Dean, of Gen. Grant Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y., contracted an aggravated stomach trouble, which resulted in chronic dyspepsia. He suffered misery until he used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. "After using it a week," says Commander Dean, "I felt better, and in a short while was entirely cured, that terrible distress and food breaking up sour in my throat, had all gone."

Rev. I. W. Hill, Pastor Methodist Church Accord, N. Y.: "I can speak highly of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as a blood medicine. Ten years ago I had a cancer removed from my lip. I then began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and to this day no sign of it has reappeared.

The Sisters of Charity, St. Mary's Female Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "The satisfaction we realize from the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy surpass all expectation." The worst cases of eczema, salt rheum and scrofula yield to its curative power, nervousness, sleeplessness, liver and kidney complaints and all urinary troubles are cured by its use.

Woman Suffrage in Billville.

Had a woman suffrage meetin' at Billville-on-the-bend,
With Sister Wilkins in the chair, Miss Jinkins on one end
An' Sairy Jones on t'other, an' that air gal o' Brown's
An' Molly Spinks, paradin' 'round in those new-fangled gowns.

An' 'twuz: "Now, step lively, ladies!
Fer soon you'll wear a coat,
An' you'll canvass all the country
When you vote, vote, vote!"

An' as fer speechifyin'—why they had it left and right;
They said the men warn't nuthin' but a set o' fools an' sich,
An' when the women voted they would make the country rich!

An' 'twuz: "Step up lively, ladies!
For soon you'll wear a coat,
An' the men'll do the cookin'
When you vote, vote, vote!"

They passed a resolution to the 'fect that "women rules,
An' orter run the Gover'ment as well as teach the schools;"
That they ort to be a-votin', an' a-raisin' of a row:
They'd been raised to bakin' biscuits, but the men could bake 'em now!

An' 'twuz: "Step up lively, ladies!
For soon you'll wear a coat;
An' the men kin mind the babies
When you vote, vote, vote!"

They talked from sun to sundown, an' their sentiments wuz free;
An' every man in Billville climbed a oak or hickory tree!
An' the thing is been decided, that the women owns the town,
An' the men'll take the kitchen jest as soon as they climb down!

An' it's "Step up lively, gentlemen!
An' come an' jerk yer coat!
An' don't you burn the biscuits
While yer wives is gone to vote!"

THE INFANT NAPOLEON.

There is a later myth, which recalls in detail that when the pains of parturition seized his mother she was at mass, and that she reached her chamber just in time to deposit, on a piece of embroidery representing the young Achilles, the prodigy bursting so impetuously into the world. To the man himself and to the world, his nature was the product of his hour. When in banishment at Longwood, and on his death-bed, he recalled the circumstances of his childhood in conversation with the attendant physician, a Corsican like himself: "Nothing awed me; I feared no one. I struck one, I scratched another, I was a terror to everybody. It was my brother Joseph with whom I had most to do; he was beaten, bitten, scolded, and I had put the blame on him almost before he knew what he was about; was telling tales about him almost before he had begun to know himself. I had to be quick; my mama Letitia would have restrained my warlike temper; she would not have put up with my defiant petulance. Her tenderness was severe, meting out punishment and reward with equal justice; merit and demerit, she took both into account."

Of his earliest education he said at the same time: "Like everything else in Corsica it was pitiful." Lucien Bonaparte, his great uncle, was a canon, a man of substance (5,000 livres a year), and of some education—sufficient, at least, to permit his further ecclesiastical advancement. "Uncle" Fosch, whose father had received the good education of a Protestant Swiss boy, and had in turn imparted his knowledge to his own son, was the friend and older playmate of the turbulent little Bonaparte. The canon taught him a few notions of Bible history, and, doubtless, also, the essential catechism; from his eleven-years-old uncle he learned his alphabet.

In his sixth year the child was sent to a dame's school. The boys teased tim because his stockings were always down over his shoes and for his devotion to the girls, one named Giacommetta especially. He met their taunts with blows, using sticks, bricks, or any handy weapon. According to his own account, he was fearless in the face of superior numbers, however large. Of French he knew not a word; he had lessons at school in his mother tongue.—Prof. Sloane's New Life of Napoleon in November Century.

THROUGH FITZNOODLE'S NODDLE.

Lord Fitznoodle, the second cousin of Lord Dundreary, had, with his valet, the estimable James Yellowplush, came to America, writes the Boston Budget, and gone West in the hope of bagging a few grizzly bears and buffaloes. America and the Americans seemed to the noble Lord "beastly vulgar, doncher know," and this opinion he frankly told those Americans whom he favored with his lordly society. Nevertheless, fate compelled him to accept as a traveling companion a rampant American. They were traveling on horseback across the prairies, and one day after a vain search for the settlement in which they were to spend the night, they came to a cross road which boasted a charcoal blacksmith's hut and a sign post. The sign read: "Mugg's Corner, four miles on the right-hand road. If you can't read ask the blacksmith."

Thereat the American laughed long and loud, but the Englishman remained silent and pensive.

"I say, me good fellow," he expostulated, "I can't see the joke, doncher know. What is it?"

"If you don't see it," replied the American, "I shan't tell you. But I tell you what I will do. If you see it before we leave the inn to-morrow I'll pay the bills."

All through the rest of the day and evening the Englishman remained silent. He was working the brain envolved by five centuries of culture. When the American retired to his straw mattress and antediluvian spring, there had as yet dawned no gleam of intelligence on the Englishman's face. But in the middle of the night the former was awakened by a loud knock on his door, accompanied by a hearty laugh. "I say, me good man," came the voice, "it is a good joke, doncher know. Suppose the blacksmith should be out."

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feelling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner, with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold.

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler County, W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds."

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and that she has also used it for lame back with great success.

Facts For Our Readers.

Follow Nature and Keep Well, a Good Rule.

The Question is Important, Are You Prepared for Spring?

If Not, Here is Some Very Necessary Information for You.

Nature will soon begin her annual struggle for freedom from winter's icy imprisonment. Already beneath the frozen surface, giant forces are moving in that direction. Purification is going on.

It is the same with the human system. The lengthening days are approaching when the blood seeks to recover from its sluggish inactivity, and it bears in its course germs of health or disease, as it has stored up the one or the other. It requires therefore to be enriched with vitalizing and health giving qualities to give tone, vigor and health to the system.

For this needed and beneficial service nothing is so powerful as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Like Nature's own wondrous remedies in the physical world, which purify the mountains and streams as they leap from their confines to fill the valleys with new life, and cover orchards and fields with flowers and fruit, it brings new force and health to wasted tissues and enfeebled nerves.

Now is the time when your nature calls for help. Don't mistake; no other remedy equals Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy as a spring medicine. No other remedy will so quickly and certainly strengthen your nerves, invigorate your blood, and correct the action of all your organs. It will make you well and strong as it has done thousands of persons; as it did Mrs. W. A. Cutler, of 59 Orchard St., Worcester, Mass.

"A year ago," she said, "I fell ill with nervous prostration and neuralgia, which effected my whole system. My digestion was also very poor. After eating I would be taken with a smothering sensation, while the palpitation of the heart was terrible.

"Severe nervous headaches made my life miserable in connection with these other troubles. I was in a feaful condition, and became greatly discouraged. I consulted physicians and treated with them, but with no benefit. Nothing I took did me any good.

"Finally as a last resource, I commenced to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which had been wonderfully praised to me. With the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and persevering in its use, I continued to steadily gain in every respect.

"My nervousness was soon cured. The neuralgia, headache, palpitation of the heart, indigestion and all my complaints entirely left me. All this was accomplished by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"This wonderful medicine did for me what all the doctors and their medicines could not do. I wish to urge all sufferers to try it."

No power of words can describe the wonderful good which this remedy is doing among the sick and suffering. Those who take it are cured. Thousands of people, at the advent of spring, while not exactly sick, are yet out of order or ailing in some way. They do not feel just right, are not well and strong, cannot eat or sleep well, are nervous, and have no strength or ambition for work or pleasure. Their stomach, bowels, liver, or kidneys are inactive and torpid. Such people need this best of all spring medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to restore the natural action of these organs, give strength and vigor to the nerves and new life and vitality to the blood.

Why lose time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. If you take this medicine, you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this medicine will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

SORROW AND HUMAN KINDNESS.

A pale little lad in a west-bound train glanced wistfully toward a seat where a mother and her merry children were eating a lunch. The tears gathered in his eyes though he tried to keep them back. A passenger came and stood beside him.

"What's the trouble?" he asked. "Have you no lunch?"

"Yes, I have a little left, and I'm not so awful hungry."

"What is it, then? Tell me; perhaps I can help you."

"It's—it's so lonely, and there's such a lot of them over there, and—and they've got their mother."

The young man glanced at the black band on the boy's hat. "Ah," he said gently, "and you've lost yours?"

"Yes, and I'm going to my uncle; but I've never seen him. A kind lady, the doctor's wife, who put up this lunch, hung this card to my neck. She told me to show it to the ladies on the car and they would be kind to me; but I didn't show it to any one yet. You may read it if you like."

The young man raised the card and read the name and address of the boy. Below was the words:

"And whoever shall give drink unto one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

The reader brushed his hand across his eyes and was silent for a moment. Then "I'll come back very soon," he said, and made his way to the mother and her children.

And presently little Georgie felt a pair of loving arms about him, and a woman's voice, half sobbing, calling him a poor, dear little fellow, begged him to come with her to her children. And for the rest of that journey, at least, motherless Georgie had no lack of mothering."—New York Tribune.

FEARLESS AND HONEST.

A Scotch lad landed at Castle Garden, the brightest, yet the loneliest, passenger on an emigrant ship. He was barely fourteen, had not a friend in America and only a sovereign in his pocket.

"Well, Sandy," said a fellow-passenger who had befriended him during the voyage from Glasgow, "don't you wish that you were safe now with your mother in the old country?"

"No," said the boy, "I promised her when I left that I would be fearless and honest. I have her fortune to make as well as my own, and I must have good courage."

"Well, laddie, what can you do?" asked a kind voice behind him.

"I can be loyal and true to anybody who will give me something to do," was the quick response.

A well-known lawyer, whose experience with applicants for clerkships in his office had been unfavorable, had taken a stroll down Broadway to ascertain whether he could find a boy to his liking.

A canny Scotchman himself, he had noticed the arrival of the Glasgow steamer, and had fancied that he might be able to get a trustworthy clerk from his own country.

"Tell me your story," he said, kindly. It was soon told. Sandy's mother had been left a widow with little money and had a child to bring up. She had worked for him as long as she could, but when her health failed, she had bought his passage for America and given to him what little money she could spare.

"Go and make your fortune," she had said. "Be fearless and honest, and don't forget your mother, who cannot work for you any longer."

Sandy's patron engaged him as an office boy.

"I'll give you a chance," he said, "to show what there is in you. Write to your mother to-day that you have found a friend who will stand by you as long as you are fearless and honest."

Sandy at once became a favorite in the office. Clients seldom left the office without pausing to have a word with him.

He attended night school and became an expert penman and accountant. He was rapidly promoted until he was his patron's confidential clerk.

After sharing his earnings with his mother he went to Scotland and brought her back with him.

"You have made my fortune," he said, "and I cannot have luck without you."

He was right. When he had studied law and began to practice at the bar his fearlessness commanded respect and his honesty inspired confidence. Juries liked to hear him speak. They instinctively trusted him.

His mother had impressed her high courage and sincerity upon him. His success was mainly her work.—The Household.

SHE WAS MORE CAREFUL.—Miss Maud Adams is a member of the company supporting John Drew, and a good story is going the rounds concerning her quick wit. One afternoon she attended a luncheon party and met, among others, a young man, recently married, who is noted for his bold manners, and who has won the name of being the biggest bore in society. He asked Miss Adams a number of personal questions, and the hostess was about to speak to him, but he received his just punishment from the young lady he had been bothering.

"Miss Adams," he asked, "will you tell me if you are married?"

"I am not."

"Do you contemplate such a step?"

"I give it no thought."

"And why, pray?" he persisted.

"Because I am not so easily pleased as your wife was."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.—Thackeray, during his stay in Charleston, met the famous Mrs. King, the daughter of James L. Petigru, the great Unionist. Mrs. King was at that time one of the leaders of society.

"I understand, Mrs. King, that you are very fast."

Whereupon the brilliant woman, whose forte was repartee, replied:

"Ah, Mr. Thackeray, we must not place too much confidence in what we hear, for I was informed that you were a gentleman."

It is said that the proud Englishman never forgot this retort of the high-spirited Southern woman.

Free Pills.

Send your address to H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of constipation and sick headache. For malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranteed to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c. per box Sold by LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

RELATIVE TO KANSAS AIR.—A man from the tamarach swamps went to Kansas thinking to improve his condition, but after three years of it he returned to his native heath.

"How did you like it out there?" asked an acquaintance.

"Not very much."

"It's a good country, ain't it?"

"I've seen better."

"The air is better there than it is here, ain't it?"

"Sometimes it is, but not always."

"I don't see why it ain't as good one time as another."

"Well, it ain't."

"Why?"

"Cyclones."

"I thought they purified it."

"That's what I thought till I tried it, but when I had to breath furniture and weather-boardin' and bedclo's and shingles and live stock and household goods and farms and fence rails and that sort of things about three times a week I sort of changed my mind and come away. Kansas may have some advantages, but air ain't one them as a steady thing."

Miss De Style—"Horrors! Why have you adopted a grocer's scale and a yard-stick as our coat of arms?"

Mrs. De Style—"I wish people to know that our money was made in honest trade. Otherwise they might suspect that your father or grandfather had been on the police force."—New York Weekly.

How does Nature Cure Consumption?

SLOCUM'S OZONIZED EMULSION

Of COD LIVER OIL with GUAIACOL

Not only destroys the Bacilli, but, by increasing the appetite and improving the digestion of the food, it helps the nutrition of the blood and in this way helps nature build this protective wall.

House of 10 rooms, new barn, running water in house, plenty of wood and an abundance of fruit. Just the place for one whose family is willing to work in the factory.

D. F. HOLDEN, Palmer, Mass.

Farm of 125 acres, 1½ story house, 2 barns 40x50 and 30x24, and ice house thereon. 40 acres wood, ⅝ chestnut and ¼ maple and ash, can cut some ties; farm will keep 12 cows and pair of horses, cream taken at the door, an abundance of fruit, is 3 miles from P. O., 1 mile from church, 4 miles from Monson, 5 miles from Palmer, Mass. Price $2200.

D. F. HOLDEN, Palmer, Mass.

Farm of 80 acres, over the state line in Connecticut. 1 mile from P. O., 1½ miles from depot, will keep 10 cows, cream taken at door, house of 8 rooms, 2 barns, wagon shed, hennery, and ice house. Price $1600.

D. F. HOLDEN, Palmer, Mass.

Why do persons purchasing farms come to me?

I have for sale many kinds.

Many acres for little money.

Farms in village, owners of which had members working in mill, all of whom are now married and left the farm.

I have hen farms from 3 to 5 acres in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, good buildings for less than $700.

Folded Hands.

Pale, withered hands that more than four score years
Had wrought for others; soothed the hurt of tears,
Rocked children's cradles, eased the fever's smart,
Dropped balm of love in many an aching heart.
Now stirless folded, like wan rose leaves pressed
Above the snow and silence of her breast;
In mute appeal they tell of labors done
And well earned rest that came at set of sun.
From the worn brow the lines of care are swept
As if an angel's kiss the while she slept
Had smoothed the cobweb wrinkles quite away
And given back the peace of childhood's day.
And on the lips a smile as if she said:
"None knows life's secret but the happy dead."
So, gazing where she lies, we know that pain
And parting cannot cleave her soul again.
And we are sure that they who saw her last
In that dim vista which we call the past,
Who never knew her old and weary-eyed,
Remembering best the maiden and the bride,
Have sprung to greet her with the olden speech,
The dear, sweet names no later love can teach.
And "Welcome home," they cried, and grasped her hands,
So dwells the mother in the best of lands.

Margaret Sangster.

AUNT MEHETABLE'S VISIT.

"It's all very well for them to go and invite me to visit them down in York State," said old Miss Mehetable Bevis; "but, of course, they know that I won't come."

"Of course!" snarled Mr. Bevis, who did not believe in anybody but himself. "Why should they want you, Mehetty? You ain't very young, nor you ain't very attractive."

"In that case," said Mehetable, not without a lingering vestige of spirit, "I'm surprised, Brother Reuben, that you and Betty tolerate me here."

"Wa'l," said Farmer Bevis, slowly taking the pipe from his mouth, as if this were a new and unconsidered question, "You're my sister Mehetty, and you've a natural claim on me. Of course, I ain't goin' to see any of my kith or kin turned on the poorhouse. And I don't deny, mind, Mehetty," he made haste to add, as he saw the indignant color mounting to her cheeks, "but that you earn your victuals. You're a smart worker, Mehetty, and always was. And Betty is glad, with her big family, to have some one to help around."

"I should think so," said Mehetable. "Why, Reuben, you could not hire anyone to come here and do the work I accomplish for four dollars a week, let alone the board and lodging."

"What's all this got to do with the question? What I meant to say was that Brother Ben's fashionable city daughter and her husband can't care about plain folks like us."

"I am sure they enjoyed their visit here," observed Mehetable, knitting away as if her needles were electric wires. "And nothing could be more cordial than the invitation they gave me to return it."

"City folks are always smooth-spoken," said Mrs. Bevis, a lantern-jawed, faded-eyed, blue-nosed woman, with her face eternally tied up in a yellow silk pocket handkerchief, and a most aggravating way of singing her sentences through her nose. "I'm glad that I charged 'em a good high price for granny's old spinning-wheel, since you wouldn't let me ask no board-money."

"I should think not," said Miss Mehetable. "Reuben's own brother's daughter! Board, indeed!"

"Of course Mehetable will do as she pleases about visitin' 'em," said Mrs. Reuben Bevis, working diligently away at her "Fool's Chase" quilt pattern. "But it is very plain that they only asked her because they thought it was a duty. And if Mehetable goes off and leaves me just now with the quilting and the peach butter and the apple butter all at once—"

"Well, what then?" said Mehetable, knitting away faster than ever.

Mrs. Bevis tossed her head.

"In that case," said she, "you needn't be surprised if we hire some one else in your place. And of course, you won't expect to come back here to free board and lodging."

Miss Mehetable laid down her work.

"Before this morning," said she, crisply, "I hadn't made up my mind. Now, I have. I shall go to Mrs. Walter Cherryfield's. If matters have come to such a pass that I can't go and come when I choose, but must drudge on day by day like a slave, why, then, it's time that I knew it."

"You and Betty never could agree," groaned Reuben Bevis, with a lugubrious countenance.

"It ain't my fault!" snapped Mrs. Reuben. "There ain't no saint in the calendar could stand what I've stood with Mehetty's temper."

"Guess you'd better patch up a peace," urged Mr. Bevis. "Hired help is dreadful scarce, Betty—and as for you, Mehetty, 'taint long one would put up with your old-maidy ways as Betty does."

But the "little rift within the lute" once split apart, was past mortal power to mend. Betty took herself and her neuralgia sulking out of the room. Mehetable quietly but steadfastly adhered to her resolution—and Mr. Reuben Bevis at last lost his temper.

"Wa'l Mehetty," said he "go your own way. But you're as contrary a piece as I ever sat eyes on, and I don't know how I and Betsey ever got along with you all these years. P'r'aps it's best we should part now—but don't you come back to me for food and shelter—that's all!"

"I shan't ask you for even that much, Reuben," said his sister, quietly rising and putting up her work. "But we're brother and sister, after all, and after ten years of steady work for you and yours, I'd a good deal rather have parted in good will and amity."

"That's bosh!" said Bevis, gruffly. "You've had your own way, and I hope you'll find it pays best in the long run."

Mehetty went slowly to her room, packed her trunk and dressed herself in an antique debelge dress, cut in the fashion of full twenty years ago, with a shirred poke bonnet, thick calf-skin boots and pale blue cotton gloves, while under her arm she carried a green gingham umbrella, thriftily patched with material of a darker emerald.

"I'll settle the question at once," she murmured to herself, "whether or not they are ashamed of their old Aunt Mehetable, from Deer-Horns, up in Maine!"

And then, wishing Reuben and Betsy a pleasant good-bye, which neither of them saw fit to notice by word or look, she went straight to the stage office.

Lawyer Darkley rushed out of his office as she stepped briskly by in her squeaking new boots, which, as the errand-boy remarked, sotto voice, "was every bit as good as a band of music," and smilingly accosted her.

"Miss—ahem! Miss Bevis are you leaving town without any more definite instructions as to—"

"Hush!" said Mehetable abruptly. "Not a word! Yes. I will write in a day or two. Remember, Mr. Darkley, everything is confidential between us."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cherryfield were having a little evening reception that bleak November night. Miss Mehetable Bevis had not been ignorant of this fact; in truth, Mrs. Walter had mentioned it incidentally in her last letter to Deer-Horns; and she marched up the steps looking curiously at the brilliantly lighted windows.

"And now we shall decide this matter," she said to herself, "as to whether my city cousins are glad to see me."

Yes, Mrs. Cherryfield was at home. The waiter looked dubiously at the strange guest, so unlike the fancy figures muffled in soft white garments that made them seem like floating clouds, that came and went from satin lined carriages close to the curbstone. He would call her, he said, if the lady would step into a side room and wait. It was Mrs. Cherryfield's birthday, and—

"No," said Mehetable, "I will go in to her. Stand aside, my good man, if you please!"

Mrs. Cherryfield's face flushed with unmistakable pleasure at this unexpected apparition, as she hurried to meet the visitor from Deer-Horns.

"Aunt Mehetty," she cried. "Oh, this is a surprise, indeed! I am so glad to see you. Here's Walter, and here are my girls! And now you must let me introduce you to my friends. This is Mr. Warrenton, the artist; you know I told you about him last summer—and Miss Briginage, who wrote the volume of poems you liked so much—and this is Miss Stallenkamp and Miss DeVauren—but what a thoughtless creature I am! Let me take you up to my room to remove these heavy wraps!"

"No," cried cheery Walter Cherryfield. "Up to your room, indeed! What for, Alice? Aunt Mehetable shall take off her things here, and then we won't lose a bit of the fun. It's like a whiff of the fresh mountain breeze to see Aunt Mehetty's face again—and I'll lead off the Virginia reel with her myself!"

While the girls clustered around her, eager to introduce their friends, anxious to make her wholly and entirely at home, so cordial and sunny, that Miss Mehetable scarcely knew whether to laugh or to cry.

"Reuben said your invitation was a mere matter of form," said she in a choked voice. "That you didn't want to see me! But I guess Reuben ain't such a good judge of character as he thinks himself."

And then the umbrella, poke-bonnet and clogs having been removed by the trim little maid servant with the blue ribbons in her hair, Aunt Mehetty was whirled down the center by Walter Cherryfield in genuine country style.

Aunt Mehetable stayed a month with the Cherryfield's. She drove in Central Park, looked with awe struck eyes at the smoked-crowned serpents of the elevated road gliding above her head, and wandered through the aisles of the Metropolitan Museum. She went to see the obelisk, was taken over Brooklyn Bridge—and when she went home to Deers-Horns and tried to think of them all, she felt as if her brains had been chopped up into very fine hash.

"But if I'd been the President's lady herself," Miss Bevis always added, "the Cherryfields couldn't have made a greater fuss over me!"

She had not been at the village hotel more than two days before her brother Reuben drove over in his funny little one-horse buckboard.

"Mornin'," said Reuben, succently. "Hear ye had a nice time at Alice's."

"I never enjoyed myself so much in my life," Miss Mehetable answered with spirit, "nor never was treated better!"

"Humph!" said Reuben. "Wa'l, Betsy doesn't seem to get along with the help we've employed; and so, as we've concluded you'd be glad to get home again, I've fetched the buckboard for you."

"Much obliged," said Miss Mehetable, "but this is home."

Reuben stared around the room.

"Why," said he, with lobster eyes of amazement, "this 'ere must cost you a dollar a day, at the very least!"

"About that," said Miss Mehetable, serenely. "But I calculate, Brother Reuben, that I can afford it. I didn't tell you, did I, about those Leadville bonds I took just to accommodate Leander Jarvis's widow, before she went West. I held my tongue about 'em, for I was afraid I had done a foolish thing, but they've quadrupled in value, and Lawyer Darkley has just sold 'em out, and invested thirty thousand dollars for me in government stock. So I can live pretty much as I please."

Reuben involuntarily took off his slouch hat—a sort of tribute to the heiress of all this wealth.

"Well, I do declare for 't!" said he. "Some folks have all the luck. Why, Miriam Jarvis wanted to sell me those bonds at par, and I told her I'd have nothing to do with such wild cat stuff, not at no price."

"And," added Miss Mehetable, with a secret satisfaction in the too perceptible changes in her brother's flint-like face, "I've made my will, and I've left it to my niece Alice and her girls. I like to think that honest and friendly folks will enjoy it when I am gone."

Reuben Bevis turned silently and walked out. And when he related the story to his wife, he added, with true matrimonial courtesy:

"Its all your fault, Betsy. You must up and quarrel with her when there was no occasion. Women is such blamed fools."

"Everything is always my fault," answered the despondent Betsy, bursting into tears. "There never was a woman so tried as I be!"

ONE USE FOR BIG SLEEVES.

Both the girls were rosy from walking in the keen air when they got into the elevated railroad at Fourteenth street, and both were heavily laden with packages. It was a case of "big parcel, little parcel, hat box, and bundle," and every time either of them stirred some one of the impediments fell to the car floor. Sometimes one of the girls was stooping down to pick up the big parcel or the little parcel, and sometimes they were both bending down to gather up these and the hat box and bundle as well. Two brokers, who were sitting opposite, began quietly making bets as to which package would slip off next, and what with their exercise in the open air, that in the car, and their knowledge that they were affording a good deal of dead-head amusement to the passengers, the girls got redder in the face every minute.

"I just think it's a shame," said one of them at last, "that women don't have pockets to put things in," and she gave a little white box a vicious tap that jostled it up against an oblong brown arrangement and sent them both tumbling to the floor.

When she came up gasping from the rescue of these, she jerked at her big sleeves like an angry little bird plucking at its feathers, stopped short in the process, treated her companion to a magnificant example of the baby stare, and said:

"Katie, I've got it."

"Got what?" asked Katie.

"Got an idea," said her companion. "Just watch me."

And with that she took up the little white box, thrust it under her jacket near the shoulder, gave a quick wriggle, and presto! it dropped into the big puff of her sleeve. Then the oblong brown arrangement was similarly disposed of; and then a round, flat pink package; and then another something and another something else, now tucking it into the right hand sleeve, and now into the left, until everything was disposed of. Then Miss Katie followed her friend's example until all of her parcels were tucked away, and when they got off the cars at Park place there wasn't a sign of "big parcel, little parcel, hat box, or bundle," but their sleeves stuck out like four captive ballons, and all the Brooklyn girls they met turned green with envy.—New York Sun.

The New Hampshire House of Representatives Wednesday afternoon, by a vote of 185 to 108, refused a third reading of the bill providing for the municipal suffrage for women.

The body of a Chicago man, who has been missing since January 28, was discovered Monday near the outskirts of the city. When last seen he had $500 on his person, and it is thought he was murdered for the money.

Col. Charles Pomeroy, 76, a well-known Northfield farmer, died suddenly Monday night. He received the title of colonel by being a member of Gov. Briggs's staff, and was at one time high sheriff of Franklin county.

The weavers at the Lancaster mills at Clinton struck Monday morning against a reduction of wages, and at a meeting in the afternoon voted to return to work Tuesday morning, deeming it better to wait for warm weather before taking a stand.

In order to get experience in practical field duty, a new experiment is to be tried with the New York National Guard this year. Three regiments and battalions are to march through country districts, camping at different places each night, and caring for themselves all the time.

Robert Martin, a farmer living near North Adams, was brutally assaulted last Friday night, while driving home with his wife on a lonely road. He was attacked by two men in a sleigh, one of them striking him over the head with a sleigh stake, inflicting serious injuries, from which it is thought he will recover.

An explosion of gas in the White Ash mine of the Santa Fe railroad near Cerrillos, New Mexico, Wednesday morning, causing the death of about 40 miners. Only 50 of the 300 men usually employed in the mine were at work at the time of the explosion, or the list of fatalities would have been much larger.

The schooner Samuel B. Colby, which sailed from Fortune Bay for Gloucester just before the gale of the 8th, has not been heard from, and it is feared that it has gone down. The fishing schooner Joseph P. Johnson of Provincetown, with a crew of twenty men, sailed for the western banks January 28th, and has not been heard from since the heavy gales.

St. Anne's Catholic church at Roxbury caught fire Wednesday morning just before the time for the Ash Wednesday morning mass to begin, and was totally destroyed, the loss being about $20,000. The church was well filled when the fire broke out, but under the direction of the priest the congregation all moved quietly out and did not know of the fire until they reached the open air.

The famous Peru meeting house, one of the old Berkshire county landmarks, known to people all over the state and to many outside of Massachusetts, was destroyed by fire last Friday. This church stood on the brow of the Hoosac range and split the water-shed at that particular spot so accurately that rain falling on the shingles east of the ridge pole went to the Connecticut, while those falling on the west side sought the Housatonic.

President Cleveland has denied an application for pardon in the case of Michael J. Kelley, who is serving a four years' sentence in the Massachusetts state prison for perjury in connection with an application for a pension. The president says: "I am so determined that convictions in such cases shall have their full effect in preventing the commission of this crime, and the crime itself it so dangerous and detestable that the application must be very strong and exceptional to induce me to interfere."

An interesting contest for the possession of real estate is likely to come up in Springfield, where a large tract of land on Armory Hill and the southerly side of State street is claimed by Mrs. Lovica C. Moulton of that city and a brother in Florida. Mrs. Moulton claims that the land was sold to her father in 1841, who then went to sea and died. The deed went to Mrs. Moulton's mother and then to Mrs. Moulton in 1852, when she was living at Sixteen Acres. She was aware that people had taken possession of her property, but had no money with which to make a legal fight for its possession. On the land claimed are two churches and a large number of residences, and its present value is well up into the millions.

PALMER NEWS.

A Scanty Water Supply.

There is no denying that the supply of water in the reservoirs of the Palmer Water Company is very low—in fact, there is no more, if as much, as during the dry time last summer. The matter was brought to the attention of Chief Engineer Hitchcock of the fire district Monday, and an investigation was begun. The result was a great surprise. There was very little water flowing from the brook which is the main source of supply; the upper reservoir had practically no water in it, the middle one but very little more and that was not available because the discharge pipe from this to the lower reservoir was frozen solid; in the lower reservoir, from which the water is taken directly into the mains, the top of the ice was about at the point where the surface of the water was during last summer's dry time,—and the ice was from 15 to 18 inches thick. This of course left very little water. Wednesday forenoon the water was measured by a civil engineer by order of Chief Engineer Hitchcock and the prudential committee of the fire district; he reported the lower reservoir to contain only 331,577 gallons, and the middle reservoir about 140,000 gallons, a total of only 471,577 against the 1,000,000 which the water company contracts with the fire district to have at all times for fire protection. The supply on hand it was estimated, in case of a fire similar to that of the opera house, when five streams were used, would last only about 4½ hours. The matter was indeed a serious one, provided a fire should occur; and even in case no water was needed for fires, the amount running into the resorvoir was not nearly equal to the consumption for domestic purposes and that used by the railroads. A steam pump was set at work Wednesday morning pumping from one of the artesian wells, and added about 25 gallons a minute during the day. Yesterday the pump was so arranged that about 50 gallons a minute was pumped, and it was kept going all day yesterday and all last night. This morning the water was shut off from the tanks of the Boston and Albany road, and the pump at the well kept going. The pipe from the middle to the lower reservoir has been thawed out, and the 140,000 gallons in the former is now available. This, in combination with the thaw which has set in, will no doubt give all the water needed, and the village is practically out of danger from a scarcity for necessary purposes. Considerable criticism is heard against the manager of the water company for allowing the water to get so low before making any attempt to increase the supply.

The Electric Road Scheme Takes Shape.

The much-talked-of scheme for an electric road to connect Palmer and Monson seems to have at last taken shape, as will be seen by an advertisement in another column. The business committee of the Palmer Club has been working on the matter for some time, and a meeting was called Wednesday evening to get the matter into shape. The articles of agreement were passed around yesterday for signatures, and at a meeting of the 28 signers last evening these directors were chosen: G. M. Atkins, G. E. Buck, D. L. Bodfish and Rufus Flynt of Palmer, G. C. Flynt, E. D. Cushman and R. M. Reynolds of Monson; the directors afterward appointed C. E. Fish treasurer and A.E. Fitch clerk. It is proposed to apply at once for a franchise from the towns of Palmer and Monson, and if this is granted there is a strong likelihood that steps will be taken toward the construction of a portion of the road this summer. The business committee of the club has been in consultation with capitalists who have expressed a willingness to build or help build the road, and the outlook for its construction is exceedingly bright. The general feeling among the business men of the two towns—Palmer and Monson—is that the road will be a good thing for both, and they will all work for a realization of the project.

Mrs. A. H. Willis of Boston, formerly of Palmer, visited friends in town Tuesday.

Thomas lodge of Masons will hold a regular communication next Monday evening at 7.30.

The Woman's Relief Corps cleared over $53 at its entertainment last Friday evening.

The Republicans have called their caucus for next Thursday evening at the town house at 7.30.

Miss Edie Austin of West Brimfield spent Sunday as the guest of Miss Lucy Shaw on Fox avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cowan of Windsor, Ct., have been spending the week with their son, A. B. Cowan.

Mrs. Hunt entertained her class of the Congregational Sunday school at her home Wednesday evening.

Mrs. D. L. Bodfish entertained her class of the Congregational Sunday school at her home last Friday evening.

A handsome clock has been placed in the audience room of the Congregational church, the gift of A. T. and J. C. Wing.

Mrs. E. B. Peck entertained her Sunday school class of young men of the Baptist church at her home last evening.

Mrs. R. A. McQuaid of Chatham, N. Y., formerly of Palmer, has been the guest of Mrs. Emily Holdsworth this week.

Miss Nettie Colman spent Sunday with friends in Westfield, and Miss Hattie Blanchard visited friends at Amherst.

The quarterly meeting of the Young Men's Library Association will be held in the library rooms next Monday evening at 7.15.

The annual meeting of the Palmer Cemetery Association will be held at 7.30 next Monday evening in the district court room.

LeGro & Lynde have this week improved the interior appearance of their drug store by a liberal application of fresh paint and paper.

A large audience greeted John G. Woolley at the Congregational church Tuesday evening, and listened to an interesting temperance address.

A. E. Fitch has taken the agency for the Winnewood bicycles, a $60 wheel which is claimed to equal anything on the market at a higher price.

The Democratic caucus for the nomination of town officers will be held in the town house at the Four Corners next Friday evening at 7.30.

Friends of Dr. W. H. Stowe will be glad to know that he has recovered from his serious illness sufficiently to be able to ride out on pleasant days.

Miss Lizzie Brown, teacher in the grammar school building, is on the sick list, and Miss Bessie Royce, one of the pupil-teachers, is substituting for her.

H. C. Strong attended the annual meeting of the Connecticut Valley association of Amherst College graduates at Springfield last Friday evening.

The Republican town committee has organized as follows: Chairman, L. E. Chandler of Palmer; treasurer, C. F. Mooers of Thorndike; secretary, C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers.

Miss Ella J. Lay of South Manchester, Ct., is the guest of Mrs. Albert Bogue. Mrs. Bogue's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cooley of Mittineague, have also been spending the week with her.

Next Sunday is the first Sunday of Lent, and at St. Thomas's Catholic church mass will be at 9 a. m., with Sunday school at 3 and vespers at 7.30 p. m. There will be services every Friday evening during Lent at 7.30.

The Lenten services of St. Paul's Universalist church next week, will be as follows: Sunday morning, Lenten sermon, "Separation;" Tuesday at 7.30 p. m., conference of pastoral committees; Thursday at 7.30 p. m., Lenten address, "Uses and Abuse of Lent."

Mrs. Calvin Hitchcock, 86, died at the residence of E. G. Wood early Monday morning. The funeral was held in the Advent chapel on Park street Wednesday afternoon, Rev. G. H. Wallace of Springfield officiating. Her husband died some years ago.

The subject of the sermon Sunday morning at the Congregational church will be "Our Fellowship." In the evening the subject will be "The Wilderness of Christians and the Wilderness of the World." The children from the state primary school will sing at the latter service.

The building committee of the Odd Fellows have been looking up the matter of scenery for the new opera house lately, and a representative of a firm which manufactures scenery was in town last Saturday with samples. It is probable that the scenery for the opera house will be ordered soon.

The selectmen met this afternoon and drew orders for the last of the bills for the year ending March 1st, 1895. There have been a number of unusual expenses this year, mainly connected with the several suits against the town, and the selectmen find themselves rather short of money for ready use in town matters.

Mrs. Mary E. Tyler, 68, widow of the late John Tyler, died yesterday morning at her home on Fox avenue after a long and painful illness. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Emma Gunn, two grandsons and three sisters, Mrs. Ives of Worcester, Mrs. Cutler Moore of Warren, and Mrs. A. L. Rice of New York. The funeral will be held from her late residence to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock.

The public is invited to a meeting of the Quaboag Literary Circle at the library building this evening. Homer C. Strong will read the historical paper, entitled, "England, from the Evolution of Parliament to the War of the Roses," and Mrs. J. H. Woolrich will read the selections of the Round Table; a recitation will be given by Miss Lillian Kempton, entitled "Deacon Brown's Story."

Reports have been circulated that a new hotel was to be built on the railroad company's land on the south side of Main street, between the Holbrook and Eager blocks, but there is little likelihood that the scheme will ever materialize, at least not in the immediate future. Palmer has three hotels now, with not enough business to give two a good living, and another would only make it hard sledding for all four.

O. P. Allen has just received a fine life-size portrait of Rev. Dr. Hunter, which he has placed on the walls of the vestry of the Congregational church, the portrait being sent in response to an intimation made some time ago that such a likeness would be a cherished addition to the list of pastoral portraits already hanging on the vestry walls. The church voted last evening to gratefully accept the gift, and to return thanks to Dr. Hunter for the same.

The building and machinery of the Boston & Albany's pumping station near the bridge over the Quaboag has been thoroughly overhauled this week, and the pump was started this morning, to be used in filling the tanks which supply the locomotives with water. Iron stringers have replaced the wooden ones under the floor of the building, and a new floor has been laid. The pump has been sent to Warren and rebuilt, and a feeder and feed-water heater added.

The primary department of the Congregational Sunday school will hold its annual fair in the church parlors this evening, when cake, pastry, canned goods, home-made candy, etc., will be offered for sale. At 8 o'clock there will be an aesthetic concert by the girls, and an art exhibition by the lads, with other attractions. Contributions of clothing are solicited for a missionary box now being packed. The doors will be open at 7, and the admission will be 10 cents.

One of the section hands on the Boston and Albany road reports what appears to have been an attempt at train wrecking Tuesday. The Chicago Limited, which passes this place for the west at 12.45, struck a large stone which was on the track at Blanchardville, but which fortunately was not large enough to do any material damage. The section hands had the day before left the stone by the side of the track, but in a position where it could not possibly have got upon the track without help.

The Central Massachusetts Electric Company has been setting up a new machine at its plant this week, a three-phase monocylic dynamo, with a capacity of 2000 16-candle power incandescent lamps. The peculiarity of the machine lies in the fact that it can be used for either arc or incandescent lighting or power, or all three, whereas the other machines are available for only one. The machine weighs about ten tons, and considerable difficulty has been experienced in getting it in the building and getting it set. It will be used for the Warren lights.

The semaphor signals which control the moving of trains over the Ware River road between the passenger station and a point near the Point of Rocks have been in use about a week. By this system the liability of an incoming train interfering with those switching about the round house is done away with. If a train is to go out on the Ware River tracks, if only to the round house or coal bin, it must first get the signal, which is opposite the center of the passenger station, and the other signal is then set against incoming trains and cannot be released from any other point than in the signal tower. If the signal is set for an incoming train and for any reason a locomotive wishes to come upon the main line from the round house before the arrival of the train, the signal can be set at danger from the round house, but the signal cannot be set from there to allow trains to come in.

The installation of the newly elected officers of the Rebekah lodge Tuesday evening was an enjoyable affair for all concerned. The exercises were conducted by Mrs. Ella S. Hunt, D. D. G. M., of Springfield, who was accompanied and assisted by Grand Marshal Nettie Dunham, Grand Warden Abbie Nichols, Recording Secretary Myrtle Frissell, Permanent Secretary Miranda Lull, Treasurer Nellie Maxwell and Inner Guard Mary Merritt. In addition to these the following members of the Springfield lodge were present: Lizzie Merrick, Libbie Godfrey, Nettie Ham, Emma Sackett, Hattie Adams, Lizzie Rodman, Jennie Godfrey, Belle Flagg, Lizzie Amidon, Helena Fisher, Mary Wilcoxson, Lizzie White; George F. Amidon was drillmaster, and Waldo Fisher was organist. Theseofficers of the local lodgewere installed: N. G., Ella C. Washburn; V. G., Jennie Eastman; R. S., Sarah Parkhurst; P. S., May Robinson; treasurer, Georgia Fuller; W., Hattie Walker; C., Emma Maxwell; I. G., Sarah Bray; O. G., E. L. Maxwell; R. S. N. G. G. H. Bray; L. S. N. G., Sarah Smith; R. S. V. G., Carrie Reed; L. S. V. G., Lura Fitch; Chaplain, E. E. Moulton; organist, Georgia Fuller. Refreshments were served after the work, and a social followed, with dancing and a general good time. The Springfield party had arranged to have the modoc stop for them, the officials of the railroad having agreed to do so if 30 would go in on the train, but when the time came to go the Springfieldians were enjoying themselves so thoroughly that they refused to leave, and only nine took the train when it stopped.

The committee is composed of F. L. White, W. Twogood, Amos Olds, F. W. Lavine, S. B. Barnes and O. J. Denton. It has also been empowered to organize a Law and Order society, if it considers such a movement advisable, and will meet next Monday evening at 7.30 in the same place to consider this matter and arrange for doing some temperance work during the ensuing weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson suffered a sad bereavement last Sunday morning when Alic, their youngest son, died of pneumonia after about thirty hours' illness. The young man was very popular among the young people of the neighborhood, and was of an excellent character, which endeared him to every one who knew him. Many sympathizing friends showed their sorrow for the broken-hearted parents and their esteem for the departed by words of consolation and offers of assistance. The funeral services were held at the Union church, Rev. G. S. Butler, assisted by Rev. E. C. Weeks, officiating. There were many handsome floral tributes, and the interment was in the Four Corners cemetery.

The Post Office Burglarized.

One of the most daring burglaries that has been attempted in this place for many years was effected on the post office Wednesday morning about 2 o'clock. The would-be thieves made their entrance by breaking the door open, and then proceeded to open the safe, which was a very strong one. A hole was drilled through the top of the safe, which is a plate of steel four inches thick, and a charge of either dynamite or gunpowder inserted, and placed in such a way as to blow the door clean off and shatter several large lights of glass in the office building and Shaw Bros'. store, which is adjoining. Fortunately Mr. Twiss, the postmaster, had left no money or other valuables in the office during the night, consequently the thieves secured no booty. The people in the immediate neighborhood were aroused by the explosion, but supposed it to be at the Palmer Mill, and therefore no one arose to investigate. The damage to the safe and building is the only loss sustained by Mr. Twiss, who has reason to congratulate himself that he has not been in the habit of leaving money, stamps or anything valuable in the building while absent.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 27, 1895.

Thursday afternoon the House took up the veto of the governor of the bill to remove the restrictions upon the shad and alewife fishery in the Merrimac river. It was a bill which had passed bothbranches unanimously, and there was a great deal of feeling over it on the part of the representatives from the Merrimac valley. They rallied vigorously to the support of the bill, while the only defender of the veto was Mr. Searls of Worcester. The Essex men, too, had doubtless worked up their case well, and did not call up the matter till they felt sure of their ability to pass the bill over the veto. The roll-call resulted in 158 yeas to 31 nays and one pair, or far more than the necessary two-thirds. No partisanship appeared in the division, for several Democrats voted to sustain the veto.

The committee on roads and bridges believes in pushing the work for good highways, for it has reported an appropriation of half a million dollars for that purpose. They have reported a bill to encourage towns to make macadamized roads and against the bill to compel the use of wide tires on all draught wagons in the state, but they have granted the petition of the towns of Blandford and Russell that they may compel the use of wide tires. So an entering wedge is put in.

Governor's reception comes but once a year, and a few words about it may not come amiss to those who are not near enough to witness it. This year, owing to the confusion from the demolition of the rear part of the state house, Gov. Greenhalge received in the brilliant reception room prepared next to the hall of the House in the extension for members and their friends. In this dazzling setting, backed by fifteen members of his staff in all the glitter of gold braid and epaulets, stood the governor. The district police force in full uniform were stationed at convenient points for directing the people. The visitors passed in at one door of the reception room and out at the other, and then made the tour of the new hall, going down one aisle to the area before the speaker's chair and up the other to the exit. Very few of the state officials attend these receptions, and very few of the people who would claim to high social standing. No women with rich dress are there, no men with their fashionable clothing. Most of the people are comfortably dressed, but they are of the everyday sort of us who make little of the fuss and feathers which dazzle. Many street boys came, little fellows, ragged and dirty. Little girls are there, shy are bold, filthy and neat. It is a miscellaneous mass of the people, many of whom are proud to shake hands with the governor, but some of whom do not know enough to shake hands at all, but pass by without even looking at him. The attendance this year was 2056, against 2653 on the previous Washington's Birthday.

The greatest moral demonstration which the state house has witnessed in recent years occurred Wednesday forenoon in the old hall of the House, on occasion of the hearing on the petition of hundreds of churches and religious organizations all over the state for a repeal of the law which permits any theatrical diversion on the Lord's day. Every seat in the old hall was filled, and most of the room in the aisles and galleries. Among the men present were Rev. Drs. Reuen Thomas of Brookline, A. A. Miner and I. J. Lansing of Boston, Charles Carleton Coffin, old-time war correspondent of the Boston Journal, Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, president of the Boston Congregational Club, Rev. Dr. A. H. Plumb, Rev. Henry A. Haven, secretary of the National Congregational Council, and many of local reputation. Many women were there, including Mrs. Susan S. French, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Petitions for this legislation have poured upon the Legislature in great volume, and no case of the session has revealed a deeper public interest, showing the sensitiveness of the moral part of the community to the outrages upon the Lord's day which have been perpetrated recently in Boston, and which still have the countenance of the Boston board of aldermen. Emory B. Gibbs and Samuel C. Darling were council for the petitioners, the former opening the case and introducing the witnesses, and the latter making the closing argument. Plenty of proof was at hand to show the disreputable character of the Sunday evening performances, and Mr. Darling said if they had sent through the mails (as was thought of doing till they looked at it in its legal consequences) the testimony which was taken at the hearing before the Boston police commissioners, they would probably have been liable to fine for using the mails for obscene literature.

The significant part of this case was that the other side did not put in a remonstrance. Mr. Darling said that before the police commissiers they were represented by able counsel, and he believed that the reason why they did not appear at the state house was because they were unwilling to stand in the focus of the moral sentiment of Massachusetts and defend such indecent proceedings as had occurred with the sanction of the Boston aldermen. Mr. Darling gave an eloquent passage to his eulogy of the New England Sabbath, which is found nowhere else on the face of the earth, not even in other states of our Union, and he made it very clear that there is ample ground in public morality for such a bill as the petitioners ask the committee to report.

Owners of cattle all over the state have a deep interest in the vote which was reached on Wednesday by the committees on agriculture and public health, acting together, upon the petitions of farmers from Cape Cod to Berkshire that full value shall be paid for cattle slaughtered for tuberculosis. The vote, with only one member in opposition, was that full market value for beef and milk shall be paid for the slaughtered cattle, and that the state shall pay damages where cattle are quarantined over seven days.

The house has had a debate over the bill of Col. Young of Springfield, who is known as the chief A. P. A. member of the House, to require public officials to inspect private schools, and defeated it by a large vote. The one particular point against the bill which had most weight was made by Mr. Roe of Worcester, who said that if private schools (which, in their discussions means parochial schools) were inspected and approved by public officials, they would say they were as good as public schools and would demand their share of the public money. He did not believe it was policy to allow any private school to say that it had been officially pronounced to be as good as a public school.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

MONSON.

Death of Levi C. Bates.

Levi C. Bates, 80, one of Monson's oldest and most respected residents, died at his Main street home Saturday morning at four o'clock, after a short illness. Although for many years he had been a sufferer from asthma, the immediate cause of his death was the grippe, which developed into pneumonia. He was not considered critically ill until a few hours before his death, being dressed and about the house the day before. Mr. Bates was born in Springfield August 1, 1814. In his youth he learned the carpenter's trade, and came to Monson about 1838 to repair the old Congregational church, now known as Greene's Hall, and being pleased with the town made it his permanent residence, marrying Miss Sarah Stebbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Stebbins, who died a year later. In October, 1842, he married her sister Nancy, who survives him. To them were born two children, Edwin, who is married and lives in town, and Mrs. Eliza Clark, who died several years ago. During Mr. Bates's early married life he owned and lived on the farm on which Monson's new system of water works is now located, and the house in which he died was moved from this farm about twenty-five years ago. Before this, however, he had moved into the village and worked at his trade. He was a Methodist. In 1825 there was built in the south part of the town a chapel 25 by 40 feet, and costing $500, which was a rallying point of Methodism in this valley. To the society which sustained this chapel Mr. Bates was transferred by letter from a Springfield church, and as late as 1848 was one of five members and was its solitary steward. A local preacher, James Billings, was sent here in 1849. Wales, South Wilbraham, Brimfield, Stafford, Union, Holland and Palmer also being on the circuit. At Mr. Billings's coming there were nine members of the society in town. In the fall of that year the present church was built, Mr. Bates being instrumental in raising funds for the purpose. Besides being secretary of the stewards for a number of years, Mr. Bates was a trustee from the first, and remained one until his death. He was the oldest member of the church by eight years, and had been a member longer than any other living member. Mr. and Mrs. Bates celebrated their golden wedding in October, 1892. The celebration was a surprise to the aged couple, who were invited to the church, and upon their arrival were escorted up the aisle by children and met at the altar by Rev. William H. Marble, who presented them in behalf of their many friends a sum of money. Refreshments and congratulations followed. Mr. Bates's funeral was held at his residence Monday afternoon at 2 30, Rev. W. H. Marble officiating. The burial took place in the Center cemetery. Mrs. Bates was too ill to attend the funeral.

Postmaster Farrington Reappointed.

Gilbert W. Farrington was on Tuesday reappointed postmaster of this town. Mr. Farrington was born in Wales Nov. 17, 1841, and received his education at Monson and Wilbraham academies. He came to Monson in 1868, and entered the employ of Merrick, Fay & Co., straw goods manufacturers, where he remained twelve years, having a position in the packing department. He served on the board of assessors for three years, and in September, 1881, was elected librarian of the Monson Free Library, serving till July of 1886, when he received his appointment as postmaster under President Cleveland. His commission expiring in 1890 and a Republican president being in office, it was thought by some that the office belonged to that party, and there were plenty of aspirants. Mr. Farrington had served the public so satisfactorily, however, that many prominent and influential Republicans were desirous that he should be retained. When President Cleveland was again elected there were Democrats who thought they had claims upon the office, and accordingly circulated petitions, but still Mr. Farrington continued his duties, having no commission and not knowing how matters would turn. When called upon by the JOURNAL correspondent on Tuesday and informed of his reappointment, Mr. Farrington expressed himself as pleased to know that the affair was finally settled. Mr. Farrington has been instrumental in furnishing Monson much better mail service than it had before, and is very popular. He is a member of the firm of Morris & Farrington, insurance agents, a member of Day Spring Lodge, F. and A. M., and one of the most prominent members of the Universalist church, serving as its treasurer. He married November 7th, 1872, Miss Laura Randall of Belchertown. Herbert W. Shaw served as clerk in the office from the time of Mr. Farrington's appointment till last October, when he left to enter a Philadelphia dental college, and is succeeded by Charles W. Harrison, for four years clerk in the Palmer post office.

The Poverty Party.

It has often been said that Monson was feeling the hard times comparatively little, but no one who witnessed the scene in Memorial Hall Monday evening and judged from appearances could possibly say that the company assembled showed any marked signs of prosperity, and the line in Evangeline—"The poor ye always have with you"—was apparently verified. The maze march began at 8.15 with 75 couples, led by Clarence W. King and Miss Minnie Anderson, and Frank W. Moulton and Mrs. Julia Ketcham, and if the orchestra had struck up

"Hark! hark! the dogs do bark,
The beggars are coming to town,"

no one would have had cause to complain of its inappropriateness, for such an array of old clothes as met the vision is simply indescribable. Tags and tatters were the order of the evening, and no one whose apparel indicated that the wearer was in prosperous circumstances was supposed to take part. The dance orders were printed on brown and white strawboards, and pencils were hung to the gas fixtures about the hall. Mrs. William H. Crew in a red wig, brown skirt, indigo blue waist, torn and faded gingham apron, and a red bandana around her neck won the woman's prize for wearing the most unique costume, and Henry Niebuhr, in ragged and patched trousers, woman's jacket with crackers for buttons, a wig of rope, one cuff on his ankle, a tin hat, and carrying the frame of a valise, won the man's prize, the former being an order on W. N. Flynt & Sons for a gingham dress, and the latter an order on George L. Fuller for a pair of dancing slippers. Brown's orchestra furnished music, and Prof. T. H. Treadway prompted. A number of out-of-town people were present, Mrs. Vinel of Lewiston, Me., and Harry Treadway of Westboro being among the number. The party closed the second series of dancing lessons given by Prof. Treadway, and the third series of six lessons will begin next Monday evening.

Chauncey Walcott, nearly 86 years old, father of Mrs. John C. Aldrich, is perhaps the champion Bible reader of the town having read the Bible through once this winter, and the New Testament the second time, and is now about half through the Old Testament. Last winter he read the Bible through twice, and had read it through several times before. Besides being a Bible reader he reads eagerly and understandingly all the daily and weekly papers he can get hold of.

Grippe is subsiding, but still there have been a number of new cases reported this week, among them Mrs. William Pease, Edson Walker's family, Frank Johnson's family, Henry Beckwith's family, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Wing, Miss Rice, Frank G. Lamphear, Lemuel S. Mason's family, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Buffington. One of our doctors says: "As a preventive of grippe take a two-grain quinine pill after each meal for several days."

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle will meet this evening at Rev. W. H. Marble's. Programme: "A Sketch of Joseph Addison and His Writings," by Miss Converse. Mrs. David's dancing class gave a very delightful reception Tuesday evening. There were fourteen couples present. The dance orders, two of a kind, were written on fourteen different firms' business cards, one being W. N. Flynt & Son's, another the PALMER JOURNAL'S, and another the W. N. Flynt Granite Co's. The cards were numbered, lettered and ribboned. For the first waltz the gentleman and the lady who had corresponding cards were partners, the second dance ribbons were matched, the third numbers, the fourth letters, and the fifth and sixth were draws. There are to be two more lessons and then a final in Memorial Hall.

George and Martha Washington received their many friends in the Methodist church last Friday evening. The vestry was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. Across the north and southeast corners were draped large flags. In the former George and Martha, in full dress, "received," standing before a table on which was a candle and snuffers. In the other corner, was a collection of antique china, etc. The altar rail was wound with bunting, and a large shield of flags and bunting formed a background for those taking part in the entertainment. The tables were lighted with candles, and an excellent supper was served. The waitresses were in the dress of ye olden time, as were the singers and readers who gave the entertainment, which was well rendered. About thirty-five persons comprised the chorus, with Prof. Burke as leader, and their rendering of the old-time hymns was excellent. Mrs. Todd's "worldlie song" was heartily encored, and the readings came in for a share of applause. The vestry was crowded, and the Y. P. S. C. E. realized a good sum.

GLENDALE.

A farmer's meeting will be held at the church next Wednesday.

A sociable was held at the house of Addison Bennett Monday night.

Rev. H. P. Smith was summoned home by telegraph Wednesday because his wife had been taken very sick suddenly.

Traveling is getting very bad, neither wheeling nor sleighing; lots of shoveling must soon be done. So far roads have been very promptly broken out.

J. M. Lyon spent Tuesday with his son, W. A. Lyon, who is having another severe attack of rheumatism. He has had watchers nights for about a week, and is now slowly improving.

Jerry Sizer fell through a window at the Excelsior woolen mill Tuesday while in a fit, and cut his right wrist, severing one cord and making an ugly cut. Dr. Kinsman took several stitches in dressing it. He is doing well.

A young lady came to Cobbett's store Wednesday with H. Leno's horse and sleigh. After finishing her trading she unhitched the horse, which suddenly wheeled around, breaking away from her, and ran swiftly home about one mile, leaving the lady beside the road. Only slight damage was done, as the sleigh righted itself and kept so to the finish.

Mrs. E. R. Shaw, who had been to carry her husband to the mill Monday morning, had a narrow escape from a runaway. The horse hit the sleigh runner with his heel, which frightened him, and he ran about a mile home, Mrs. Shaw holding steadily to the reins and keeping him in the road, arriving safely home without a scratch, but terribly scared.

How to Save Money and Health.

Most people have some trouble with their health which they would like cured if it could be done easily and cheaply. Dr. Greene of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., who is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, makes the following offer: He gives you the privilege of consulting him, free of charge, through his great system of letter correspondence. Write him just how you feel and what symptoms trouble you. He will answer your letter, explaining your case thoroughly, telling just what ails you and how to get strong and well. He gives the most careful attention to every letter, and makes his explanations so clear that you understand exactly what your complaint is. And for all this you pay nothing. You do not leave your home, and have no doctor's fee to pay. The Doctor makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and is having wonderful success. He is the discoverer of that celebrated medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. If you write him at once you will doubtless be cured.

Easy As Can Be — washing with Pearline. Just try it and see. None of the rub, rub, rub that made the old washboard hateful.

None of the old washboard, either. Nothing but common sense washing of clothes, paint, dishes, anything in the house—with something that takes out the dirt, instead of making you rub it out. It's a big difference.

There's a saving in the labor — but, besides that, there's a saving in the wear. Washing with acids and chemicals is easy, too—but it isn't safe. Washing with Pearline is. 348 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

NEW YORK CITY MERCHANT.

How His Life Was Saved.

No one would think to look at Richard B. Brown, a commission merchant, of No. 306 Washington street, New York City, that for six weeks he had suffered in agony in his bed and that physicians had said it was impossible for him to regain his health.

But now he is back in his office, vigorous and hearty. He regards Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as the savior of his life. Mr. Brown's story is remarkable.

"For several years," said Mr. Brown to a reporter the other day, "I suffered from inflammation and ulceration of the bladder, a most stubborn disease. My family physician was unable to relieve me. At the advice of friends I consulted specialists, and they all failed to do me any good. All this time I was growing worse, and at last I was compelled to take to my bed.

"My mother-in-law had heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and she asked me to give it a trial. I had been confined to my bed for five weeks and I admit that I didn't think there was much chance of getting out of it. Well, I tried Favorite Remedy. There seemed to be a change that surprised me. In a week I was able to get out of bed and go around the house, and in a short time I recovered completely. To-day I'm as well as ever and what's better yet I feel that I am permanently cured. I can work sixteen hours a day now, and not be broken up a bit. To Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is all the credit due."

Favorite Remedy ranks, with the medical profession, as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver to a healthy condition, and cures the worst cases of constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to females, and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease.

In this last disease it has cured where all else failed. Any druggist can supply.

FISH BAIT FOR SALE,

CHARLES S. RUGGLES,

DANIEL WEBSTER.

Mr. Webster's method of examining witnesses may be judged from the following scene which occurred in a disputed will. Among the witnesses was a bank cashier to whom Mr. Webster said:

"You say you think this is not Mr. Tuft's signature?"

"I was cashier of the bank of which he was president, and used to see his signature, in all forms; and very often to obligations and notes and bills."

"And you think this is not his signature? Please to point out, if you will, where there is a discrepancy?"

"I do not know as I can tell."

"But a sensible man can tell why he thinks one thing is not like another."

"Well (examining the note), in the u the top used to be closed."

"Gentleman of the jury, you hear: The top was closed. Go on."

"Well; any other?"

Mr. Webster took one of the forty genuine signatures which were in the court, and stating to the jurors that it was admitted to be genuine, showed them that the very things the witness had testified Mr. Tufts never did, were to be found in this signature, and in nearly every instance.

The witness looked chop-fallen and took his seat; and nearly all the witnesses were floored in the same way. At last they came to William P. Winchester. He sat opposite to me and looked at Mr. Webster with an air that said: "You won't get any such answer out of me." He took the stand and testified that he did not think the signature genuine.

"Why?" asked Mr. Webster.

"I can't tell," was the reply.

"But, Col. Winchester, an intelligent man can give a reason for his opinion. Pray, don't give such a statement as that without offering a reason for it."

"I can't give a reason; but if you will allow me to make an illustration I will do so."

"Certainly."

"Suppose," said Mr. Webster, some distinguished man at home or aboard should be seen walking on 'change; suppose you were there at high 'change; it would be very natural to point out Daniel Webster and say, 'There goes the defender of the constitution!' Everybody would mark him, and nobody could mistake his identity. They would always know him afterwards. But if, in the afternoon, some two men brought on a head and two legs and two arms on a platter and asked me to identify them separately as belonging to Daniel Webster, I could not swear to them. In the same way there is something about this signature that does look genuine; but I could not swear to the particulars." Mr. Webster smiled at this reply and told the witness that he might be excused.

The following has been related as the manner in which Mr. Webster became engaged to his loving and devoted wife. He saw her first when he was a young lawyer at Portsmouth, and she was Miss Grace Fletcher. At one of his visits he had, probably with a view of utility and enjoyment, been holding a skein of silk thread for her, when suddenly he stopped saying:

"Grace, we have been engaged in untying knots; let us see if we can tie a knot; which will not untie for a lifetime."

He then took a piece of tape, and after beginning a knot of a peculiar kind, gave it to her to complete. This was the ceremony and ratification of their engagement. And in the little box marked by him with the words "Precious Documents," containing the letters of his early courtship, this unique memorial was found,—the knot never untied.

To the memory of the lady who won his earliest affection, who shared the trials and triumphs of his early manhood, Mr. Webster retained to the end of life an unfaltering devotion. He could never speak of his wife without visible emotion. Grace Fletcher Webster was a person of very delicate organization, both physically and intellectually; yet she was energetic; and when occasion required she exhibited a rare fortitude. To her husband's welfare she was entirely devoted, she presided over his household with peculiar grace and dignity, and really seemed to live for him. When he was at home she sought his comfort and pleasure, when he was absent, her thoughts, as her beautiful letters testify, were of him day and night. She wrote to him almost daily.—Exchange.

HAPPY.

There are times when the most ambitious and worldly-minded of men must believe with the moralist that the best elements of human happiness are the simplest and most frugal. An old couple living on a small farm in the beautiful valley of the Connecticut, aptly illustrated this truth.

When I saw them they were sitting under the apple-tree in the door-yard before their little box of a house, contentment written on every line of their faces.

"I was born and raised right here on this spot, and ain't never lived nowhere else," the old man said. "Ain't never wanted to live nowhere else. I've had all I ever keered for, right here, and I wouldn't change places to-day with the President himself."

"You haven't cared to become rich?"

"I've been rich all the time," he replied.

"I've had good health, and so's my wife, and we hain't never knowed what it is to want food or clothing, while we've been spared the worriment and vanity that riches brings to most folks. We've raised eight sons an' daughters an' sent 'em out into the world, good honest men and women, that's something done for our country an' for the Lord, ain't it?"

"But don't you feel that you would like to see something of the world?"

"No I don't. Three years ago we took a trip, an' visited our sons an' daughters, an' we seen enough of the world then to make us satisfied to spend the rest of our lives right here. Wouldn't you like to go out an' look at my rozberry vines?"

I looked at the neatly kept "rozberry" vines, the weedless "truck path," little garden of marigolds, morning glories and old fashioned pinks, and all the evidences of thrift and contentment, and rode away feeling that I had left a pair of real philosophers behind me.—The Advocate.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advise is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means to not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will. Take Chamberlain's Couch Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well-known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three application of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted.

AN ALDERMAN CURED.

Dr. Greene's Nervura is the Best and Surest Spring Medicine. Mr. Crouch and Editor J. C. Gere, in the Daily Hampshire Gazette, Give This Wonderful Remedy a Glowing Tribute.

ALDERMAN CHAS. S. CROUCH.

Editor J. C. Gere, of this leading newspaper, personally investigated the facts of this wonderful cure, and his widely-read editorial states the details of the cure exactly as they occurred, giving Hon. Mr. Crouch's own words.

Following is the editorial in full:

Learning that a great cure had been effected in Alderman Chas. S. Crouch of Northampton, Mass., by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, a reporter took occasion to call on Mr. Crouch and talk with him about it, and among the thousands of testimonials given to this world-renowned medicine, none will be more widely read or give greater weight than this one coming from so noted a man as Alderman Crouch.

Mr. Crouch is one of the plain, old-fashioned kind of men, outspoken, and always means just what he says. In conversation with Mr. Crouch, he said:

"Last spring I did not feel in my usual health; felt as tired in the morning as when I retired; had no energy nor ambition to go about a day's work; no appetite with which to regain strength and energy. In this condition I worked along from week to week, thinking that after a while matters would right themselves and I would feel like myself again. But to the contrary, I grew worse.

"Knowing that Dr. Greene's Nervura was not a patent medicine, but a medicine put up from a prescription discovered by the doctor in his private practice, I resolved to try it. The first bottle helped me so much that I purchased another one, and even a third bottle, when, to my great joy, I found myself as well as ever I was in my life; and furthermore, have remained so."

In further conversation he said.

"Dr. Greene's Nervura is a great medicine. There is no humbug about it! It was made to cure, and it does cure! No one need be afraid to use it."

Day by day he praises this wonderful medicine to his friends and neighbors, as the one sure way to regain their health.

His wife, also, used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to great advantage, and, like her husband, has been cured and now enjoys her old-time health.

Mr. Crouch has always been an active man in town and city affairs. In old town-meeting days he was always on hand to help with his eloquent, oratory the pressing needs of the time, and since Northampton has been a city he has served for several years in its government, and at the last election he received the largest vote for alderman he ever had. He is a contractor, and during the past few years has built some of the finest houses in the city. Both Mr. and Mrs. Crouch gave Dr. Greene the praise of giving them a medicine that will cure and keep them well.

The word of this widely-known city government official, Alderman Crouch, should have the most convincing weight with the public, but when we have added to this the fact that the Northampton Daily Hampshire Gazette, a newspaper of the highest standing, vouches editorially for the truth of every word, and its editor states that he has personally investigated all the facts of the marvelous cure, there should be no hesitation by the people to use this great medical discovery, this wonderful curer of disease, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is a fact, no longer to be doubted, that this remedy cures—that it makes those who use it strong and well—that it is the surest and most certain cure for disease known at the present day.

It is the very best of all spring medicines, and should be taken now by all who are weak, nervous and run down, to strengthen the nerves and invigorate the blood.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that this medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by any one at any time free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

LITTLE JIM, THE PEDDLER.

Jim is a quaint little fellow who lives in the northwestern part of the city. He is a peddler by force of circumstances, and every day he trudges down town with a basket over his arm, which contains soap, gum and matches. He is not yet 10 years of age, and is pale and puny. But he always greets one with a pleasant smile, and has a quiet, insinuating manner. He is well-known at some of the offices and other places where he makes periodical calls. Most people like Jim, although there are places where he meets only with cold rebuffs. He has made a friend or two where his story is known, but probably the one who takes the greatest interest in him is a teacher.

For nearly a year Jim has been the breadwinner of the family. His father has been in poor health during all that time and unable to work at his trade. At intervals he gets a light job, but then he only earns enough to pay the rent, and when there are four mouths to fill, somebody must work to fill them. So the burden has fallen on little Jim. He doesn't regard it as a hardship, although most boys of his years think of nothing but pleasure, and spend their days in enjoyment. On the other hand, he seems to be proud that he can be of so much service, and while he never hesitates to acknowledge his share in the domestic economy, he frequently refers to the struggles of life and the difficulty his mother has in making ends meet in a manner that makes one smile.

His friend, the teacher, took kindly to him the first time they met. It was a cold day last winter, and he was scantily clothed. Blue, pinched, and his teeth chattering, he smiled when he came up to her and asked her if she would buy some soap. He had only three cakes left. She bought out his stock, and told him to come back the next day. But before letting him go she had learned something of his struggles and hardships. In the meantime she called upon her friends and procured a quantity of warm underwear, which she did up in a big bundle and had ready for him.

When he returned the following day he looked rather bashful as she held out her hand to him.

"My mamma said that it was awful mean of me to charge you ten cents for each of the three cakes," he said. 'I should only have charged you a quarter. I have the five cents now and my mamma told me to give it back," and he put his hand in his pocket to draw it out.

"Never mind that, Jim," she said; "the change is yours."

It was one of the coldest days of the year. The wind was blowing hard, the snow was drifting and piling up in wreaths along the streets. The teacher looked down at the little fellow to whom a smile seemed a second nature. Notwithstanding his hard lot, he appeared to be perfectly content. He enjoyed the warmth of the room, and as it thawed him out, it made him smile the more.

"I have a parcel for you, Jim, and I want you to take it home," said the teacher, and then she handed it to him. Jim stared at it critically and his eyes brightened.

"It is something to keep you warm," the teacher said again.

"Gosh, that's the very thing mamma's been wantin' to give me, but she couldn't afford to," said Jim, taking the bundle and feeling its weight.

"Here's a car ticket for you, too, Jim," and as she handed it to him, he almost danced.

"Gosh, I've never been in a car in my life," he said, and he departed under his heavy load with a heart as light as a feather.

Not long ago the teacher gave him a book of juvenile stories, and among them was "Robinson Crusoe."

"O, won't my sister be glad of this," he said. "You know she's awful fond of stories, but we've never been able to get her a book. She heard the story of Robinson Crusoe one time and she's been always wantin' mamma to read it to her. Now won't mamma read it—well!"

One day the teacher asked him how he was getting along.

"O, I can't complain. Mamma has a little trouble in making ends meet, but we manage to get along. Life is a continual struggle you know," and Jim tried to look grave, but he couldn't.—Detroit Free Press.

A KISS MADE HIS FORTUNE.

A kiss once played an important part in the life of the famous Belgian statesman, Frére-Orban, who is now seriously ill at his country place. In his youth the future minister was a poor student, bearing the simple name of Frére. He had great difficulty in earning money enough to keep him at the university till he was ready to pass examination in the department of law.

The young man fell in love with a Fraulein Orban, the daughter of a wealthy and aristocratic family, who opposed his suit.

"If you pass your examination well to-morrow," said Fraulein Orban on the eve of the trial to her lover, "come to the theatre and to the box in which I shall be sitting with my parents."

"Will they allow me?" asked the student.

"I shall see to that," was the determined young woman's reply.

Frére was successful and entered the box in the evening happy, but frightened. The pretty girl, as soon as he had crossed the threshold, stood up, rushed toward him before a word was spoken, and kissed him heartily on the lips. The astonished parents were soon informed of the significance of the kiss by the daughter. As many other people had seen the young girl's action, the parents decided to make the best of it and accepted young Frére as a son-in-law on condition that he add Orban to his name. This he did as a matter of course and made it famous.—New York Tribune.

GOOD SERVICE.—A well known bishop tells a story of a clerk at a village church who deliberately took half a crown out of the plate as he brought it up to the communion table, and slipped it into his pocket.

"I saw him take it," said the bishop, "and intended to charge him with it at the end of the service, but, carried away by the sublimity of the service, I forgot all about it. Next day I remembered and spoke about it.

"'Oh, sir,' said the old clerk, 'never you worry about that; that half-crown has done good service for many years. I keep it to put down first; and then the gentry, seeing a poor man like me put 2s. 6d. in the plate, can't for shame give less.'"—Tit-Bits.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE.—Telephone mistakes have their serious side. A man who wished to communicate with a gentleman named Williams looked in the telephone directory and then called up number "south". Presently, says the Chicago Record, there came through the receiver a soft feminine "Hello," and he said, "Who is that?"

"This is Mrs. Williams."

"Have you any idea where your husband is?"

He couldn't understand why she rung off so sharply until he looked in the book again and discovered that he had called up the residence of a prominent widow.

While on the surface extravagant honoring of the dead seems a worthy expense, looking at it deeper it is seen to be most inappropriate, a hollow mockery. It is really bravado, an attempt to pass the limitations set to man's brief life and parade pomp in the face of inevitable doom, as if the power of money could reach beyond the confines of the graves. Such funeral expense is therefore as unbecoming as it is burdensome, for in the last resting place all are equal, Lazarus and Dives alike returning to a handful of orginal dust.—Waterbury American.

The virtues made of necessity always appear as if the material couldn't have been very abundant.—Puck.

FANCY DRESS STUFFS.

More of beauty each day. We've brought you the richest pickings from the looms of France, Germany, America—experts say we've chosen well. In short, we've excluded the unworthy—you may pick from the best.

The great interest centers in the prices.

Be tariff changes good or bad, they've set away all former values.

You can see it plainest in goods you know—

Henriettas that were 75c	now 50c yard.
Serges that have been 50c	now 37½c yard.
Serges that have been 75c	now 50c yard.

And the novelty goods are under the same spell.

Of the stuffs they're sceable; too many to allow of more than hints.

The color trend for spring has followed the popular longing for a shade darker than we've had.

Dress Stuffs, rear of main store.

Separate Skirts for Women, made of Black Crepon, 4½ yards wide, lined throughout. Price $3.50.

The blue hills rise in stately strength,
Streams ripple soft below,
As on those long-gone Sabbath days,
One hundred years ago.

When in these crumbling, roofless walls,
Where birds flit to and fro,
The Quaker fathers worshipped God
One hundred years ago.

And word of truth, or praise, or prayer,
In measured tone, and slow,
Was spoken as the Spirit moved
One hundred years ago.

Here many a calm and saintly brow
Seemed lit by Heaven's own glow,
And caught the promised peace of God
One hundred years ago.

Perhaps just here the sunshine fell
On golden heads below,
Where children lifted patient eyes
One hundred years ago.

Here youths and maidens primly sat
In silent, decorous row,
But, as to-day, Love stole his glance
One hundred years ago.

In ancient graves, where trailing vines
And tender wild flowers grow,
Sleep those whose footsteps thither turned
One hundred years ago.

Long have these altar fires been cold,
And only ruins show
The temple holy to the Lord
One hundred years ago.

But true and simple faith abides,
Though centuries onward flow—
The fathers did not build in vain
Who reared this modest forest fane
One hundred years ago.

—Lucy Randolph Fleming, in Harper's Bazar.

THEIR PICNIC.

People who knew anything, said that when Harlow Graham married that "madcap little piece," Laura Catesford, that their friends would have to take care of them for the rest of their lives.

According to public opinion, Laura was a giddy, idle, fun-loving girl, who knew nothing of taking care of a house, or a husband either; and Harlow—well, he hadn't wit enough to earn his salt, much less porridge for two. Pretty housekeeping there would be with such a pair at the head! Besides, Laura was a spendthrift, just as her father had been before her.

Look how she had squandered the little he had left, in fine gowns to get married in, instead of investing it in something useful or putting it out at interest! And then the dear public washed its hands of the young couple altogether, and took up something else for charitable comment.

Laura and Harold Graham furnished up a little cottage and went to housekeeping. Their wedding presents made a very pretty show in the little parlor, and the bric-a-brac filled the bay window. It wasn't style, of course, but these were just a pair of real human people who had started out to picnic through life and were not bothered about style and conventionalities. If Mrs. Grundy had brought a campstool and sat down in front of their house, they would have asked the grim old dame in, and had a picnic with her. They were bound to have a good time in this world, and all the better because of their journey through it together.

Laura's dear friends were right. She was no housekeeper, and poor Harlow sat down to many an ill-cooked meal, while she was learning the chemical process by which the raw material was to be converted into delicious and nourishing food. He could not blame her mother, for she had died when Laura was a baby, but he had no inclination to blame anyone. They had agreed to picnic through life, and a picnic it was. Besides, he made errors in the counting room where he was employed that nearly cost him his situation, and they were both learning. Laura set before him one day a plate of biscuits.

"Made them all out of my own head, and had enough wood left to make another batch," she said merrily.

"Stone, you mean, sweetheart. They are just like the biscuits mother used to make," answered Harlow.

Laura threw one at him, and he remarked, facetiously, that it was the same one that Mrs. Noah saved from the ark.

There were more failures, and Laura sometimes shed a few tears of vexation in secret, and then there were more attempts, and at last success came to stay. The cooking was conquered, and Laura had won a graduate's laurels. She invited her friends to dinners and teas, which were highly praised, and old housekeepers asked for her recipes. It was a triumph of art, and Laura was proud of her success, as she had a right to be.

Now strange as it may seem, there is nothing so insipid as the dead level calm of happiness. Pain is healthful compared to the monotony of constant calm and sunshine, and Laura was beginning to yawn a little and feel bored now that everything was adjusted, and she was mistress of the situation. It seemed as if her life lacked the friction necessary to keep it from rusting.

But nothing disturbed the two married lovers, until one day Harold went home and told Laura he felt queer.

"Not going to be ill, I hope," she asked anxiously.

"No, but my head is dizzy."

"Been riding too much in the elevator?"

"Not more than usual. But I notice that when I am at the books the figures swim before my eyes."

"A determination of arithmetic to the brain."

"Perhaps. It's queer and disagreeable, though."

That was all the preparation she had when a week later Harold came in, groping his way.

"Laura! My God, I'm blind!"

He nearly fell into her extended arms. She led him to a chair, and taking another, sat down before him. Her face was white and her lips quivered.

"What is it, dear? Have you seen the doctor?"

"Yes, and he says—my girl, have you courage to hear it?"

"Yes, yes. Go on."

"That I will never see again. It is a clot—he called it some long Latin name—but oh, Laura, what is to become of us? We have nothing laid up yet, and I have done the last I ever can do, and—what will you do with a blind man on your hands?"

"We'll play blind man's buff, as we used to when we were children," she said, smothering a sob.

"Don't be frivolous, Laura."

"Harlow, you are in my hands now, and I think I can manage, if you will let me do it in my own way. First I shall take your place at the store."

"You cannot do the work."

"I can. And you can keep house. I shall expect warm meals at regular hours."

"A blind man's housekeeping?"

"Oh, you shall have an assistant."

"A servant? We cannot afford one."

"No, a dog."

"Laura!"

"Yes, dear—it will be ever so larky. Haven't we always envied the blind men who stood on corners with a dog to guide them?"

"And handorgans to grind, and a tin cup to carry." Harlow was positively laughing.

"I will carry the tin cup, dear, and fill it, too."

"Brave little girl. I thought my life was ended. Laura, can you bear it?"

"It will be a perfect picnic," she said, with tears running down her cheeks—but she managed to keep them out of her voice.

It was a perfect picnic in more ways than one. It always rains at picnics, and there was a rain of tears for this, but also an intermittent sunshine that soon dried them.

It was decided at the store, when Harlow's blindness was announced, that he was to have a vacation until such time as the firm saw fit to supply his place, and for the present his salary was to be continued.

That is what his misfortune did for a soulless corporation—drew them out to a deed of beautiful charity. Then friends came in to offer assistance, which so far was not needed. They came tearful and full of conventional sympathy, and went away wondering and rather piqued.

"Two children who do not appreciate the gravity of the situation," said one sympathizer with a sniff.

"Why, she talked about it as if sudden blindness was a real blessing," said another.

But no one saw how exquisitely pathetic the situation really was. The two "children," as they called them, clinging together to the wreck of their happiness, both willfully blind together to the awful realities of the situation, but keeping up their courage by a fiction in which they were the principal characters.

"What kind of a dog will you get?" Harlow asked suddenly on the second day of his affliction.

"It shall match the furniture," said Laura brightly.

"It must be small."

"Yes, and intelligent. You will enjoy training it, dearest."

"I shall tumble over it at first, and it will bite me."

"That will be part of the picnic."

They were getting used to the situation in this romantic way, and Laura had their lives planned out. She was to be the working member of the firm, and come home at night full of news for him, and they could still take long walks together on Sunday after church, and he was to have a guitar, and learn to play; she had always laughed him out of it, but now it would be his one resource.

"But what is there for me to do while you work, Laura?"

"Learn to wait, dear, like Milton in his blindness. 'They also serve who only stand and wait.'"

"Brave little woman," he said, when will it end?"

"Oh soon enough, dear; picnics never last long. We'll get so used to it we wouldn't have it different if we could."

Then she went upstairs and cried herself to sleep.

The next morning she was awakened by a joyous shout.

"Laura! The sun is shining! I can see. Thank God. I can see."

"Was it true. The clot had gone," the painless pain was ended. Like a man who has been once tried for his life and acquitted, it could never be done over again.

The doctor said such occasions were rare, but not unknown to medical science. Harlow Graham was as well as he ever was in his life.

"There won't be any more of that picnic," said Laura, almost regretfully, although it has been such an awful strain to live up to for twenty-four hours.

"No, thank heaven," said Harlow, "I won't have to keep house."

"And we won't need the dog."

"Well we haven't got him yet, so he's no great loss."

"Nor the tin cup."

"Yes, you can carry that, and we'll see how soon it will be full."

"That's a picnic," answered Laura, "it shall be our bank."—Detroit Free Press.

A GREAT WOLF'S CUNNING.

There came under my observation an incident that will illustrate Lobo as an aggressor of diabolical cunning. These wolves had at least one pursuit which was merely an amusement, and apparently not at all connected with their appetite for food; it was, as has already been intimated, stampeding and killing sheep. The sheep are usually kept in flocks of from one thousand to three thousand under one or more shepherds. At night they are gathered in the most sheltered place available, and a herdsman sleeps on each side of the flock to give additional protection. Sheep are such senseless creatures that they are liable to be stampeded at night by the veriest trifle, but they have deeply engrained in their nature one, and perhaps only one, strong weakness, viz., to follow their leader. And this the shepherds turn to good account, by putting half a dozen goats in the flock of sheep. The latter recognize the superior intelligence of their bearded cousins, and when a night alarm occurs they crowd around them, and usually are thus saved from a stampede. But it was not always so. One night, late in last November, two Perico shepherds were aroused by an onset of wolves. Their flocks huddled around the goats, which, being neither fools nor cowards, stood their ground and were bravely defiant; but alas for them, no common wolf was heading this invasion. Old Lobo, the weir-wolf, knew as well as the shepherds that the goats were the moral force of the flock, so, hastily running over the backs of the densely packed sheep, he fell on these leaders, slew them all in a few minutes, and soon had the luckless sheep stampeding in a thousand different directions.—From "The King of Currumpaw: A Wolf Story," by Ernest E. Thompson, in the November Scribner.

"SAND-BAG SOME OF THOSE JURYMEN."

Some good stories are going the rounds concerning Sir Matthew Begbie, chief justice of British Columbia, who died the other day. Here is one of them: In 1883 a man was charged in Victoria with having killed another man with a sand-bag, and in the face of the judge's summing up the jury brought in a verdict of "Not guilty." This annoyed the chief justice, who at once said:—

"Gentlemen of the jury, mind, that is your verdict, not mine. On your conscience will rest the stigma of returning such a disgraceful verdict. Many repetitions of such conduct as yours will make trial by jury a horrible farce, and the city of Victoria a nest of immorality and crime. Go, I have nothing more to say to you."

And then, turning to the prisoner, the chief justice added: "You are discharged. Go and sand-bag some of those jurymen; they deserve it!"—Westminster Gazette.

A Greenfield woman has sued another for $130, due for the services of the former's daughter for 65 weeks prior to her death.

One hundred and fifty shirt makers at Rutland, Vt., struck Tuesday for an increase of pay. About 450 operators are affected.

A mill and elevator at Bethalto, Ill., the latter containing 4000 bushels of wheat, were burned last Saturday, the fire starting from an explosion of flour dust.

The Prohibitionists of Fort Dodge, Ia., propose to clear the town of saloons by buying church property within 300 feet of them and so make the proprietors violate a state law.

Mrs. Ballington Booth of the Salvation Army was granted a minister's license by Judge Ferris at Cincinnati Wednesday, the document giving her the right to officiate at weddings.

Aalsey Greene Bixby, one of the freshman class at Amherst College, died at his home at East Woodstock, Ct., Sunday of scarlet fever, having gone home from college a week before sick with the disease.

A Winsted, Ct., young man who ten days before had deserted his intended bride at the altar, thought better of the matter after she had attached all of his property, and returned last Friday night and married her.

Hartford is to have a deaconess, Miss Margretta Churchwell of Brooklyn, N. Y., a licensed deaconess of the Methodist Episcopal church, having accepted a call to the South Park Methodist church of the former city, to commence her duties at once.

Sneak thieves obtained about $1000 from the New Haven post office last Saturday noon. Two men engaged the attention of the two clerks on duty at the time, while another walked behind the counter and helped himself to a tin box containing the money.

The mayor of Asbury Park, N. J., has sued Rev. J. Hoffman Batten, pastor of the M. E. church, for libel, the latter having stated in a religious paper that the mayor's most intimate friend was a champagne bottle, and that he loved a rum banquet better than anything else in the world.

Martin J. Crowe was arrested at Malden Sunday afternoon charged with setting fire to the house of his sister, who with her children had a narrow escape from death in the burning building, the mother having been awakened when nearly suffocated with smoke by the crying of a child.

The large iron steamer Venetian of the Furness line stranded on a ledge near Boston last Saturday because the buoy making the channel had been moved from its position by the ice. The steamer broke in two when the tide went out, and her large and valuable cargo was almost a complete loss.

A discharged clerk came into the office of a large mill at Valleyfield, P. Q., last Friday night when the paymaster and clerks were making up the pay roll, and grabbing a revolver from a desk began to shoot, killing two and badly wounding another. The paymaster saved his life and the money by taking the cash into the vault and closing the door.

There were two collapses of buildings in New York last Friday, one of a six-story structure which had been condemned and was being torn down, and the other of a four-tenement house being erected, poor materials being the cause in this case. Three were killed and a dozen injured in the former, and eight workmen being buried in the latter, several of whom were fatally injured.

A well-to-do German farmer and his wife near Toledo, O., were horribly tortured by masked men Sunday night in extorting from them the whereabouts of their money, concealed in the house. Both were terribly burned over a red-hot stove before they would tell where their money, about $5000, was, but they finally gave in, after having the flesh nearly roasted off their legs.

The Washington express on the Philadelphia and Reading road was wrecked at Bayonne, N. J., last Friday night. A freight train going in the same direction had broken apart, and came together again just as the express came along; one of the freight cars was thrown across the track of the express, which had no time to stop. The engineer and fireman of the express were killed, and several passengers slightly injured.

Toronto had another big fire Sunday morning, the third in less than two months, the loss this time being over a million dollars. The city has no steamers for fire protection, depending on hydrants for its water, which is pumped, and the pressure has not been sufficient to throw a stream into the fourth story windows. The conservative element had such a grip on the city government that no expenditures for better fire protection can be made.

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident near the union passenger station at Boston Wednesday. As a train of eight coaches, heavily loaded with passengers, was crossing the draw over the Charles river when an axle on one of the driving wheels of the locomotive broke, the driving rods were bent double, and one of the driving wheels was broken in several pieces and fell in the river. The engineer applied the air brakes and stopped the train before it had gone 25 feet. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but not a wheel of the cars left the track.

The claim of a Springfield woman to a large and valuable tract of land in that city, on the ground that it had been "squatted" on years ago while belonging to her father, turns out to be of no value, the records showing that the land which was deeded to the woman's father having been deeded back again to the man from whom he got it. The land was then deeded to another person, and by him to still another; then the deed was stolen before payment had been made, and an attempt was made to defraud the rightful owner out of his property, being baffled by the courts.

A terrible accident occurred on the Interoceanic railway of Mexico last week Thursday. A special train of ten cars was crowded with pilgrims, many of them women and children; the engineer had been ordered to run slow, but when out of the city started at a rapid speed, not even slowing up at the most dangerous part of the road, a sharp curve with a high wall on one side and a deep ravine on the other, where all trains were in the habit of running slowly. Here the cars left the track and were all completely shattered and splintered. The scene was a horrible one, heads and limbs being torn from bodies and scattered about. About 70 were killed, and many more seriously injured.

PALMER NEWS.

DEATH BY LAUDANUM.

But Whether a Suicide or Not, is a Question.

Frank Stumpf, about 35, proprietor of the Palmer Cash Tea Store in the Cross block on Main street, committed suicide Monday night by taking laudanum. Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf had rooms in the upper part of a two-tenement house on the west end of Park street owned by J. M. Converse, but Mrs. Stumpf had not been there since last Friday night, having been attacked by the grippe and gone to the home of her brother, W. B. Davis, opposite the Advent chapel on the same street. The rooms under those occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf are occupied by the Misses Stebbins and Miss Beebe, employed in the hat shop, one of whom was at home sick. About 5 o'clock Monday afternoon groans were heard from the room above, which continued until they became loud and frequent. About 6.30 the Misses Stebbins became alarmed and sent for S. W. Stanchfield, who lives next door. He came and went to Mr. Stumpf's room, finding Mr. Stumpf on the bed in an unconscious condition, from which he could not be aroused. Drs. Amerige and Donner were summoned, but at once declared that the man was beyond help, and Medical Examiner Holbrook was sent for, but before he arrived, a little after 8 o'clock, Mr. Stumpf was dead. On the table was found a glass with laudanum in the bottom, showing the means he had taken to end his life. A note to his wife was found, stating that he was discouraged, had been disappointed in business matters, and that it would soon be over.

There seems to be a theory that overwork and worry over business matters were the cause for this act. Domestic troubles have been assigned by some as the cause, but this is emphatically protested against by Mrs. Stumpf. Thursday of last week Mrs. Stumpf was taken ill, and went to see her sister at Ware, who is a physician. She returned Friday morning and remained in her room alone the rest of the day. In the evening she concluded that she was growing worse, and knowing that Mr. Stumpf's business would keep him at the store the next day decided not to run the risk of having to stay alone, and so went to her brother's house. There Mr. Stumpf saw her every day. Monday morning he brought her fruit, and after telling her that he was going to Springfield on business kissed her good-by. He complained of a severe headache, but said that he should be back on the noon train. He did not return until 1.50 p. m., when he went to the store, where he was seen until about 5, then going to his rooms.

Mr. Stumpf has been in business here about two years, and has been reasonably successful. Since the first of January, however, business has been very dull and collections poor. He was desirous of extending his business, it is said, and went to Springfield to try and borrow money for that purpose, but did not get it, this being the disappointment spoken of in the letter to his wife. In addition to this he had worked hard all through the winter, and had become pretty well tired out. It is thought that the physical strain, coupled with disappointment at the failure to get the money, affected his mind and led him to take his life in a fit of despondency.

Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf were married about six years ago, and their domestic relations have always been pleasant, Mr. Stumpf being a man who thought a great deal of his home. That they have not always thought alike Mrs. Stumpf does not deny, though she thinks they have had as few petty quarrels as the average married couple.

The medical examiner thought an inquest had better be held, and one was commenced Wednesday by Judge Robinson of the district court, Misses Hattie and Addie Stebbins, Miss Ruth Beebe, S. W. and Guy C. Stanchfield being examined. There was considerable evidence that Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf had quarrelled, and Friday night she was seen to come hastily out of the house, bareheaded, and go to her brother's, replying to some inaudible remark of her husband, "I won't." Miss Addie Stebbins, who was ill in the room beneath that occupied by the Stumpfs, testified that Mr. Stumpf left the house in the morning, returning about three in the afternoon, but soon went out again and did not return until about 5 o'clock. Edward Goodes testified that about 4 o'clock he saw Mr. Stumpf enter his store. About 5.30 Miss Stebbins heard Stumpf groaning, the noise increasing as the time passed. Her sister and Miss Beebe arrived soon after six, and the latter started for the store to find Mrs. Stumpf. When she left the house she looked up at the window of the Stumpfs' room and there was no light there; returning in a few minutes there was a bright light there. A few minutes later Mr. Stanchfield found Stumpf unconscious. Other testimony will be taken.

There are many theories regarding the death of Frank S. Stumpf, and as usual sensationalists are looking for evidence of foul play. They will stick to this theory as long as it is possible to do so, and advance some arguments to back it which are not entirely impossible. Their first argument against Stumpf's having committed suicide is that he apparently had no motive for such an act. Although it is said that his domestic relations were not entirely pleasant, there is nothing to show that he had any desire to escape from them. After his wife had gone to her brother's home it is shown that Stumpf visited her several times, and displayed the utmost affection. The examination made of his business affairs indicates that he had nothing in that direction to worry about. If trade was dull it was not to be wondered at, as this is a dull time of year with all merchants. Most of his bills were paid, and there seems to have been no need of financial assistance. It is said that Stumpf went to Springfield on the day of his death to raise money for some purpose, but this has not been proven, and many refuse to believe it. Mr. L. J. Stumpf, brother of the deceased, says that all Stumpf's brothers are in a position to lend financial aid if necessary, and would have been pleased to do so. In the face of this statement it seems inconceivable that Stumpf would try to borrow money from strangers, or if he did have been so discouraged at his failure to do so as to take his own life. His brother also states that Stumpf was a man of cheerful disposition, who always looked for the bright side of everything, and usually found it. Only a few hours before his death he talked about his business to a friend, and stated that he was more than satisfied with its condition. He showed no indication of illness, or of being mentally unbalanced. To the theorists the letter left by Stumpf to his wife proves nothing, as it has not been shown that he wrote the letter. Another fact which is looked upon with suspicion is the light in Stumpf's room. One of the witnesses is sure that at about 6.15 that evening the room was in darkness, while a few moments later there was a light. Only a few moments later a neighbor found Stumpf unconscious, and all efforts to rouse him failed. It is argued that a man in this condition could not well have obtained a light. The fact that no bottle containing poison was found in the rooms is also looked upon with suspicion. If Stumpf intended taking his own life, why should he take pains to secrete the bottle which had contained the poison? The evidence does not show that it would have been a difficult matter for some person to have entered the rooms during Stumpf's absence. Stumpf had not been feeling quite well in the morning, and as the evidence shows that he probably had no light at the time the poison was taken, it is thought he might have taken something without knowing just what it was. It is believed that if the poison was taken in this way, there must have been some bottle about the premises which would have shown indications of having contained it. If, however, the lamp was lighted by some person other than Stumpf, may not this person have removed any such evidence which might have been in the rooms? In view of the fact that such a theory has been advanced, there is a feeling of satisfaction that such a thorough investigation is being made. It is certain that none of these points will be overlooked, and the verdict when it is given will surely throw light on many points which at present do not seem quite clear.

THE A. P. A. SHOWS ITS HAND

About 150 attended the Republican caucus at the town house last evening. A special train carried up about 60 from this village, and about as many more came from Three Rivers by team and on foot. The caucus organized by choosing Judge George Robinson chairman and L. E. Chandler secretary. It was then voted to ballot for a nominee for selectman, and the result gave W. F. Fillmore of Three Rivers 8, John O. Hamilton 9, C. F. Grosvenor of Palmer 30, C. T. Brainerd of Palmer 73, and he was declared the choice of the caucus. It was then voted to nominate and choose the remaining officers from the floor, and for the second place on the ticket the names of C. F. Grosvenor, John O. Hamilton, G. M. Atkins and John F. Twiss were presented, resulting in the choice of Mr. Grosvenor without a dissenting voice. John O. Hamilton and W. F. Fillmore were named for third place, Mr. Hamilton being unanimously chosen. These assessors were then nominated: C. S. Ruggles of Three Rivers, O. W. Studley of Palmer, Frank Hamilton. W. F. Fillmore of Three Rivers was named for overseer of the poor, as was also H. T. Bishop of Thorndike, whose term expires this year. It was stated by the chairman of the board and also by ex-members, that it was more economical for the town and better in every way to keep in this place the men who had experience in the work of the board, and though Mr. Bishop has served acceptably for six years the voters declined to endorse him, and nominated Mr. Fillmore. For school committee for three years Rev. W. H. Hart and L. E. Moore were nominated, these being the members whose terms expire this year. Here the A. P. A. of Three Rivers, which has for some time been supposed to exist, showed its hand. The name of Mr. Hart having been presented first was first acted upon. A show of hands could not be counted accurately in the dim light of the hall, and a rising vote gave 52 against and 43 for him. The vote was doubted and a division of the house showed that his nomination was rejected. By consent of the house the matter was thrown open for debate, and W. A. Breckenridge, chairman of the school board, testified to Mr. Hart's good work and value as a member of board; Rev. F. E. Jenkins, pastor of the Congregational church at Palmer, spoke of his study of the school system of Palmer and of an extended experience in school matters before coming here, expressing the opinion that the man being considered was invaluable on the board, and one whom the town could not afford to lose; Dr. William Holbrook, L. E. Moore and H. E. W. Clark also attested his worth and the desirability of Mr. Hart's reelection; F. A. Upham of Three Rivers stated that perhaps the matter was somewhat misunderstood, that while all Three Rivers people knew Mr. Moore all did not know Mr. Hart, and preferred to vote for Mr. Moore first, then when Mr. Hart's name came up, as it undoubtedly would, "we will see what the result will be." Mr. Moore was then nominated without opposition, and a yes and no vote on Mr. Hart's name being somewhat uncertain a rising vote was taken, resulting in 60 for and 52 against him. In both of these votes against Mr. Hart the majority of the opposition came from Three Rivers, with a few from Palmer and Thorndike, and still less from Bondsville. The balance of the ticket was nominated without opposition, and is as follows: Collector of taxes, W. A. Weld; town clerk and treasurer, J. B. Shaw; board of health, Dr. William Holbrook of Palmer, Dr. H. A. Smith of Bondsville, Dr. H. M. Bliss of Three Rivers; constables, O. W. Studley, Horace Stimson, H. R. Paine, H. A. Northrop, G. H. Justin; auditors, S. H. Hellyar, A. E. Fitch.

C. E. Little has sold his milk route to J. H. Shaw.

Mrs. F. M. Eager has been spending the week in New York with her daughter, Mrs. Taylor.

The ladies of the Congregational church gave a social in the church parlors Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Charles DeCourcey has gone to a private hospital at New York to have an operation performed.

Norman W. Chandler of Palmer has been appointed assignee in the case of Thaddeus G. Carew of Monson, insolvent.

The annual meeting of the Young Men's Library association will be held in the library rooms next Monday evening at 7.15.

The Palmer W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The weekly prayer meeting of the Congregational church will be held this evening, having been put over from last evening.

E. D. Tufts of Wilbraham has opened a bicycle agency for the sale of Rambler machines in tie jewelry store of G. A. Moore.

Remember that the last chance to get registered for the coming town meeting will be at the court room in this village to-morrow, from 12 m. to 10 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, Jr., are spending the week with friends at New London. W. E. Reed is officiating for Mr. Higgins as janitor at the passenger station.

The Flynt Building and Construction Company has begun the foundations for a three-story pattern storage house at East Cambridge for the Blake pump works.

Rev. Addison P. Foster, D. D., of Boston, will preach in the Congregational church Sunday morning. In the evening the pastor will speak on "God and the Saloons."

The date of the closing of the spring term of the village and district schools has been changed from March 26th to April 2d, the same date on which the high school closes.

E. A. Buck & Co. have engaged as repairer in their bicycle department Alfred H. Stokes, who has for some time had charge of the repair department of the Keating Wheel Co.

The cemetery association will hold its annual meeting, adjourned from last Monday evening on account of the storm, in the district court room next Monday evening at 7.30.

Nine cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the board of health since February 8th, eight in Three Rivers and one in Thorndike. There are now three cases in Three Rivers.

At St. Thomas's Catholic church next Sunday morning mass will be at 10.30, with Sunday school at 3 and vespers at 7.30 p. m. Friday evening there will be the regular Lenten services.

There will be a meeting of the Palmer No-License League in the district court room next Monday evening at 7.30. All residents of precinct A who wish to join the league are requested to be present.

The Mount Bunyan Granite Company has erected a derrick beside the tracks of the New London Northern road at the Fay crossing south of the village, for convenience in loading cars with stone from its quarry.

A club composed of young men who have not yet reached their majority is among the things talked of, as there are many who would like to join the Palmer Club but are debarred from doing so by being under 21 years of age.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Palmer Club Wednesday evening four new members were elected, these making the membership 88 in a limit of 100. The night for the monthly meeting was changed from Wednesday to Friday.

Dr. O. P. Rolla, who was with Dr. C. W. Cross in his dental rooms last summer, will return again next Tuesday. Dr. Rolla has spent the winter at the Philadelphia Dental College, where he has made a special study of crown and bridge work.

At the Universalist church next Sunday morning there will be a Lenten sermon on "A Convenient Season." Tuesday evening there will be a conference of church members, and Thursday evening an address on "The Christian in the Church."

The chimney on the south front corner of the Odd Fellows' building has been taken down and rebuilt this week, the top not being of the right proportions. The chimney is of the swell top kind, and one side was drawn out considerably more than the other.

Rev. C. E. Tullar, of the New England Home for Little Wanderers, will speak in the Universalist church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. He will speak on the Work of the Home. Several children from the Home will assist him by singing. The service will be in charge of the Y. P. C. U. of the church, and all are invited.

The third of the farmers' institute, under the auspices of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society, will be held in the court room in Palmer next Tuesday, commencing at 10 a. m. H. J. Hale of South Glastonbury, Ct., who has a national reputation as a fruit raiser, will speak on "General Fruit Culture". The ladies are especially invited to be present.

Willie, the three-years-old son of N. L. Cleveland, was seriously burned with hot water last Saturday afternoon. A pail of boiling water had been set on the floor, when the little fellow backed against it and sat down on the edge, tipping over the pail and severely scalding himself along one side. The child had convulsions Sunday, but is now better and it is thought will recover.

A meeting of the members of the Baptist church is called for next Monday evening, the principal article in the warrant being to see if the church will extend a call to Rev. C. R. Minard to become its pastor. Mr. Minard supplied the pulpit last summer most acceptably, and has preached a number of times since he returned to his studies at Newton last fall, and there is little doubt but that the church will give him a unanimous call.

These civil cases were entered in the district court last Saturday: Edward Stanton of Warren against F. J. Wassum of Palmer; W. H. Stowe of Palmer against M. J. Kennedy of Boston; W. F. Fillmore, et al, against Margaret Sullivan, 10th of Palmer; Roswell Prescott against Morrill Prescott, both of Palmer. In the criminal court Monday L. E. Needham of Brimfield, charged with drunkenness, was placed on probation until the 30th of the month; on Tuesday David Desmarais of Hartford paid $5 for drunkenness, while JamesQuinn, in default of the same sum, was sent to the house of correction for 30 days.

A session of the probate court was held in Springfield Wednesday, and among the business transacted was the following: Administration granted in the estates of—Typhena A. Barlow, late of Palmer, William W. Leach, administrator; Sophronia Blanchard, late of Wilbraham, A. Jackson Blanchard administrator; Sabra F. Sherman, late of Brimfield, E. Augusta Sherman, administratrix. Wills approved of—Stephen J. Miller, late of Ludlow, Herbert E. Miller executor; Albert S. Warner, late of Ludlow, Henry A. Morrissey executor. Accounts rendered in the estates of—Edward P. Bliss, late of Ludlow; Eunice May and Ruth Inez Bates of Wilbraham.

The fourth entertainment in the course under the auspices of the high school scholars will be given in the Congregational church Tuesday evening by the Columbian Concert Company, composed of Wulf Fries, violoncelist, C. L. Staats, clarinet, Jessie Mabelle Downer, pianist, and Mrs. Jennie Patrick Walker, soprano. Wulf Fries and Mrs. Jennie Patrick Walker are too well known as artists of unquestioned ability to need any word of praise in these columns, and these artists alone should assure the attendance of a large audience; Mr. Staats and Miss Downer, although not so well known, come with the highest of recommendations, and attendants at the entertainment cannot fail to appreciate the following programme:

Trio, op. 38, Minuet and Allegro.....Beethoven
Mr. Fries, Mr. Staats and Miss Downer.
Clarinet Solo, "Pre aux Clercs".....Paradis
Mr. Staats.
Soprano Solo, "Should He Upbraid".....Bishop
Mrs. Walker.
'Cello Solo, "Fantasie Polaise".....Servais
Mr. Fries.

A No-License Sermon by Rev. W. H. Hart, of St. Thomas's Catholic Church.

Last Sunday morning, taking for his text Matt. iv : 8-9, which is read in the Gospel of the first Sunday of Lent, after showing how appropriately the words of the text applied to those unfortunate victims of drink who, for the temporary pleasure that liquor gives must pay their tribute of adoration to the evil one, Rev. Father Hart made a most earnest plea in favor of no-license. Among other things the reverend gentleman said:—

"In order that we may have a clear idea of the question that confronts us at the coming annual meeting as to what policy the town should adopt with reference to the liquor question, it should be fully understood, our Prohibitionist friends to the contrary notwithstanding, that the regulation of the sale of liquor is not a matter of principle, but purely and simply a question of methods. The selling of liquor is not in itself sinful, nor is it necessarily evil. When, however, in any community the harm resulting from the abuse of intoxicating drink becomes so great as to be a menace to society, and necessitates the use of heroic measures, it then becomes the duty of all Christian men to insist that this abuse must cease. In my opinion this condition exists in the town of Palmer to-day. Before I give you my personal views on this subject, allow me to show what the Roman Catholic bishops, assembled in council at Baltimore, have declared about this same question. I will read you a rough but accurate translation of their decree:—

"'There is no doubt but that among the evils that especially afflict this land the abuse of intoxicating drink must be considered. This abuse is the constant source of sin, the fruitful cause of wretchedness. It has overwhelmed with direst ruin entire families, and dragged down to hell numberless souls. Since then this vice rages not a little, even among Catholics, it has become a cause of scandal to our non-Catholic brethren, and a great obstacle to the spread of our holy religion. Therefore both love of God and love of Country urges all Christians to labor earnestly for the extirpation of this evil pest. Let us hope that among the first to aid in the good work will be the priests of the church to whom God has given the duty of instructing with the word of life, and of inculcating good morals. Never let them cease to boldly cry out against drunkenness and its occasions. Let them remind the people committed to their charge of the words of the Apostle, the drunkard shall not enter the kingdom of heaven.' Let them remind those who think themselves strong enough to resist, that 'he who loves the danger shall perish in it.' Finally, we advise those of our people who are engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquor to seriously reflect on the many and grave dangers by which they are surrounded in a business not in itself illicit. Let them abandon as soon as they can the dangerous traffic, and embrace a more becoming way of making a living. Let them not sell drink to minors, nor to those whom they foresee will abuse it. Let them keep their places closed on the Lord's Day, nor permit at any time in their rooms cursing, swearing, or indecent talk. But if through the fault or cooperation of these liquor dealers, religion is brought into disrepute, and men are led to ruin, let them know that there is in Heaven an avenger, who will most certainly exact the gravest penalties.'

"You will no doubt remember that one year ago I told you that if I had the slightest reason to hope that the enforcement of a no-license vote would mean anything more than a mere farce, I would earnestly advocate that policy. Unfortunately, neither my own knowledge of the manner in which the law was executed in this town when no license was voted, nor the manner in which it was enforced in the neighboring towns, gave me any reason to hope for better results. It would be simply history repeating itself, and disgraceful history at that. It seemed to me better to 'bear the evils we had than to fly to others we knew not of.' I honestly believed that a license policy, bad as I knew it to be, was preferable to a reign of free rum, which no license, unless thoroughly enforced, practically means; therefore I favored the license system.

"This year conditions are different. I have been assured by men in whose honor and earnestness I have implicit confidence, that if the citizens declare for no-license their will is to be respected; the law will be rigorously enforced. With faith in this assurance, with an earnest wish to remove from our town the curse that drink has ever brought, and firmly believing that the evil can be eradicated if we only will it, I this year thoroughly and conscientiously advocate a trial of no-license. During the next two weeks weigh the matter well, for it is a question of the greatest moment. Should you doubt as to your duty, ask the opinion of that mother whose son was seen staggering though Palmer's streets; ask the wives who have so often suffered from the brutality of drunken husbands; ask your conscience what is your duty to your brethren, to your country, and to your God; then when the day comes to cast your vote, vote as honest, manly, intelligent men should, uninfluenced by aught save the wish of helping your neighbor, of honoring your God. I cannot better conclude than by quoting from a recent article in the Catholic Review. It constitutes a platform of principles on which you and I, and all good Catholics can firmly stand—a platform sound in politics, sound in sense, sound in morals:

"'Every Catholic ought to realize that he is morally bound, if he belongs to a political organization, to see that that organization should only put forward for appointment or election, decent, intelligent citizens, fit in all ways for the place, and that, whether he belongs to such organization or not, his duty requires that he should not support an unfit man. Whether the decrees of the Baltimore council are to be obeyed or ignored, the common sense of mankind has long ago declared that saloon-keepers, and their partners or abettors, are not, by the very circumstances of their calling and associations, the sort of men to guide or represent the public spirit, and that any political organization in which such persons are allowed to be dominant members, is by that very fact disqualified to expect the votes, or support in any way, of citizens who are Catholics in religion.'"

THREE RIVERS.

Miss Nettie Trickett and brother Elton are quite ill with scarlet fever.

The A. O. U. W. will hold its bi-monthly meeting next Tuesday evening.

Miss May Martin intends to spend next week at Medford visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Newell are spending a month's vacation at Clifton Springs, N. Y.

Miss Jennie Herran has gone to a hospital in New York, to have an abscess operated upon.

Another member has been added to Mr. Casey's music class in the person of Walter Sikes.

Rev. Addison P. Foster D. D. of Boston, will preach in the Union church next Sunday evening.

Miss May Johnson expects to go to Boston Monday, to attend the spring opening of millinery goods.

Arthur Grise has leased the block on Main street formerly known as the Desaulnier block, and will open a general provision store in the building.

As usual, Rev. Mr. Jenkins's temperance address at the Baptist church last Friday evening was well received, and undoubtedly the speaker presented weighty arguments in favor of a no-license system.

Last Tuesday evening Rev. Mr. Tenny of Lynn gave a very interesting illustrated temperance lecture. The pictures and chalk-talk were evidently intended to make a lasting impression on the young people, and Mr. Tenny's forceful words brought the license question home to every voter in an unusually strong manner.

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. Daniel Connor is seriously ill with the grippe.

Agent Childs and wife spent Saturday and Sunday in Boston and Lowell.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. C. L. Holden next Thursday afternoon.

Vincent O'Regan of Ware was the guest of his brother, W. O'Regan, Saturday.

Alphonse Grise of the Union House, who was thought to be convalescent, is seriously ill.

Mrs. Charles Armstrong was the guest of Mrs. George Armstrong of Springfield Thursday.

Lenten services will be observed in the Catholic churches at 7.30 every Friday evening.

Miss Mabel Ryther was the guest of Miss Viola Packard of Indian Orchard two days last week.

At the last meeting of the W. C. T. U., held at Mrs. Richard Russell's, four new names were received.

Miss Norton and Miss Helen Armstrong of Springfield were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armstrong last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sharratt were again called to Millbury Monday by the serious illness of Mrs. Sharratt's sister.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Fuller returned from Holyoke Saturday, where they went to attend the wedding of Mrs. Fuller's niece.

John Gegenheimer, who has been superintendent of the Boston Duck Co's. mills the past four years, has resigned his position.

Miss Edith Hobson, who has been spending her vacation with her parents here, returned to her studies in the training school at Springfield Saturday.

Miss Luella Day of Amherst died last Friday of pneumonia. She was well known here, and was a sister of the late Mrs. C. P. Carpenter of this place, who died two weeks ago from the grippe.

Thomas Russell, an employe in the cloth room, had the misfortune to lose $97 last Thursday morning. When he went to work in the morning he left his coat on a box with the money in it, and did not think of it again until night, when he went to look for it and found that it was gone. He had loaned a large sum to a man the first of the week, or his loss would probably have been much greater. No trace of the money has been found as yet.

THORNDIKE.

Miss Maggie Hartnett is visiting friends in Springfield.

A. M. Bond has gone into the furniture business again.

The whist club met Tuesday evening with Miss Annie Bishop.

Patrick Hurley has sold his farm to Andres Nelson of Worcester.

Deacon Foster had a sheep and lamb killed by dogs on Tuesday.

Miss Mary McFarlane is visiting at Millbury with Mrs. W. P. Bishop.

Several from this place will attend the concert at Palmer next Tuesday evening.

Several names were added to the list of voters on Wednesday afternoon by the registrars.

The Democratic caucus this evening will attract a large number of voters from this place.

Mossie, the shoe repairer, has left town and accepted a position at his trade in Amherst.

William Barber, who has been in the milk business for some time past, has retired from the same.

It is understood that the E. G. Murdock property on Commercial street will soon be sold at public auction.

The schools in the grammar school building were given a holiday Tuesday on account of a broken grate in the furnace.

J. W. Miller was called to Ludlow on Saturday by the death of his father, Stephen J., 79, who died at the latter place Thursday.

As town meeting draws near politics in all its branches is being discussed. The license question seems to be the predominating topic here.

Large strings of pickerel have been caught this week by local fishermen, the average weight of the fish being about 1¾ pounds each.

George Barber of New London, Ct., was in town this week, visiting his mother, Mrs. John Barber, who resides with his sister, Mrs. Frank Smith.

A. H. Gates, who purchased the Gates property at Palmer Center, is on from the West with his household goods, stock, etc., and will move on to the farm at once.

The pupils in the second primary school sent letters of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. John Fay on the death of their son, Frankie, who died this week, and also a floral tribute in the form of a star.

The following letters remain uncalled for at the post office: George L. Connor, Felix Mault, A. Fettier, James Larkin, F. H. Roscran, Mr. Bolduc, Mrs. Long, Mrs. Hannah Harrington, Miss Carrie Hayward, Miss Mary Murphy.

In the second primary school for the month ending March 1st, these scholars have been perfect in attendance: Kitty Holden and Rosanna Cadoratte; present every day, Florence Leroy, Cassie Sullivan, Freddie Bresette, Harold Rich, Arthur Bond.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fay have the sympathy of the entire community in the loss of their youngest son, Frankie, a bright little lad of six years, who died on Tuesday morning after an illness of only three or four days with brain fever. The funeral took place on Thursday from his parents' home on Church street.

The Foresters are to hold another grand concert and dance April 18th at Union Hall, and have secured Knowlton & Allen's Orchestra of Natick to furnish music. The Temple Male Quartett of Holyoke has also been engaged to assist at the concert. Mr. Dennis Lynch, well known in this place, is a member.

The announcement on Monday of the death of Mrs. John Heydt of Indian Orchard, formerly of this place, was a great surprise to her many friends here. The funeral was held at the latter place on Wednesday, and attended by many from this place. Mrs. Heydt leaves a husband and three children, who have the sympathy of many friends here.

Safe Blown Open.

H. T. Bishop's store, situated in the center of the village on Commercial street, was entered on Wednesday morning between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock by thieves. The safe, which was located in the southern corner of the store, was blown open and its contents scattered about the store. Entrance to the store was gained by prying open the front door. The combination knob of the safe was broken off, and a charge of dynamite inserted, wrecking the safe badly. There was but very little money in the safe, and the burglars got only about $3. There was valuable papers, receipts, and some old-fashioned shinplasters or scrip; the later was taken, besides a quantity of underclothing, rugs, silk handkerchiefs, tobacco, cigars and pipes. The burglars also helped themselves to a lunch consisting of eggs, cheese, etc. The explosion was heard by several residents of the street. Mr. Bishop looked out of his bedroom window and saw three men standing at the corner of the store, and afterward saw them go down Commercial street. The tools used by the men were taken from the tool house near the B. and A. depot, and consisted of a sledge, file and chisel. It is thought that this was perhaps the same gang which operated at Three Rivers last week. Officers are on the lookout for the guilty parties, but at this writing no clue has been discovered.

To William S. Whiting.

Dear Sir and Brother:—In the death of your wife Good Cheer Rebekah Lodge is called to mourn the loss of a member with whom in the days of her activity we rejoiced as we labored together for our common hopes and joys. Now that she rests from earthly activities we have the rich heritage of a blessed memory of the last with which she was heartily identified, and which is to us a source of comfort. To memory is added faith which looks beyond the present disaster and defeat to a blessed reunion never to be broken where divine light shall make plain that which we now fail to understand, and songs of triumph shall be sung in place of lamentations.

We tender you the earnest sympathy of the members of this lodge in your sad bereavement.

Your faithful and loving wife was our affectionate helpful sister. May the Divine Goodness keep bright and precious our memories of her while we walk the every duty here, and inspire us with hope and courage as in our turn we too approach the heavenly home to go no more out forever.

By vote of Good Cheer Lodge.

J. Preston Davis has presented to the museum a clergyman's almanac of 1751.

The nomination of Gilbert W. Farrington for postmaster was last Friday confirmed by the Senate.

The Dorcas Society of the Congregational church meets with Mrs. Elizabeth Coburn next Wednesday afternoon.

Harry Blanchard, who has been teaching at East Hill, has resigned. This makes two vacancies to be filled in the corps of teachers.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. David's dancing class gave a whist party to their friends. The lesson was given in the early part of the evening.

Elmer Pease, now employed at R. M. Reynolds's straw works, will succeed Jesse Carew as cream gatherer for the Monson Creamery.

Rev. Harry Blackford and family have had the grippe this week. Charles Merrick is out after being confined to the house for several days with grippe.

Day Spring lodge, F. and A. M., entertained Wolcott lodge of Stafford and Thomas lodge of Palmer Tuesday at a regular communication. A banquet was served.

Mrs. George M. Severy has returned from New Haven, Ct., where she went to visit her son. She was taken sick while there and was unable to return until now.

Albert Peterson and family, who are on their way to Stockholm, Sweeden, sailed on the New York, and had for fellow passengers Count and Countess Castellane.

Carl Blair gave a reception to the senior class of Monson Academy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos M. Gage last Friday evening, which was a very enjoyable affair.

The Ladies' Circle will serve a supper from 6 to 8 in the Universalist church Tuesday evening, which will be followed by a drama entitled, "Out of His Sphere," by the young people.

Prof. T. H. Treadway's third series of dancing lessons began Monday evening with a good sized class. Two new dances were taught, the tuxedo, a round dance, and the society quadrille.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Leary of Denver, Colorado, will be interested to know that they have a daughter. Mr. Leary was a Monson boy, who several years ago located in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. John Coy have moved to Palmer, where Mr. Coy has a position in Holden's mill. Their sons, Arthur and John S. R., will remain in town. The latter will continue to teach music.

Sheffield Reynolds, 85, of Enfield, Ct., died in Saratoga, N. Y., last week. Mr. Reynolds was formerly a resident of Monson. He was a brother of the late Joseph L. Reynolds, and uncle of R. M. and Theodore Reynolds.

Next Friday evening the senior class of Monson Academy will present the drama, "Enlisted for the War, or, Home Guards," at Memorial Hall. The proceeds are to be used for defraying the expenses of graduation.

The Central Massachusetts Electric Company have a new dynamo to run their Warren lights by, and beginning next Monday the Monson lights will be run by a separate machine. Better results will doubtless be obtained.

Giles Wordworth, whose death occurred at his home in Springfield Saturday, was a former resident of Monson, being employed by the Hampden Woolen Company for a number of years. He was a brother of Mrs. Emily J. Green of this place.

Miss McNamara's class in physical culture has begun on its second course of 10 lessons. The class is not as large as before, thus greater opportunity is given for individual work. Miss McNamara is contemplating forming an afternoon class, and would give private lesson if desired.

The evening whist club met with Miss Effie Aldrich last Friday evening and the following officers were chosen: President, Miss Effie Aldrich; secretary, Miss Alice Crossman. A committee of three was chosen to draw up rules and regulations. The club meets this evening with Miss Crossman at the Cushman House.

The Democratic town committee is composed of the following persons: Nelson A. Bugbee, Joseph F. Coyle, Nicholas P. Hanley, Herbert Thompson, Herbert M. Smith, Omar E. Bradway, David P. Maney. They have organized as follows: Chairman, Omar E. Bradway; clerk, Nelson A. Bugbee; treasurer, Joseph F. Coyle.

Mrs. Amos Anderson has donated to the museum at Flynt Park an old book of poems well worth seeing, also a bonnet worn by Kasper Der Kasbwian as a protection from the sun, in crossing the desert from Armenia to Constantinople. He came to the United States and was a student at Monson Academy and afterward entered the theological seminary in Hartford.

Monson members of the Palmer Agricultural Society are endeavoring to bring about guaranteed purses for the exibition of horses in their respective classes for the next annual fair, and the citizens will be called upon to contribute to this worthy object. It is hoped that there will be a Monson day, and that the large number of Monson people who have formerly attended the Stafford fair will this year go to Palmer.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society gave a social in the Methodist vestry Wednesday evening, and were assisted in their entertainment by J. A. Holt with a phonograph. The "Night Alarm," by Holden's Military band, "Casey taking the Census," by Russell Hastings, the "Laughing song" by G. W. Johnson, and a piccolo solo by George Schiveinfest were among the selections which gave great delight to the audience.

Rev. Arthur J. Benedict, a foreign traveler, will give a stereopticon lecture in the Congregational church Monday evening under the auspices of the Junior Christian Endeavor. The views will consist of pictures of European travel and the Paris Exposition, supplemented by views of the Chicago Exposition and Cleveland convention. This will give a particularly good opportunity for comparing the two greatest exhibitions of the world.

Jeremiah Dineen, 81, died at his home in South Monson early Sunday morning of pneumonia, after a short illness. Mr. Dineen was born in Ireland, and was one of the first Irish settlers in this town, coming here over forty years ago. He was twice married, and survived both wives. He leaves three children, Maggie, John and Timothy, the daughter and one son living at home. The other son is married, and lives near. The funeral took place at St. Patrick's church Tuesday morning, and the burial was at Ware.

Meetings will be held in the Congregational church from Tuesday to Friday evenings, inclusive. Mr. Gillette and Mr. Norris, associate pastors of the Fourth church in Hartford, Ct., will assist in the services. Mr. Norris is a graduate of Amherst College, and has done successful work in Minneapolis in connection with Mr. Torrey, the president of Mr. Moody's Chicago school. Mr. Gillette has been heard here of late very acceptably. Prof. Newhall of Wilbraham Academy will preach Thursday evening on "The New Commandment."

A meeting looking toward the formation of a historical society was held in Memorial Hall Wednesday evening. Dr. G. E. Fuller was chosen chairman pro tem, and Rev. Harry Blackford secretary pro tem. After several informal speeches had been made and the end and aim of such a society talked over, a committee of five was chosen to report at a meeting to be held March 20th, and it is hoped that all interested in organizing such a society will be present. The following committee was chosen: A. D. Norcross, E. F. Morris, Rev. F. S. Hatch, Dr. G. E. Fuller, G. H. Newton.

The body of Mrs. Adriana S. Hammond of Northampton was brought to Monson Tuesday for burial in the Center cemetery. Mrs. Hammond was the widow of Rev. Charles Hamumond, D. D., principal of the Monson Academy for twenty-five years, and whose death occured in 1878. Mrs. Hammond had been an invalid for many years, and removed from here soon after her husband's death. It was during the principalship of Prof. Dana M. Dustan, now of Marion, that the Academy trustees purchased the house on High street long owned by the Hammonds, and after enlarging and remodeling it, fitted it up as a home for the teachers and out-of-town scholars. It is known as Hammond Hall.

Mrs. Nancy Bates, widow of Levi C. Bates, whose death occurred two weeks ago tomorrow, died at 6.30 yesterday morning at the age of 73. Mrs. Bates was the daughter of Rufus and Phœbe Stebbins, and was born on the Daniel Leonard farm in this town, where her life was spent. She was married in October 1842, and in 1892 the couple celebrated their golden wedding. Mrs. Bates lost the sight of one eye about a year ago, and her health has been more or less poor since that time. She was taken sick with pneumonia the morning her husband died, and there was little hope of her recovery from the first. The funeral will take place at 2.30 to-morrow afternoon, Rev. William H. Marble officiating. The burial will be at the Center cemetery.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist church was held Monday evening in the vestry. Presiding Elder Thorndike of the Springfield district complimented the church upon the condition in which he found their affairs, and congratulated them upon their business-like system of doing things. Excellent reports were given of the various societies connected with the church, including the missionary societies, Y. P. S. C. E, Sunday school and Junior Epworth League. The trustees reported that $2200 had been paid on the parsonage, leaving a debt of $700. The present board of stewards and trustees was reelected, with Frank M. King to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Levi C. Bates. The conference was in every way a harmonious one, and it was unanimously voted to request the return of Rev. William H. Marble for another year. Mr. Marble has been pastor of the church three years, and his retention will be very satisfactory to the people in his church and the entire community. The church attendance has increased considerably during his pastorate. The church has lost by death five valuable members during the year.

GLENDALE.

Austin Davis, a well known citizen of this place, is seriously ill, and fears are entertained that he will not recover.

The ladies of the M. E. church will give an oyster supper in the vestry of the church next Tuesday evening. After the supper an entertainment will be given, consisting of music and recitations.

HOLLAND.

The old Uriah P. Marcy homestead, owned by Charles Back, was burned last Monday night, with the horse barn. Mr. Back removed his family to Florence some time ago, but a portion of the furniture was stored in the house here. He had gone there Monday on business, and was sleeping in the house at the time of the fire. Mr. Back thinks he would certainly have perished in the flames had he not been aroused by the neighbors, who first discovered the blaze. It is supposed that the fire caught from the chimney. The total loss is estimated at about $1500, partially covered by insurance.

WEST WARREN.

Miss Jennie M. Barton of Millbury spent last Wednesday in town.

Presiding Elder E. R. Thorndike preached in the M. E. church last Sunday evening.

The Junior Epworth League held a social in the vestry of the M. E. church Wednesday, from 5 to 8.30

Rev. Father Wrenn is still unable to be out. A Polish priest took charge of the service last Sunday.

Leon Crouch, while working at the wood pile last Saturday, chopped the end of his thumb nearly off. Dr. Leach dressed the wound.

WALES.

Several cases of measles are reported in town.

Isaiah Hiscock has been confined to his home several days with the grippe.

A turkey supper was given in the vestry of the Methodist church last Friday evening

H. A. McFarland and wife were called to Sturbridge Tuesday, to attend the funeral of Orril Streeter.

Rev. H. P. Smith was called home last Friday by the severe illness of his wife, who has been suffering from the grippe. She is now recovering, but he will remain at home the rest of the week.

It has since been learned that the young man who fell through the window last week while in a fit, and so severely cut his arm, is an excessive cigarette smoker. It is thought poison in his system is what caused the fit.

Petitions are being circulated for a railroad station at the old Cooley crossing, for the accommodation of the people of Brimfield, Wales, and Holland, and for a new road through the Hollow, to connect with the Palmer road. The present road is in a very poor condition and for several years has been unfit for travel. It is now proposed that a new one be laid either over the old one or near to it. The proposition is certainly a good one.

There are five boys in town who have been doing considerable damage lately. Last Sunday they were seen entering a certain building. While they were in the building a rattle of glass was heard, and upon investigation it was found that several panes of glass were broken. A large pane of glass was also broken in the same building last Friday, and persons who saw the boys and identified them have given their names to the officers, who will be asked to issue warrants unless the boys settle at once for the damage done. This is a serious charge, as the statutes are very severe on such offenses.

BELCHERTOWN.

The Guild was entertained at the home of Miss Delia Stacy Tuesday evening.

The ladies of the Methodist church held a social and entertainment in the vestry of the church Wednesday evening.

About $30 was netted as a result of the poverty party held last Friday night. The money will be used for the benefit of the boy's brigade.

The body of Mrs. Jonas Holland was brought here Tuesday for burial. Mrs. Holland was the widow of the late Jonas Holland, and since the sale of the Holland property in this place, had made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holland of Chicago, Ill., where she died last Friday at the age of 80 years. The funeral was held at the chapel, Rev. V. L. Harrington officiating.

The members of E. J. Griggs post will give an entertainment in the town hall this evening for the benefit of the boys' brigade.

J. R. Gould's new block is rapidly approaching completion, and will be a handsome addition to the buildings of the town. The stores on the ground floor have already been engaged, and part of those on the second floor.

Town Meeting, Officers and Appropriations.

The annual town meeting was held Monday with the following results: Moderator, G. H. B. Greene; clerk, C. Lyman Worden; treasurer, Arthur Bridgman; selectmen and overseers of the poor, Nelson Randall, Myron Barton and Asa C. Smith; assessors, William Burnett, Guy C. Allen and Ansel C. Shaw; school committee for three years, M. A. Morse; auditor, William E. Bridgman; constables, L. W. Dillon, William Burnett, W. M. Goodell, John F. Austin and Alden Day; tax collector, William Burnett; almoners of Whiting Street fund, Mrs. Guy C. Allen, Mrs. Herbert Curtis; almoner of the Calvin Bridgman fund, William E. Bridgman. These appropriations were made for the ensuing year: For the support of schools, $4800; school books and supplies 200; transportation of scholars, 100, repair and furnishing schoolhouse, 200; town and pauper expenses, 2000; highways and bridges, part of money to be used for permanent improvement, 2348; concrete sidewalks, 500; to build one-half of an iron foot bridge across the river at Bondsville, 150; repair of burial grounds, 50; to paint almshouse, 150, total, 10,498. On the liquor question the vote was 146 to 127, in favor of license.

WARREN.

Mrs. Guilber and Miss Louise are visiting friends in Holyoke.

Twelve people united with the Congregational church last Sunday.

Rev. Harris Hale and wife left for Washington Monday, to be absent ten days.

The Literary club will meet with Mrs. Edward Fairbanks next Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Hendricks is very sick with pneumonia at the home of her daughters, Mrs. H. B. King.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Lincoln and daughter Florence returned last Saturday from their southern trip.

The drama, "Finnegan's Fortune", will be given Monday evening for the benefit of St. Anasthasin church.

Fred S. Keyes of New Mexico is visiting his brother, Charles D. Keyes, who has been ill for several months.

Mrs. Allen Day has returned from New York after an absence of most of the winter with her daughter, who resides there.

Fred Wood, formerly employed in the steam pump works, has moved to Hopedale, where he will work in a machine shop.

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society met in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon. A sum of money has been forwarded to Straighter's University, Louisiana, by the society.

The Lyceum League met in Library Hall Monday evening, and discussed this question: "Resolved, That there is no such thing as luck." The affirmative speakers were W. H. Warren and D. L. K. Hathaway, and the negative E. M. Switzer and H. P. Bliss.

James Daley, Jr., a coal dealer, was thrown from his wagon last Saturday afternoon near the mill at the lower village. The horse became frightened at a passing train and ran into a post. The wheel passed over Mr. Daley's right shoulder, fracturing the collar bone.

At the regular meeting of the Father Mathew Society last Sunday, the following officers were elected: President, James Mulcare; vice-president, Peter Lydon; recording secretary, W. F. Duncan, Jr.; financial secretary, James Cunningham, Jr.; treasurer, Patrick Mulcare; board of directors, Frank J. Thornton, George H. Sheridan, James Early, W. H. Lee, Daniel Nevins and Daniel Cavanaugh. The Society has at present a membership of 45, the largest since its organization.

Accused of Forgery

Philander B. Hall, who was formerly employed in this place, has been charged with forgery and obtaining goods under false pretenses. He was arranged before the grand jury in Boston this week to answer five charges made against him. Early in January he forged the name of D. E. Graves of this place on written orders and presented them to four jewelry firms in Boston. On these he obtained about $305 worth of jewelry, and as the goods were sold on memorandum it was not until the first of February that anything wrong was discovered. The case was put into the hands of the Boston police and the man was soon located in Natick. The case against him seems to be a strong one, as the writing on the orders corresponds to his writing, and the men in the stores where he appeared positively identify him. Hall has been before the grand jury on two before, but in each case the evidence was not sufficient for an indictment. D. E. Graves has been summoned to appear as a witness in the case.

BRIMFIELD.

The fiscal year ended last Monday, and the town officials are very busy preparing the annual report.

Mrs. Almira R. Moore, 63, died at her home at Foskit's Mills Sunday. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. W. K. Peirce officiating. The burial was in Wales.

Death of Frank E. Webster.

Frank E. Webster, 46, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston last Friday night, from malignant tumor. When he went there, about three weeks ago, the doctors thought it best not to perform an operation, but advised him to remain under treatment. On Friday he was not as well as usual, and in the evening while raising himself for a glass of water, died very suddenly. The body was brought home Saturday, and the funeral was held Monday afternoon, Rev. W. K. Peirce officiating. He leaves a mother, Mrs. Lyman Webster, and a brother, George A. Webster. The news of his death brought surprise and sadness to the community, and occasioned a general expression of sympathy for the bereaved mother and brother. Although his friends had received no definite encouragement regarding his recovery, it was expected that he would soon be able to return home; so that the suddenness of the blow caused it to fall with an additional shock. He was born in Brimfield September 2d, 1848, and had spent most of his life here, with the exception of a number of years when he was in the employ of the Shaw Manufacturing Company of Wales. Here he rendered faithful and efficient service, and was known as a young man of upright habits and integrity. During recent years he felt that his vocation lay at home, where he cared for his father in his last sickness, and devoted himself to the welfare of his mother and invalid brother. Mr. Webster possessed a retiring but kindly disposition, and his life was marked by the absence of self-seeking. He had simple and refined tastes, which afforded opportunities for enjoyment in his quiet life; he took pleasure in the cultivation of flowers and in making an attractive home; he was fond of nature and acquainted with many of her secrets; he was a lover of books and kept informed upon the topics of the day. Belonging to a musical family he was gifted with an accurate ear for music, and with the aid of his violin had often contributed to the enjoyment of the young folks in their festivities. Thoughtful for others, he was uncomplaining when illness came upon him, and even at the hospital ministered to the comfort of others. The life of Frank Webster in an unobtrusive way has left its impress of fidelity, integrity and unselfish devotion.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, March 6, 1895.

The Senate has, after a debate, adhered to the position it took without debate, and by vote of 24 to 9 has passed over the governor's veto the bill to remove the restrictions on the shad and alewife fishery in the Merrimac river. By much more, proportionately, than the requisite two-thirds majority, the House and Senate have set aside the opinions of the governor and have passed the bill. Last year his veto of a similar bill was strongly sustained by the House. It might seem as if the governor's prestige were waning, judging by this event alone, but it is not probable that this is the case. On the contrary, judging from the atmosphere of the state house and from the talk of the politicians, it is certain that he has greater prestige than he did a year ago and, unless appearances are very deceptive, he will receive a nomination in September with less uncertainty beforehand than was the case last fall. The people of the Merrimac valley are aggrieved against him and some threaten vengeance, but this fish business is a local matter, and though the veto has been overruled, yet the state at large probably cares very little for the matter.

On Friday afternoon the joint judiciary committee made report on the Sunday theatre matter, and they were unanimous for the petitioners. The law for the observance of the Lord's day is made to read:

"Whoever is present at a game, sport, play or public diversion, except a concert of sacred music, upon the Lord's day shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5 for each offence."

The following is added to the law:

"And the proprietor, manager or person in charge of such game, sport, play, dancing, public diversion or entertainment, other than such concert of sacred music, shall be punished by fine not less than $50 and not exceeding $500 for each offense."

Municiple authorities, also,

"Shall not grant a license for a concert of sacred music, nor for any such theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements or exhibitions of any description whatsoever to be held on the Lord's day. All such existing licenses are revoked."

The committee on state house have decided against both of the plans for changing the front of the state house, and in favor of the appointment of a commission of an architect, on engineer and a builder, to be appointed in 30 days from the passage of the act and to report within 60 days upon the condition of the state house. This will bring the matter before the Legislature in a practical shape.

Representative Jones of Melrose was before the committee on constitutional amendment Wednesday forenoon in behalf of his plan for a constitutional convention, arguing that there have been so many amendments that there is a great deal of dead wood in the constitution which ought to be pruned away by the draft of an entirely new document adopted by the people. But the committee reported the same afternoon against the proposition. In this they acted wisely, for a constitution grows. It is not really made, and any apparent making involves really a great deal of growth. The safest progress is that in which each proposition is submitted separately on its own weight in the form of an amendment, not when a mass of propositions, many of them new, are submitted together.

Another matter considered by the committee was the amendment to have legislative presiding officers elected directly by the people at large instead of by the members of the Senate and House respectively. This is a new proposition and involves a radical departure. It is one, two, upon which the people are not informed, because they are not brought into close contact, as a whole, with the parliamentary practices of the Legislature. But it is the truth that the legislative presiding officers are by far the most important in our system of government, more even than the governor. It is in their power to help or to hinder the popular will more than any other persons. They are closest to the people, and it is right that the people should have a voice in their election. Theoretically, the members of each branch are best abie to elect their presiding officers, but unscrupulous candidates use their great powers so freely to promote personal ambitions, regardless of the good of the state, that the theory fails utterly in practice. Men are elected to the chairs of the Senate and House who never could carry a state convention and be placed on a state ticket. If this amendment were adopted, bigger, broader, abler men, with at least a state reputation, would be elected and the people would be comparatively free from the blackmailing or flattering process by which some unworthy speakers have been elected and may be again. No reflection is made upon either of the present presiding officers, and that is one reason why the present is a favorable time to press the cuange.

One of the close and unsettled contests of the month is that over the bill to pay three-eighths of the liquor-license money into the county treasuries, in addition to the quarter which now goes into the state treasury. The vote was very close in the House, but the temperance people carried the day by a majority of two on substituting the bill for an adverse report, and by 88 to 74 on ordering it to a third reading. The friends of the bill argue that if the temptation of the license fees to help reduce taxes could be removed and so not act as a bribe to vote yes, then more places would vote no-license. On the other hand, it is argued that the cities and towns which have to pay the expense which is caused by drinking liquor (paupers, police and so on) ought to have the license money to help do it with. If the bill should be passed, the cities and towns would get only three-eighths of the license money, instead of three-fourths, as they do now, and the reduction would be a serious matter. The answer is made that liquor licenses ought never to be issued for the sake of the money.

A Splendid Chance.

Everybody who is weak, delicate or sickly wants to get well. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence. The wisest thing all suffering people can do is to write the Doctor, stating just how they feel, mentioning every symptom of which they complain, and he will answer the letter, explaining each symptom and describing the case so thoroughly that patients understand their complaint as well as though they had talked with the Doctor. He makes his explanations so clear that they cannot help but understand just what ails them, and he tells exactly what to do to get well. It saves a journey to the city and doctor's fees, and costs nothing. Dr. Greene is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He is the discoverer of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Thousands are being cured through his perfect system of letter correspondence. It has been proved successful.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—HAMPDEN ss. PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs at law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Lyman Dimock late of Palmer, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for probate, by Frances W. Dimock of said Palmer, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond:

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court to be held at Holyoke, in said county of Hampden, on the twentieth day of March, A. D. 1895, at nine o'clock the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper published in said Palmer, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, WILLIAM S. SHURTLEFF, Esquire, Judge of said court, this twenty-eighth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Peep into your Kitchen and see what they're washing and cleaning with. You think it's Pearline. You've told your servants to use it. But look at the package and see that it's the genuine article. A house-to-house canvass discloses the fact that many women think they are using Pearline, when an examination of the package proves the stuff to be some of the "as good as," which peddlers, unscrupulous grocers and prize-givers are trying to work off upon a long-suffering public. If you're using these imitations you're not enthusiastic about Washing Compounds; you couldn't be.

Send it Back — Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE. Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 349 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Did you ever see one of the famous waterproof Interlined Collars or Cuffs? It's very easy to tell, for they are all marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

They are the only Interlined Collars and Cuffs, and are made of linen, covered with waterproof "CELLULOID." They'll stand right by you day in and day out, and they are all marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

The first cost is the only cost, for they keep clean a long time, and when soiled you can clean them in a minute by simply wiping off with a wet cloth—that is the kind marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

These collars and cuffs will outlast six linen ones. The wearer escapes laundry trials and laundry bills—no chafed neck and no wilting down if you get a collar marked this way

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

Ask your dealer first, and take nothing that has not above trade mark, if you desire perfect satisfaction. All others are imitations absolutely.

If you can't find collars or cuffs marked this way, we will send you a sample postpaid on receipt of price. Collars, 25 cts. each. Cuffs 50 cts. pair. Give your size and say whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

NEW YORK CITY MERCHANT.

How His Life Was Saved.

No one would think to look at Richard B. Brown, a commission merchant, of No. 306 Washington street, New York City, that for six weeks he had suffered in agony in his bed and that physicians had said it was impossible for him to regain his health.

But now he is back in his office, vigorous and hearty. He regards Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as the savior of his life. Mr. Brown's story is remarkable.

"For several years," said Mr. Brown to a reporter the other day, "I suffered from inflammation and ulceration of the bladder, a most stubborn disease. My family physician was unable to relieve me. At the advice of friends I consulted specialists, and they all failed to do me any good. All this time I was growing worse, and at last I was compelled to take to my bed.

"My mother-in-law had heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and she asked me to give it a trial. I had been confined to my bed for five weeks and I admit that I didn't think there was much chance of getting out of it. Well, I tried Favorite Remedy. There seemed to be a change that surprised me. In a week I was able to get out of bed and go around the house, and in a short time I recovered completely. To-day I'm as well as ever and what's better yet I feel that I am permanently cured. I can work sixteen hours a day now, and not be broken up a bit. To Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is all the credit due."

Favorite Remedy ranks, with the medical profession, as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver to a healthy condition, and cures the worst cases of constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to females, and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease.

In this last disease it has cured where all else failed. Any druggist can supply.

The Real "New Woman."

She does not "languish in her bower,"
Or squander all the golden day
In fashioning a gaudy flower
Upon a worsted spray;
Nor is she quite content to wait
Behind her "rose-wreathed lattice-pane,
Until beside her father's gate
The gallant Prince draws rein."

The brave "New Woman" scorns to sigh
And count it "such a grievous thing"
That year on year should hurry by
And no gay suitor bring;
In labor's ranks she takes her place,
With skilful hand and cultured mind;
Not always foremost in the race,
But never far behind.

And not less lightly fall her feet
Because they tread the busy ways;
She is no wit less fair and sweet
Than maids of olden days,
Who, gowned in samite or brocades,
Looked charming in their dainty guise,
But dwell like violets in the shade,
With shy, half-opened eyes.

Of life she takes a clearer view,
And through the press serenely moves
Unfettered, free; with judgment true,
Avoiding narrow grooves.
She reasons, and she understands;
And sometimes 'tis her joy and crown
To lift with strong yet tender hands,
The burdens men lay down.

Dreadful Case of Chronic Eczema.

Such a testimonial as we give below few medicines can produce. It is one of thousands possessed by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and proves the merit of this medicine.

Reliable, honest, industrious, is what all say of Mr. Bennett. He has been engaged as gas-fitter in Boston for 35 years, with Tarbell, 111 Washington street, and McKinney, Washington st., opp. Boylston. "C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

Saved My Life.

"A year ago last winter, after exposure to storms, I caught a severe cold, after which chronic eczema appeared on the calf of my left leg and spread all over my lower limb from knee to ankle, and the itching and burning was something awful. Added to this was a severe pain, seemingly in the bone. At last it became so that I had to give up work and was unable to walk. I had to have my leg bandaged all the time and frequent changes of the cloths. For nine months I sat with my leg resting in a chair.

Oh, It Was Dreadful!

Friends said I could not live long. In all I had seven different physicians, all to no purpose whatever. I knew the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla as I had, some years before, taken it with benefit, and decided to try it for my apparently hopeless case. In two or three days after I began my appetite was better and my courage revived. To make a long story short, the eruption entirely disappeared, and the flesh on my leg resumed perfectly healthy appearance. I was soon able to walk about. I cannot tell how amazed my neighbors and friends were. I can now walk without any lameness, as well as ever. Have not the slightest eruption or itching or burning, or any sort of trouble whatever with my leg. The gratitude I owe Hood's Sarsaparilla is simply unspeakable." THOS. Heart Disease 30 Yrs!

Short Breath, Palpitation.

Mr. G. W. McKinsey, postmaster of Kokomo, Ind., and a brave ex-soldier, says: "I had been severely troubled with heart disease ever since leaving the army at the close of the late war. I was troubled with palpitation and shortness of breath. I could not sleep on my left side, and had pain around my heart. I became so ill that I was much alarmed, and fortunately my attention was called to

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

I decided to try it. The first bottle made a decided improvement in my condition, and five bottles have completely cured me."

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advise is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means to not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will releive the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well-known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamderlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three application of it," he says, "and have since been free from all paln." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted.

The Old-Fashioned Fireplace.

How dear to my heart are the days of my childhood,
When there were no cold gas stoves to rouse a man's ire;
When the hickory backlog, brought in from the wildwood,
Gave out the bright heat of the old-fashioned fire!

How it crackled and sparkled, and fluttered and brightened!
How nice it all seems when it's put into rhyme?
Yet, to tell the plain truth, to our youth unenlightened,
You couldn't warm more than one side at a time.

Ah, the old-fashioned fireplace, the roaring old fireplace!
How brightly it glowed with its sparkle and shine!
How it warmed up your shins to points of real torture,
While the cold winter breezes played tag on your spine!

WHY DO HENS STOP LAYING?

The most profitable hen lays at seasons of the year when eggs are scarce and dear. The thing to do, then, is to provide conditions which will be conducive to egg production. Laying hens depend less upon seasons of the year than they do upon the weather. That being the case, all poultry keepers should provide comfortable quarters for their hens in both winter and summer, says The Western Stockman.

Why is it that the hens will be in good condition and as soon as the first cold snap comes every one of them will stop laying? It is a matter that is worthy the attention of poultry men or philosophers. It is a serious thing, when eggs are selling at three cents apiece, to have the hens suddenly cease laying when they should be filling the egg basket. It seems hard for the hens, after laying as regularly as clockwork during the summer, when eggs are low, to shut down just when there is the heaviest demand.

But there is a cause for it. It is not because of lack of food, as the cessation of egg production may happen in a single day. It is not due to disease, for the hens may be healthy. The cause is lack of warmth. While the heat of the body comes from the food, yet the cold may be so intense that digestion is not sufficiently rapid to create the heat necessary to protect the bird against the cold. Every breath of wind that touches the body or air that is inhaled is warmed by the bird, and that warmth may be lost so rapidly as to cause the hen to suffer from cold. Egg production ceases because nature's first effort will be to protect the bird before it is permitted to do extra work in production. What is the remedy? It is simply to guard against loss of animal heat. That is done by keeping the cold winds away, by providing sheltered and sunny places for the hens, by feeding warm food and giving warm water. No ventilators, cracks or openings are to let in cold air. If you wish the hens to lay as they do in the summer they must have summer conditions.

WAS TRAINING FOR CONGRESS.

Congressman John Allen of Mississippi, according to his own admissions, was a pretty bad little boy. For a long time he lived on a farm in Tishomingo county and received only a common school education, the best to be had then. He was no more fond of Sunday school and the church than he was of leaving his play in the fields and going to day school, and he was nearly 10 years of age when he first attended the country Presbyterian church with his parents one Sunday at the conclusion of the week of prayer.

Communion services were held that morning. Little John was unfamiliar with the way he should conduct himself. He says: "It was a long sermon that morning, and I was pretty well worn out and tired. The sermon was over at last, however, and the elders of the Presbyterian church were distributing the bread and wine. Not knowing that such things were only for the members of the church, I partook heartily of both articles, much to the trepidation of my father and mother. Still I did not understand for what purpose these things were done, and, boy like, I received the peculiar impression that they were served as refreshments to be partaken of after long sermons.

"Thoroughly imbued with this idea, when the elder came around again I accosted him thus: "Say, Elder, you haven't got a little cheese, have you?" It is only necessary to add that my parents were greatly mortified, and it took a good month of tall talking to their friends to explain my ignorance and innocence."—Philadelphia Times.

BOUGHT THEM TO BET IN.

Old John Langley, the veteran horseman, is better known to old Worcester sporting men than any man living. Stories of his eccentric career are innumerable. He often complained of being "done" in betting. As a matter of fact he "did" his adversaries in the sporting world oftener than they did him. One day he called at the store of a tailor and stated in his usual loud and emphatic way,—for his conversation was always highly flavored with the tobasco of profanity,—that he "wanted a pair of breeches. And I want the best stuff in the store, not matter what the——color." The tailor was a little bewildered, but finally showed Langley the most costly material in the shop, a beautiful, silky broadcloth. That this was unsuitable for trousers made no difference to him. "I want it," said he, "and I want it made up wrong side out." The tailor expostulated in vain, and the trousers were made and delivered.

A friend called on Langley and remarked on the trousers in uncomplimentary language. Langley said he was satisfied. More guying resulted in the old man offering to bet $25 that the cloth cost more a yard than that in his friend's trousers. The bet was taken, and the tailor was to decide it. He named the price. The friend would not believe that the rough goods could be so costly until he was shown the shiny, silky other side. Then he paid, as did other men on similar bets. That was what the old man had bought the trousers for.

"In the last church fair did the young ladies take part?" Mr. Slimpurse—"Great Scott, no; they took all."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

You need this Spring Medicine now.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Purely Vegetable and Harmless.

The Best Spring Medicine.

Felt Weak and Dizzy. Had Indigestion. Stomach Bloated. Pain and Distress in Stomach.

Joseph E. Hood, of 129 Front Street, Woonsocket, R. I., speaks as follows in regard to his recent illness:—

"I felt weak and dizzy in the morning, and my stomach would not digest well, and made me feel so it would burst. I had excruciating pain in the pit of my stomach at times. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and every dose gave me relief the moment I took it. The pain is all gone and I feel strong all day—in fact, I feel like a new man. I would not be without Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy in the house."

MR. JOSEPH E. HOOD.

Perfectly Cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy. It will cure you.

Weak, Tired and Nervous.

MRS. J. W. BEALE.

Mrs. J. W. Beale, who resides at 52 Eastern Avenue, Worcester, Mass., makes the following statement:—

"I was sick for more than seven years, not able to do my housework for five years. I employed more than sixteen different doctors without benefit. The whole length of my spine was very bad, which went to my head, being so bad that it was about impossible for me to stoop to the floor, or turn my head to the right or left, my neck was so stiff.

"I was unable to comb my hair, the nerves of my head were so sore. I also had convulsions and kidney trouble.

"After a time I was persuaded to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Words cannot express my wonderful cure! Now all is changed, and I am strong and well, and able to do all my work. I have gained 26 pounds in weight, and where before all was gloom and despondency, there is now light and hope.

"Words cannot express my feelings! Thanks to God, and the wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I am cured. I write this with the desire that others may be influenced to use this wonderful medicine as I did and be cured.

Liver and Bowels out of order. Nerves weak. Could not sleep.

Mr. James Meehan, who resides at 57 Granite Street, Quincy, Mass., says:—

"I was taken sick with liver disease and ulceration of the bowels. My heart was also affected. I was confined to my bed three months.

"A consultation of physicians was held, and I was pronounced incurable.

"After that I stopped taking their remedies, and began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

MR. JAMES MEEHAN.

"Previous to this I could not sleep, my nerves were excitable and spasmodic, my stomach would not bear food, vomiting almost constantly. Soon after beginning this remedy I slept better, and my stomach would bear light food.

"I continued to gain until I could get out. I now work all the time, and feel that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy saved my life."

He was made well by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

While we've been selling Spring Capes, Dresses and Skirts for the past four weeks, to-day practically inaugurates the new season's sales of Spring Garments.

The brightest and best stocked—by that we don't mean bulk—Cloak Department in Springfield invites you. It is a fine offering that we make, and nothing but what is new and fresh, never before shown in this store.

WOMEN'S CAPES.

While the big sleeves stay Capes will be favorites; when the big sleeves are a memory Capes will still be favorites.

But it's likely to be many a day before Cape varieties will be greater or Cape elegancies more marked than now.

JACKETS

Are made with the new "Banjo" sleeve, giving ample room for the big sleeve of dresses.

Remember this season that nearly a third of the garments are imported, the lower tariff rates admitting foreign cloaks in this market at prices that are as low as the home productions.

We have been buying imported sample garments for the past two weeks from the manufacturers, who have no more use for them.

You will find our collection of Novelties, both home and foreign productions, to be worthy of your best efforts.

PALMER NEWS.

REPORTS OF TOWN OFFICERS

Concerning Finances and Other Matters of Interest to Voters.

The annual reports of the town officers are in the hands of the printers, and will be ready for the perusal of the voters next Monday. A new departure is made this year in printing and binding the school committee's report separate from that of the other town officers. From the report of the other town officials the following figures are taken: Total appropriations at the annual town meeting, $50,435; less license money, 7653, leaving 43,782 to be raised by taxation; county tax, 3346 48; state tax, 2360; interest due the state, 163.27; overlay, 221 43; non resident bank tax, 1407 21; total, 50,280.39. The valuation of the town is as follows: Personal, $782,923 38; resident bank stock, 25,740; real estate buildings, 1,434,411; land, 478,403 85; total valuation of the town, 2,721,478 23. The appropriations in the fire district amounted to, $2176, with an overlay of 43.44, making a total to be raised of $2219.44. The valuation of the fire district was $964,766.

The selectmen report that the contingent expenses have been unusually large on account of the awards of damages on grade crossing changes at Blanchardville, and by the town's being compelled to defend several suits against it; but by careful and wise expenditures the town has a balance to its credit of $1,324.28. The principle items of expense have been as follows: Contingencies, $4060.21; highways, $4253 95; bridges, 591.72; railings, 205.71; sewers and culverts, 208 62; lighting streets, 4911.40; library association, 800; Memorial Day, 100; prosecuting illegal liquor sales, 18; widening highway at Thorndike, 74.34; G. A. R. post, 300; sewers at Thorndike and Three Rivers, 690.04; improvements on engine house, 201 61; board of health, 103; services of commission on Ferrill crossing, 503; expense of suits against the town, 7840.88; police, 1412.23. They recommend the following appropriations: Contingencies, 3500; highways, 4500; bridges, 1000; railings, 200; sewers and culverts, 300. The list of jurors, as revised by the selectmen, contains 76 names.

The overseers of the poor report as follows: For the support of poor not on the town farm the cost has been 5926.09; for the support of poor at the town farm, 1281 36. The whole number at the town farm during the year has been 28; largest number at any one time, 21; average, 17⅞; average cost per week per inmate, 1.38. The cash receipts at the farm for the year were, 1134 89. There were three deaths at the farm during the year, two males and one female. The property at the town farm on March 1st inventoried 2300.70, an increase of 91.40 over the previous year, this being exclusive of land and buildings. The overseers have paid out 392.19 for poor belonging to other towns, and 451 73 for poor belonging to the state; there is due from other towns 52.50, and 326 14 from the state, a total of 378 64. The cost of the tramp room last year was 218 81, 378 tramps having been cared for, four of whom were females; the average cost per tramp was about 55 cents. Various repairs at the town house have been made during the year at a cost of 250 50. There are outstanding bills against the poor department estimated at 475, which if paid would leave a balance of 342.42 on hand. The appropriations in all departments of town affairs, and the amounts expended under each heading, were as follows:

Railings,	$ 200.00	$ 205.71
Highways,	4,500.00	4,253.95

The tax collector announces that there is $850.90 of last year's taxes uncollected, after allowing $326.85 for abatements.

The school committee, after quoting the statement that "the town of Palmer spends more for educational purposes, in proportion to its valuation, than any town in the state," acknowledges an average increase of expenditures during the last three years of $12,000 per year, and admits that the question whether the schools have been so much improved as to justify this expense, may well be asked. The committee thinks that they have. During the past two years, under the supervision of the superintendent of schools, a great change has been brought about in the gradation of schools. Formerly the various schools were under the care of a local committeeman, who generally had little time to give to their supervision, and the teachers were left much to their own free will. As a result there was very little uniformity in the preparation of scholars for advancement from one grade to another. For instance, scholars from the four grammar schools of the town might appear to take the examination for admission to the high school, and yet represent four different grades of advancement in their work Now all this is changed; a course of study has been arranged for every grade of school work, and the same amount of work is required from each school. The efficiency of the teachers has also been increased by the superintendent, and when a vacancy occurs, all applicants for the position are required to undergo an examination, the candidate passing the best examination receiving the appointment. As a result of this policy, where three years ago there were only four Normal graduates teaching in the public schools, there are now eleven. The school year has been lengthened from 36 to 38 weeks. The salaries of the teachers have been graded, and many of them increased, and while they are not yet what they should be they are at a figure which relieves the town of the stigma of employing pauper labor. The employment of a teacher of drawing for another year is recommended by the committee, to comply with the requirements of the state law, the expense being $400. All the school buildings are in good condition with the exception of the one at Three Rivers, and last year's recommendation that no more money be spent on it is renewed, as its location and condition renders a new building inevitable sooner or later.

To sum up: The present school board has increased the amount expended $1200; for which, by careful business management, it has to show—The employment of a superintendent of schools at an expenditure of $1600, the raising of the schools to a standard never before attained, uniformity and intelligent work in the village schools and in the district schools results that were undreamed of a few years ago, and a corps of teachers that will compare favorably with those of any town in the state.

The report is an interesting document, well worth the careful perusal of all interested in school matters.

NO A. P. A. IN THREE RIVERS.

Reliable Information that no Branch of the Order Exists in that Village.

In last week's account of the Republican caucus, in connection with the vote on the name of Rev. W. H. Hart for a member of the school committee, the statement was made that "Here the A. P. A. of Three Rivers, which has for some time been supposed to exist, showed its hand." The vote and the result left no doubt in the minds of many that there was at least a strong sentiment in that direction in Three Rivers, where for some months it has been commonly reported that the order had obtained a foothold; the name of Mr. Hart was rejected for first place on the list of school committee nominees, and then after a statement that many preferred to place another candidate first, and he had been endorsed by voters of undoubted integrity who had an intimate knowledge of school matters and Mr. Hart's value on the board,—each urging his nomination,—there was a change of only 17 votes. The JOURNAL is satisfied however that no branch of the A. P. A. exists in Three Rivers, and that only two residents of that village are members of the order, they having become members before coming to Three Rivers, An organizer from Lowell visited the place last fall and attempted to enlist enthusiasm in that line, but was obliged to return without success. It is also due to those who voted against Rev. W. H. Hart to state that there was no discussion of the matter previous to the caucus, and no preconceived antagonism to his nomination, each voter acting for himself and for his own reasons when the vote came. It certainly did not look this way, but the source from which the JOURNAL has obtained the above facts leaves no room for doubt as to their correctness. That there is no A. P. A. in Three Rivers, or in the town, the JOURNAL is very glad. The policy of the order as understood, and its methods of work as shown in other places, cannot fail to be harmful to the best interests of the town and its citizens, all of whom, irrespective of party or creed, should work together for the greatest welfare of all concerned.

In regard to the statement of Mr. F. A. Upham in the caucus that after Mr. Moore's name had been acted upon, if Mr. Hart's name was again brought up "we shall see what the result will be," which has been misinterpreted by some, it is justice to Mr. Upham to say that when he made the remark he expected the nomination of Mr. Hart for second place on the ticket by a large majority, his understanding being that the objection to the name on the first ballot was on account of its place,—first on the list. Mr. Upham voted for Mr. Hart on the second ballot.

Since the above had been prepared the following communication was received:

Editor of the Palmer Journal:—

DEAR SIR:—We, the undersigned, desire to state, after careful investigation, that no A. P. A. organization exists in Three Rivers.

We also affirm that the bitter spirit supposed to characterize the A. P. A. movement finds no expression among those who preferred another candidate from the one nominated for a position on the school committee.

We regret that the cry of "A. P. A.," which is calculated to arouse the opposition of Roman Catholic voters, has been so industriously circulated throughout the town for the evident purpose of defeating temperance measures which make for our moral and material welfare.

We ask, therefore, in behalf of truth, fairness and kindly spirit, that this statement be published in this week's issue of the PALMER JOURNAL.

We would also respectfully request, on the information given, that you withdraw the incorrect statement made in your last issue of an A. P. A. movement in the late republican caucus to defeat a candidate nominated for a place on the school board.

By request of the Citizens No License League of Three Rivers. Yours sincerely,

G. S. BUTLER, pastor of the Union church.
E. C. WEEKS, pastor of the Baptist church.

THE THIRD FARMERS' INSTITUTE

A Valuable Talk on Fruit Culture Before a Large Attendance.

The institute held in this village Tuesday was a great success, in the numbers present, the subject and the speaker.

In the first place Mr. J. H. Hale is a typical Yankee, born to succeed where others would have failed. It is evident that he believes in the doctrine that "all things come to those who wait," that is, to all those who work and wait. In the commencement of his business life he and his brother worked and waited on the old home farm in South Glastonbury, Ct.; year after year the berry crop or the expected peach crop failed; the farm was mortgaged for all it was worth; the seventh year of failure came and went, and still the brothers did not loose faith in themselves or the crop. Another year came and crowned their efforts with success, and $9000 was the net result from their peach orchard; all the debts were paid off and a surplus left. To-day Hale Brothers are the most successful peach raisers in the country; they have 125 acres devoted to peach culture in Connecticut, and 600 acres to the same in Fort Valley, Ga. To-day Mr. Hale is one of the leading pomologists of the country, having had the amplest opportunity to inform himself in all branches of the subject through his connection with the government service in the department of pomology.

This hasty glance at Mr. Hale's experiment is given to illustrate the opening part of his talk. He said that for a man to succeed in any business he must have a thorough love for it; lacking these two essentials he had better seek some other sphere of action. If he is a farmer he must, in order to succeed, believe in the farm and learn its needs and supply them. If he turns his attention to fruit raising, he must study the habits and needs of the plants or trees he seeks to cultivate, nor rest satisfied until he has mastered all the details. If any of his ventures fail he must seek out the cause and apply the remedy. It will not do, because success does not come in one year, to condemn the whole thing and sit down discouraged, but keep everlastingly at it and win.

Referring to the subject of floriculture the speaker said that in 1800 there was but one florist in this country, now there are over 5000. In 1890 more than $25,000,000 were expended for flowers and bedding plants in this country, New England being the largest consumer.

The consumption of all kinds of fruit is increasing; in the South and especially in the West great orchards are being planted, often exceeding 100 acres to an orchard. In 1890 he said 100,000,000 apple trees were planted in this country, to say nothing of other fruit trees; but the most astonishing part of this matter is that these Southern and Western fruit planters expect to find their best market in New England, the very country where the finest apples for quality and flavor are produced. This fact alone shows that our New England farmers are not fully alive to their opportunities. The speaker said that it should be the aim of the fruit grower to produce quality rather than quantity; in order to do this successfully several matters must be attended to. First, the tree must not be allowed to overbear, whether apple, peach, pear or plum, but must be thinned out heroically after having attained a moderate size. This should be done for several reasons: It will be less exhaustive to the tree and allow the better development of the fruit; second, the fruit raiser must resort to spraying his trees, especially the older ones, early in the spring and later in the season to destroy the insects, —thinning the fruit and spraying the trees will in a great measure insure fair and fine fruit. But with the above care another important matter must be attended to, and that is the furnishing of proper food for them; they all need a proper amount of potash and phosphate, which can be supplied in the shape of wood ashes and ground bone, in the form of top dressing about the roots of the trees. How many people starve their trees and wonder at the paucity of fruit; feed them well if you expect full results.

In the matter of selecting trees for an orchard, do not buy large trees of several years' growth; buy small trees, prune back the tops and roots with a sharp knife; do not force them into a narrow post hole, but have the excavation ample and press the earth firmly about the roots; set the trees as early as possible in the spring, just as soon as you can work the earth. If you are to set many trees, select those of well-established reputation or you may be disappointed. If you wish to be a successful peach grower you must if possible plant the trees on the north side of elevated ground, where the buds will be delayed in putting forth in the spring. Peach trees should be trimmed the first year by cutting off about half of the new growth, and the second year one-half the new growth, and a little less the third year; then trim generally for form early in the season after the buds have developed. You should carefully trim all fruit trees each year by removing superfluous twigs when small, as it is not well to cut off large limbs except in extreme cases. By careful attention you can shape your trees as you wish. All the care and attention you devote to your trees will be returned to you in rich results and bountiful profits.

Mr. Hale recommended the following large and small fruits as best adapted for home use:

APPLES.—Red Astrakan, Golden Sweet, Gravenstien, Hubbardston, Rhode Island Greening, Sutton Beauty, Baldwin. The Sutton Beauty is superior to the Baldwin in quality and flavor, as well as color, but if many trees can be planted it would be well to have equal quantities of the Sutton Beauty, and Baldwin set together for the benefit of cross fertilization, each specie fortifying the other by this little known method.

PEARS.—Manning's Elizabeth, Clapp's Favorite, Bartlett, Seckel, Sheldon, Anjou.

PEACHES.—In the order of ripening, Alexander, Early Rivers, Mountain Rose, Crosby, Old Mixon, Alberta, Stump the world but if you have only room for one, plant the Crosby, for that is the nearest to an iron clad peach we have.

PLUMS.—Everything considered, the new Japanese plum is the best; their introduction marks an era in progressive horticulture. The trees are strong, great bearers, and nearly free from the black knot. The best varieties are Willard, Abundance, Burbank, Yellow Japan.

QUINCE.—The best is the Orange.

CHERRIES.—Gov. Wood, Black Tarleton, Windsor, Early Richmond.

GOOSEBERRY.—Downing, Smith.

CURRENT.—The best is Victoria Red.

GRAPE.—Worden, Green Mountain, Brighton.

BLACK RASPBERRY.—Souhegan, (early) Older, Kansas.

RED RASPBERRY.—Cuthbert.

BLACKBERRY.—Agawam.

STRAWBERRY.—Dunlop, (early) Princess, Greenville, Bubach, Brandywine.

O. P. ALLEN.

PALMER HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI.

A History of The School And a List of Its Graduates.

Having occasion recently to make a note of some of the graduates of the Palmer high school, Mr. O. P. Allen was surprised to learn that no official list had been kept until three years ago. Having consulted with the superintendent of schools and the chairman of the school board, and learned of their desire for a complete list, he has been to some pains to collect one, which has been done from the graduating class exercises of the different years, the only source from which such a list is now possible. In this connection is given a brief sketch of the high school from its inception to the present time.

We learn from the records that the Palmer high school was established by vote of the town April 7, 1851, when it was voted to devote $600 for the support of the same for the ensuing year. It was also voted that the high school should be kept the first six months in the Thorndike district, the next three months in the Depot district, and then three months in Three Rivers. Mr. Eben N. Chamberlain was the teacher for the year. From that year until 1868 the high school was on wheels, so to speak, moving from village to village and to the town house as occasion seemed to require. In 1868 it became firmly established in the village of Palmer, where it has since remained.

In November, 1874, under the direction of the then school committee, Rev. B. M. Fullerton, Rev. T. A. Leete and Dr. Silas Ruggles, the high school became such in fact as well as name, in that it was reorganized, and a course of four years' study was adopted, which included English and the classics, and which would fit the pupil for business or college. Mr. A. G. Fisher, an energetic teacher, was then in charge and remained until the fall of 1875, followed by E. G. Baldwin, who remained until 1877. Frank A. Hosmer, now President of Honolulu College, taught the spring term of 1878, followed by William H. Whiting in the fall of the same year, who remained until the spring of 1881. C. A. Doubleday taught the fall term of that year. Frank A. Whitney was principal from the spring of 1882 until the spring of 1884. H. B. Knox came in the fall of 1884 and remained until the spring of 1893, and was succeeded by Mr. A. W. Thayer, who still remains in charge.

The high school building was erected in 1889 and first occupied in the spring of 1890. Its superior accommodations and distinctive character have done much to elevate and give tone to the school.

The high school graduated its first class in 1879. For various reasons there were no graduates during the years of 1880, 1881, 1882, 1884, 1885, 1887. At the close of each spring term during those years there were held what was called high school exhibitions, when some of the more advanced pupils gave recitations, colloquies or exercises in music.

The history of our high school has been one of steady progress, until it has reached its present enviable condition, when instead of our pupils being sent to other institutions we are able to retain nearly all of them and fit them for a business life or for college direct from our graduating classes. It is an institution of which our town may well be proud and, for which it should ever have a fostering care.

The following list contains 108 graduates, 14 of whom have since been teachers and 15 have become college graduates or college students, and 3 graduates of a Normal School:

PALMER NEWS.

Death of Dr. W. H. Stowe.

Whenever death claims his own, a sense of loss is felt by family, friends and companions; but when a man of public spirit, a friend of his kind is taken away in the midst of his work and in the prime of life, then indeed the feeling of loss is great. Such was the thought of this community when it was announced this morning that Dr. W. H. Stowe had closed his earthly career. He had won a large place in the hearts of his townsmen, had labored ardently for their welfare, for he was always found at his post in promoting every laudable enterprise. He was a true friend of the poor, the unfortunate, and of youth. He sometimes entertained differences of opinion with his fellows, but he was respected by all for the sincerity of his views. He had but just passed the fiftieth milestone, and had every reason to expect many more years of effort, when suddenly an insidious disease commenced its work, which soon gave premonitions of the coming end; everything was done with medical skill and kindness of friends could do, but the disease conquered and cut short his unfulfilled plans, as it has often done in the life of many another. He sustained a stroke of paralysis last Friday, when he fully realized that the beginning of end had come.

Dr. Willard Hadley Stowe was born in Morristown, Vt, June 22d, 1844. He was descended from John Stowe, who came from County Kent, England, in 1634, and settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts. Like many others who have won success, he spent his boyhood days on a farm and derived what advantages he could from the district school; but this limited means of acquiring knowledge did not satisfy him, so he entered the People's Academy in Morrisville, Vt., where he sustained himself by caring for the building and boarding himself, as many others have done in like circumstances. He taught school for several winters to procure means for prosecuting his further studies. At the age of twenty-one he entered the Vermont University, spending two years there in the study of medicine, and was graduated from Bellevue Hospital College, New York, in 1869. Armed with his diploma he commenced the practice of medicine at Gilbertville, Mass., where he remained for six years, and where he built up a successful business. In 1876 he removed to Palmer, where he remained until his death, and where he has won an enviable name as a successful physician. His life here as a professional man and a citizen is known to all, and it seems almost superfluous to attempt to recount what he has done, yet it will bear repetition. He was one of the founders of the Young Men's Library Association, and an ardent promoter of its interests; was on the board of directors for many years, and for some time its president. The erection of the fine library building in our village owes much to him, for he contributed largely in time and money for the object. He was a member of the town historical committee when the history of the town was written, and was an active member. He was an ardent lover of nature studies, especially in the realm of ornithology, and contributed many papers on the subject; he was also a member of the Ornithological Union. He was president of the Palmer Natural History Society, which for several years enlisted the interests of the young people, and which position was only relinquished because of his declining health. He was a member of the Eastern Hampden Medical Association from its organization in 1880, and a frequent contributor of papers in its meetings. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. He was an enthusiastic collector of antique objects in the shape of old books, ceramics, and relics which in any way illustrated the life of old New England days, so that his varied collection has become a noted one and has attracted the attention of connoisseurs in such matters far and near. It has been his plan to devote a part of this collection for the benefit of the public library, to which he gave it several years ago, though it has never been removed from his house. The Doctor was an active member of the Quaboag Literary Circle, where his presence will be greatly missed.

Doctor Stowe never married, but he had a cheerful home, presided over by a married sister, where in his last days of lingering illness every want was anticipated. His mother was in attendance during her son's illness. Besides his mother and Mrs. F. N. Carpenter, an adopted sister, a brother, Albert A. Stowe of Montana, survives him. In politics Dr. Stowe was a staunch Prohibitionist, and in religious matters he was Unitarian. He was a lover of nature and its works, a lover of his kind, a sympathizer with the unfortunate, a leader in reform. Our friend has gone; his hastening footsteps will never again cross the threshold where anxious hearts await him; his generous hand will never more respond to the appeal for aid, and his cheerful greeting will never more fall upon the ears of our youth, but his memory survives, and his deeds are left as a rich heritage.

The Annual Town Meeting.

Next Monday will be the annual town meeting day, and the election gives promise of being one of the most closely contested of any in recent years. But little can be hazarded as the result of the vote for selectmen, as all the candidates are well known, and any three will be sure to give the town good service. Several new names appear as candidates for the office of assessor, but the voters will do well to retain the two who have had experience in this line; it might be for the good of the town to change the method of electing three each year, and choose one at each annual meeting, to serve for three years. For overseer of the poor Mr. Bishop may feel sure of the reëlection he deserves, and which the best interests of the town demand. As there are but two candidates for school committee, both Mr. Hart and Mr. Moore are guaranteed a reëlection, as is also J. B. Shaw for town clerk and treasurer, there being no other candidate. W. A. Weld has made an efficient collector of taxes, and there is no reason why he should not be again chosen for this position. The principal interest seems to be centered in the license question. There are numerous forces at work for a no-license vote this year, and there is apparently a good chance to get a "no" vote. A fac-simile of the ballot to be used next Monday will be found on the third page, and voters will have ample opportunity to study it before the election and pick out the best names for which to cast their ballots.

The Democratic Caucus.

A free train was run to the Democratic caucus last Friday evening, first going to Thorndike to accommodate the voters there, and the caucus was a large one in consequence. T. J. Moran was chairman and H. C. Strong clerk. All nominations were made from the floor, and the following ticket was named: Selectmen, C. T. Brainerd, John F. Twiss, G. M. Atkins; assessors, H. T. Bishop, G. W. Lyman, A. W. Warriner; overseer of the poor, H. T. Bishop; school committee, Rev. W. H. Hart, L. E. Moore; town clerk and treasurer, J. B. Shaw; board of health, Dr. H. A. Smith, Dr. Boulay, Dr. G. H. Wilkins; tax collector, H. A. Northrop; auditors, C. K. Gamwell, H. C. Strong; constables, Michael Collins, Samuel Brown, J. F. Luman, J. J. Manning, John Murphy; fence viewers, Samuel Brown, W. A. Lawson, Dennis Mahoney. The name of W. A. Weld was put forward in the caucus for tax collector, and that of S. H. Hellyar, for auditor, but there was a cry of "No A. P. A. in ours", and the caucus refused to consider them. Dr. Boulay is not eligible for a position on the board of health in that he is not a voter, and Dr. Wilkins withdrew his name when informed of his nomination.

Tuesday Night's Concert.

The entertainment by the Columbian Concert Co. at the Congregational church Tuesday evening, the fourth of the high school course, called out a good audience, and they were well entertained. Time's ravages are very preceptible in the face and movements of Wulf Fries, but when the old musician takes the 'cello between his knees he is no longer old. His fingers are as nimble as ever. The fire and energy of youth course through his veins and muscles, and if a bit of the old-time smoothness is lacking in its tone he displays the same wonderful mastery of his instrument which has captivated his hearers for these many years. His "Spanish Dance" was a delightful bit which set many feet to beating time. Mr. Staats proved himself a clarinet virtuoso indeed, and Mrs. Walker sang very pleasingly, though with too much vibrato for the fullest enjoyment. One of the pleasantest features of the entertainment was the admirable work of Miss Downer as accompanist. She displayed rarely good taste in her playing, and the one solo assigned her was executed with a smoothness and skill that mark her as a very promising artist.

The Baptist Church Calls a Pastor, and Votes to Make its Pews Free.

At a business meeting of the Baptist church on Monday evening it was voted to extend a call to Rev. C. R. Minard to become pastor of the church at the close of his studies at the Newton Theological Seminary this spring. Mr. Minard supplied the pulpit last summer, and was so well liked that a call to the pastorate would have been given him at the time but for his determination to complete his studies before accepting any pastorate. He is a young man of marked ability, a clear thinker and excellent speaker, social and progressive, and he won the esteem and regard of all who came to know him during his residence here. The church will be very fortunate if it can secure him.

A step forward was taken by the church in a vote to make the pews entirely free. They have been nominally so for many years, but regular attendants have been assigned seats, though without regard to what they paid, the expenses being met by weekly offerings. A committee was appointed to put book racks and hymnals in all the pews.

No Pay, No Kill the Cow.

That was what W. H. Williams of Monson said Wednesday regarding a cow of his which had been condemned as affected with tuberculosis and ordered killed. The animal was quarantined last December, and two different inspectors had been here to try and kill the animal previous to this week, but Mr. Williams refused to have her killed until he got his pay from the state. Wednesday morning Inspector Waters was sent here by the state cattle commission, and after viewing the animal sent for Mr. Williams, who declined to allow the killing to go on until he had received the cash for the cow. Mr. Waters went to dinner, and on his return Mr. Williams appeared to have acquiesced in the matter and chose one of the three appraisers required to set a value on the animal. They were taken to this village and sworn in, but when they returned found the barn locked, Mr. Williams refusing to open it, even on the demand of an officer. Mr. Waters thereupon withdrew and left on the evening train for Boston.

Mrs. L. A. Royce is visiting her sister in Worcester.

Mrs. Lyman Dimock has returned from a visit with her sister in Amherst.

Mrs. Booth of Hartford has been a guest of Mrs. A. B. Cowan for a few days.

C. P. Tryon has bought the Wilcox property on the corner of Park and Pearl streets.

H. P. Marcy has been confined to the house several days by a severe attack of the grippe.

The ladies of the Baptist church gave a social in the parlors of the church Wednesday evening.

A. E. Fitch has sold a Keating bicycle to Ernest Marsh, and has a 19-pound racer for his own use.

F. N. Carpenter was called to Warren yesterday afternoon by the serious illness of his mother.

At the final meeting of the registrars of voters last Saturday evening 75 new names were added to the voting list.

O. P. Allen has just been elected a member of the Massachusetts society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Edward Lynch has resigned his position in the carpet mill and taken one as boss weaver in a mill at Thompsonville, Ct.

E. P. Ball has given up his office in Lynde's block, as since the moving of the block the light is not suitable for his work.

The subject at the Cangregational church next Sunday morning will be "Disentangled Christians for a Larger Service."

The selectmen have appointed N. W. Chandler and E. W. Burns ballot clerks for the annual town meeting next Monday.

Rev. A. W. Weeks, who a short time ago accepted a call to the Dewey street Baptist church of Worcester, resigned last Sunday.

H. P. Holden's racer "Roscoe," which made a record of 2.12 last year, has been shipped to New York and will be sold at auction in the sale there next week.

Rev. Addison P. Foster of Boston gave an interesting address last Sunday in the Congregational church on the work of the American Sunday School Union.

Next Sunday is the third Sunday in Lent, the Feast of St. Patrick, and at St. Thomas's Catholic church mass will be at 9 a. m , Sunday school at 3 and vespers at 7.30 p. m.

Mr. Coy of Monson, employed in the spinning room at Holden & Fuller's mill, has moved into one of the Kerigan tenements on the corner of Park and School streets.

There will a be union no-license service in the Congregational church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Rev. Messrs. MacDonold, Moulton and Jenkins will give short addresses.

The Ladies' Social Union of St. Paul's Universalist church will hold a social and supper in the church parlors next Tuesday evening between 5 and 6. Mrs. Herbert Davis and Mrs. J. J. Helliwell will entertain.

Nothing more has been done this week in the matter of the inquest as to the death of Frank Stumpf. All that remains is to take the testimony of Mrs. Stumpf, and she is at present too ill to appear before the court.

Rev. B. S. Conaty, rector of the cathedral at Springheld, ex-president of the Diosesan Temperance Union and ex-vice president of the National Temperance Union, will give an address in St. Thomas's Catholic church at 7.30 this evening.

The employes in the JOURNAL office have been enjoying some "good orthodox" apples this week, the contribution of O. F. Benedict of Glendale, and judging by the taste Mr. Benedict must have solved the problem of how to keep fruit through the winter.

The private sewer connected with the Nassowanno House property became clogged up the first of the week, and the contents was fast finding its way into the cellar of Strong's block, necessitating the digging up of a section of the sewer in Main street.

The Eaton Club of the Universalist church held a meeting Monday evening and elected Miss Jennie M. Eastman president and Miss Bessie Royce vice president. The treasurer reported the receipts for the year as $82.60. The club is to give an entertainment April 30th.

The Lenten services at St. Paul's church next week will be: Sunday at 10 45 a. m , a Lenten sermon, "The Complete Life;" Tuesday at 7.30 p. m., a conference of the Y. P. C. U.; Wednesday at 7 30 p. m., preaching by Rev. Harry L. Canfield, editor of Onward, Boston.

Porter Gerald, a former resident of Thorndike, but for the past two years an inmate of the town farm, died suddenly last Saturday evening. He was blind, and had been out of doors with a companion, but on returning complained of feeling faint and asked for a chair, into which he sank and died almost immediately of heart disease. He was 63 years of age.

The ladies of the Universalist church gave a social in the church parlors Wednesday evening. After supper there was an entertainment, Messrs. Eberhardt of Springfield assisting with mandolin duets, Miss Sexton of Springfield sang, Misses Annie and Carrie Fish gave a duet on the banjo and piano, and Miss Carrie Fish and Miss Lizzie Wassum a piano duet.

All will be welcome at the meeting of the Quaboag Literary Circle at the library building this evening. J. H. Woolrich, whose early life was spent near Chester, England, will read an essay about that historic city. There will be a recitation by Miss Hattie Coleman, and Miss Ellen M. Pierce of the high school will edit the Round Table and read its contents.

The Young Men's Library Association held its annual meeting Wednesday evening and elected these officers: President, L. H. Gager; vice president, G. M. Atkins; treasurer, L. E. Chandler; secretary, W. W. Leach; librarian, C. B. Fiske; directors, in addition to the president and the chairmen of the selectmen and school committee, G. M. Atkins, C. B. Fiske, W. W. Leach, S. H. Hellyar.

Palmer is to have a steam laundry, the vacant store in the Masonic block on Central street having been rented to J. W. Molloy of Thorndike and Mr. Priest of Ware, who will establish a steam laundry there the first of April. Mr. Priest has had an extensive experience in the business at Ware, and Mr. Molloy has for some time been his agent in this section, giving excellent satisfaction to his customers.

The Western Massachusetts Y. P. C. U. conference will be held in the Universalist church next Thursday, with services at 10.45 a. m., 2 and 7 p. m. Among the speakers will be Rev. Almon Gunnison, D. D., of Worcester, Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren, Rev. Charles Conklin of Springfield, Rev. Harry Holden of Amherst and Rev. Harry L. Canfield of Boston. Dinner will be served at 12.45 and supper at 6. The Y. P. C. U. invites all its friends in town to attend.

Special free trains will leave Palmer for the town house next Monday, for the accommodation of the voters, as follows: Leave Palmer at 8.40 a. m , and returning leave the town house at 9.45; leave Palmer at 12 05 p. m.. stopping at the town house and then running to the upper crossing at Thorndike, leaving there for the town house at 12.20 and the town house for Palmer at 12.27; leave Palmer for the town house at 12.40, and running to the Thorndike upper crossing, leaving the town house for Palmer on the last trip at 1.19.

At the adjourned annual meeting of the Palmer Cemetery Association Monday evening these officers were elected: President, William Merriam; vice president, S. W. Lawrence; treasurer, H. G. Loomis; secretary, Mrs. D. S. Davis; trustees, in addition to these officers, L. E. Chandler, William Breckenridge, E. G. Hastings, C. D. Holbrook, C. B. Fiske, W. H. Brainerd, Mrs. Maria Lawrence, Mrs. Burleigh Warren, Mrs. L. M. Shaw, Mrs. H. E. Dewey, Mrs. C. J. Holbrook; soliciting committee, Mrs. C. J. Holbrook, Mrs. Warren.

That Stavenhagen, the pianist, and Gerardy, the 'cellist, have made considerable of a stir among the musical people of America is best exemplified by the fact that the box-office returns show that a large audience always greet these great artists' appearance. At the farewell concert in Springfield next Tuesday, Stavenhagen will play several numbers that will test his very best efforts, and it goes without saying that the wonderful Gerardy, with his pathetic tone, beautiful intonation and fine technique, will carry all before him. Such playing of his is seldom heard, and it truly touches the heart, no matter what piece it may be he chooses. His 'cello absolutely cries or laughs or touches the deepest emotions. Whatever he wills to do with his remarkable instrument he can easily accomplish. Aside from this his face is a study, is brimful of genius and no one ever mistakes that he is not a musician with the divine gift born within him. Reserved seats are on sale at Taylor's music store, Springfield.

License Best For Palmer.

Editor of the Journal:—The license question seemed to be opened by a sermon published in your paper of last week, which was not so unfair as utterances of no-license men usually are. As the author of that sermon was thoroughly indorsed at the Republican caucus by one of our Protestant clergymen and a leader in the no-license crusade, it is gratifying to have the truth authoritatively and so well stated, that "the regulation of the sale of liquor is a matter of principle but purely and simply a question of methods." That license is the best method for Palmer is almost a self-evident fact to any one who has long lived in the town and is familiar with the history. The good old town of Palmer was, last year, perhaps indiscreetly abused in a remarkable series of letters. The truth is that Palmer is one of the very best of New England towns, and has almost invariably been license. So is Springfield a license city, and is famed all over America as "the beautiful city of homes." The hard times have affected the liquor as well as other business. The sale of intoxicants has been small in Palmer the past year. Palmer is now and generally is a well-ordered town. A vigilant officer who arrests slightly intoxicated persons, who in other towns are sent home, make the number of arrests of small value for argument. Our streets have been peaceful. Towns all around us have changed to license,—Westfield by a big majority. Belchertown's vote shows that she is sick of no-license. Her vote means a license at Bondsville any way. Ware is a good deal more tired than Belchertown. Says a citizen of Ware in last Sunday's Republican: "It is easier to control the liquor question under license, and few citizens in business want to be selectmen in a no-license year." The sale of liquor being best controlled by license, the burdened taxpayers of Palmer have found great relief in the $7500 received as the town's share of the license money. The town warrant indicates big appropriations. That it is desirable to keep our taxes down goes without argument. Monsignor Satolli, the apostolic delegate to this country, closes a letter as recent as the 6th inst. with this sentence: "I carefully avoid all interference in political affairs." Yet clergymen often do well in politics when so constituted as to judge fairly and impartially. The writer practically agrees with the views expressed in the sermon referred to, except as to any further experimenting with a no-license method in Palmer. That method has been tried in the balance and been found wanting. It seems a pertinent question to some comparatively recent residents of the town, who are so officious in local politics, "If you are not satisfied with Palmer, why not look around and find a better town if you can?" A TAX PAYER.

Palmer, March 14th, 1895.

Remember Next Monday.

Editor of the Journal:—Will you kindly print the following facts?

1. Taxes are steadily increasing under high license. The saloons work under high pressure to meet their heavy expenses and make their large profits. Pauperism and crime have consequently greatly increased, and the resources of the town have been kept from their normal growth.

2. Under no-license from 1857 to 1867 pauperism in Palmer steadily decreased. Under license it has steadily increased, a little more than doubling every 10 years. In 1875 it cost the town $1620.78, while in 1894 it was $6658.39. In 19 years it increased $175.27 more than fourfold, with no corresponding increase in population.

3. An actual count made this year from the town records shows that 91 per cent of our pauperism has its source in intoxicants; 85 per cent of our crime has the same source. No wonder our taxes increase under this short-sighted ruinous policy.

4. The conditions for enforcing a no-license vote were never before so good in Palmer. A No-License League has been formed which is to be permanent, and is to extend into every part of the town. A Law and Order League to be connected with the State League will be formed as soon as a "No" vote is secured. A strong sentiment against the saloons has been forming for a year past, and the temperance forces are gaining faith and courage. Some of the strongest forces now in the no-license ranks have come in this year, and have come to stay and work with great and effective energy.

5. Had all temperance men voted last year the majority against license would have been overwhelming. The over 300 temperance men who did not vote last year voted most effectually in fact for the saloons. Let every man do his duty this year.

6. God still lives and registers every vote and every failure. There are terrible reckonings with Him every year in ruined families —ruined not only directly by rum, but also by the loss of moral stamina and those strong principles which are absolutely necessary for true manhood.

7. Palmer, by its peculiar geological formation, has an atmosphere unequalled probably in the state, if not in New England, in the line of healthfulness. This fact ought to be made known far and near. She has the railroad facilities of a city, beautiful surroundings and many natural advantages. God has been good to her, why should she permit longer the one thing that has injured her most? Let every voter remember these things and vote accordingly.

Yours sincerely,
FRANK E. JENKINS.

The following committee has been appointed to take charge of the Foresters' ball, which is to be held April 18th: D. F. Sullivan, William Gerald, Michael McKelligett, M. E. Keefe and John Donovan.

Sudden Death of Mother and Two Children.

The home of Fred Bonville on Tuesday morning was a scene not soon to be forgotten by those present, when five little children from 5 to 10 years of age stood around the remains of their mother and two sisters, who lay cold in death. The scene was a touching one, and brought tears to the eyes of all present. Mrs. Bonville's death was a shock to the community, as she was in apparently good health on Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock, and the announcement of her death from heart trouble about two hours afterward was a surprise. In a few hours after Mrs. Bonville's death two children died also, one from premature birth and the other in a fit. At this writing there are two other children ill. The funeral of the mother and children was held on Tuesday morning from St. Anne's church, where a mass of requiem was celebrated for the deceased.

BRIMFIELD.

Death of Old Resident.

In the death of Samuel W. Brown, which occurred at his home in Brimfield on Friday of last week, the town loses another from the ranks of those citizens who have promoted its interests and shaped its policy for the last fifty years. Each of these men, as one by one they pass away, leaves the impress of his individuality upon the community, and none will perhaps be more widely missed, or remembered as manifesting a readier interest in the public welfare than Samuel Brown. Although the age of 72 years had brought feebleness of the body, his mind retained its keenness to the last, and he followed with thought and sympathy the events and people of the town, even after he had withdrawn from active participation in public affairs.

Samuel W. Brown was born in Brimfield Nov. 10th, 1822, and had always resided in his native town, occupying for many years the house built by Gen. Eaton. He was the son of Deacon Cyril R. Brown, and the oldest of nine childen, three of whom are living, a brother, James R. Brown of Brimfield, and two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Miller of Norwich, N. Y., and Miss Harriet Brown of Springfield. He was married in 1849 to Harriet L. Warren, who survives him. He was of the seventh generation in the line of descent from John Brown, who came to Plymouth in 1634, and who served for 17 years as assistant governor of the colony. Mr. Brown's pride in his ancestry, and in Brimfield, was a part of the historical spirit which he strongly possessed, and which prompted his interest in local history and genealogy, as well as his acquaintance with events of wider range. In keeping with his love of reading and his habit of acquiring information, was his interest in the town library, of which he was one of the original promoters, and to which he had presented many valuable books. His taste for politics made him alive to all subjects of that nature, and he was thoroughly informed on the issues of the day. Though a Republican in earlier years, during the latter part of his life he voted with the Democratic party. He filled various town offices at different times throughout his life, serving as a school committee, selectman and assessor, and had presided as moderator of town meetings for 21 years. He was made justice of the peace in 1868, and held the appointment at the time of his death. In 1870 he was sent to the Legislature, and his service there as well as his frequent attendance upon political conventions, brought him a wide acquaintance with public men. Funeral services were held at home Tuesday afternoon, and no more fitting testimonial could be paid to the qualities of mind and heart of the departed citizen, neighbor and friend, than that embodied in the remarks of Rev. Mr. Peirce, who had known him long and intimately. Mr. Peirce spoke of his mental traits and habits, and dwelt upon his generous sympathies and his never-failing readiness to aid others in the many ways in which he was capable of rendering service. His kindly spirit extended to his public utterance, and the heat of debate aroused no bitterness of thought or feeling, and yet with all these social qualities, and all this breadth of interest, the place where his life was centered was his home, where his presence meant so much of hope, good cheer and helpfulness. His name belongs in that honored list of leading spirits of this town, in the roll of those old citizens of another generation, now nearly all passed away, whose public spirit, activity and usefulness for many years entitled them to be called the "pillars of the town."

CARD.—I wish to express my appreciation and heartfelt thanks to Good Cheer Lodge, D. of R., and also to the neighbors and friends in Bondsville who so kindly assisted me in my trouble.

FORBES & WALLACE'S, SPRINGFIELD.

THE PRIVATE SALE

Of Oriental Rugs and Carpets begins this morning. Perhaps we never had a collection that our public will appreciate more. Every rug and carpet has been carefully selected; there's not an indifferent one in the lot.

We shall have no difficulty in selling the rugs as low as we sold rugs in our auction sales of the past, for these rugs have all come in under the new tariff, and our New York organization's rug expert secured them more successfully from their Eastern owners than ever. You have them very low. To illustrate:

Antique medium Kazaks, $8 to $12.
Antique large Kazaks, $18 to $22.
Antique Daghestans, $12 to $20.
Antique Persians, $25 and up.

FRESH FROM the MILLS.

Short lengths of American ginghams, 10 to 13 yards to the piece, 5 cents a yard. Just the patterns and qualities that cost 8 to 10 cents a yard, and there's not an undesirable piece among 'em. A few cases only.

Right aisle.

BLACK DRESS GOODS.

We've some new patterns of the Black Crepons to show; going to be worn largely this spring by fashionable people, $1 to $3.50 a yard.

Two of last spring's popular India Twills come again.

50 inches at 75 cents, used to be 75 cents and $1 a yard—the new tariff again.

HORSE FURNISHINGS.

We're getting the trade of the whole section. It's fast getting to be understood and talked of—the way we're doing the business.

Harnesses at $6.50, $7.50, $9, $9.75, $13, $25, up—you'd pay 25 per cent more for them in the regular way. And everything must be satisfactory to you or there's no trade.

CHAMBER SETS.

You'd expect to pay more for them—probably would elsewhere—but we have that knack of buying, whereby our customers get rock bottom prices.

See our Antique Finish, Maple and Imitation Mahogany Sets, large Mirrors.

These are the prices—$12.50, $13.90, $15, $17, $19, $21, $22.50.

Also a car load of medium priced sets in Solid Oak, Curly Birch and Bird's Eye Maple, ranging in price from $25 to $45. Exceptionally fine values and not to be duplicated.

Fourth floor.

CARPETS.

Agra Ingrain, weight 24 ounces to the yard, are not to be questioned for durability. Patterns and colors give the effect of fine Body Brussels. See the regular 80 cent Agra we are selling at 62½ cents and 75 cents a yard. Worth considering.

First floor.

BABY CARRIAGES.

Direct from the Heywood and Wakefield factories. Styles that are not to be surpassed, and a multitude of them are now in stock.

Upholsterings of Cloth, Silk, Plush, Corduroy and Silk Damask, Pongee and Lace Covered Parasols.

Prices—hardly necessary to mention them. They are always lowest with us.

Basement.

STRAW MATTINGS.

A mammoth stock. All the qualities and styles you could wish or imagine.

There's a good demand in these at 10c, 12½c, 15c, 19c and 25c a yard.

Fine Japanese Matting in the largest assortment we have ever shown. All desiring a superior article in this class of goods should inspect our line.

Fire Insurance Agency,

CARYL'S BLOCK,

PALMER, - - MASS.

I represent some of the largest companies, both stock and mutual, doing business in this state, and should be pleased to reckon you as one of my customers.

Will guarantee you security, promptness, economy, and a correctly written policy.

Thanking you for past favors, I am

Yours respectfully,

"My Trade will take anything I give them; they believe what I tell them; and I mean to sell them what I make the most on." That is what one grocer actually gives as a reason for selling washing powders—imitations—instead of the original and best washing compound—Pearline. If grocers and customers were all like these, the millions of women who are now blessing Pearline would still be doing useless hard work. But when you come across such a dealer, don't let him put you off with anything except Pearline. 337

It's Water-proof.

Interlined "Celluloid" Collars and Cuffs turn water like a duck's back and show neither spot nor soil. They are not effected by perspiration, and always look as if right out of the box. When they get soiled you can clean them in a minute by simply wiping off with a wet cloth. These are but a few of the advantages of wearing the "Celluloid" Collars and Cuffs. There are many others that you will readily discover the first time you wear one.

They are the only waterproof interlined collars and cuffs made. Be sure to get the genuine with this trade mark

A GOOD TESTIMONIAL.

"I have had for 27 years past, a badly diseased ankle bone. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Salt Rheum Cream healed it when all other medicines had failed, and medical authority had said the limb could never be used again.

A sore broke out on the ankle bone, and for 10 months the aged writer suffered day and night beyond the power of words to express.

A friend advised me to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I had no faith that any medicine would help me, but suffering as I did I thought I would try it, and purchased some, also a box of Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream. I used these medicines but a short time when my limb began to heal.

I will further add, among the many medicines I have tried for a diseased liver and kidneys, none has ever proved so helpful to me as Favorite Remedy. By stimulating and strengthening the enfeebled organs, even the encroachments of advanced age seem to be checked by its invigorating power.

I have thoroughly tested its true worth, and I know whereof I affirm, hoping all who read this will profit thereby, as the aged writer has, by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, been given very comfortable health for a person 70 years of age. Favorite Remedy is an invaluable medicine for children, as well as adults.

This testimonial is given from my own experience of these invaluable medicines." Mrs. Belinda Hodsdon' Haverhill, N. H.

No tribute to the efficacy of a medicine could be greater than these words of Mrs. Hodsdon, who voluntarily tells the story of her recovery. Thousands of men and women whose daily life is making severe draughts on their vitality, need Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. None are too old to be helped by it. It permanently cures dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney, liver and urinary troubles; for the ills peculiar to women it has no equal.—Haverhill, N. H., Courier.

A FRONT DOOR ROMANCE.

"Twenty-five cents, please."

It was the expressman who spoke. In his hand was a package done up in pink paper and fastened with a blue string. To the casual observer it would have seemed like a box of candy from Muyler's, but those who had made a lifelong study of packages, had they chanced that way that beautiful summer morning, while the robins carolled their happy lays on the soft green lawns of Bellvue Castle, would have known better. They could have told at a glance the package was not from Muyler's. The style of the knot on the string was sufficient to tell them that. Muyler's packers use the double bow, while this was the single; and in the string itself was evidence that it had come from elsewhere, for its blue was not that of Muyler, a heavenly translucent blue, but that deeper, more opalescent, insinuating blue, born not of heaven but of the sea—the sea that laps the romance-laden shores of the Mediterranean; the sea that kisses Spain, Italy and Africa alike, whose caressing touch is lavished upon those fortunate shores that hold it close, like a grateful prisoner who kisses the hand of his jailor, and who brings him comfort in his daily rounds. No; the package was not from Muyler's. It was from—but let us not anticipate.

The maid who opened the door in response to the expressman's ring, looked at him for a moment. She was not pretty, but she had an intelligent face, and the pink gown she wore gave her an attraction which could not be gainsaid.

"How much did ye say?" she said, eyeing the expressman narrowly.

He winced slightly under her gaze, but it was the wince of awe, of one who secretly loves, not the wince of dishonesty. He had stated the charge correctly, a fact which gave him courage in a moment to reply' "Twenty-five cents, please."

The maid took the package from the expressman's hand.

"Sign here," he said, holding up his receipt book.

The girl looked at him. "There?" she asked, pointing to a vacant line with her finger—a dainty one, indeed, considering her station in life.

"No," said he. "There!' placing his thumb on the line below the one she had indicated.

She tossed her head scornfully. She had made a mistake. She knew that, but woman-like she did not wish to admit it. with her nose high, she retorted:

"Well— what'll I sign it with? The hat rack or the door-bell? Where's your pencil?"

That she expected him to wither under this was evident, but after all, he was a man. He was in love, but he did not forget that he was a man. How could he? Had he been otherwise would he have been employed by the express company to deliver packages, to drive a horse about that bleak country through wind and storm, in winter and in summer? No. Corporations have no souls, but soulless as they are, they would not ask a woman to do this cruel work. It was a man's work, and the work of a rugged man at that, and this is what brought to Patrick Mulvaney that morning an overpowering realising sense of the actualities—that he was a man, and as a man could not quail. Hence it was, that he did not wither as she had intended. Proudly raising his head, he replied:

"I guess you could write as well with the hat rack as with a pencil. Perhaps I'd better sign for you."

The retort was unexpected, and Norah tottered mentally for on instant. Vainly she searched her brain for a bit of pertinent repartee. If she allowed this onslaught to go unmet, what would the future be? Patrick came daily and it was her duty to open the door when he came. She must meet him as long as she retained her position, and yet she felt that if she allowed him to triumph on this occasion she could never look him in the face again. It was a terrible moment. Her position was at stake. She had often wondered what she would do in a crisis and now she was face to face with one. In an instant she recovered her equilibrium.

"Gimme the pencil!" she said, scornfully.

Patrick fumbled in his pocket for a moment and brought forth a small stump sharpened at one end. The girl took it furiously. Never before had Patrick Mulvaney seemed so handsome. She was angry with him, and he with her, but he nevertheless looked every inch the man he was.

"He's got some spunk, after all," she thought to herself as she abruptly signed the book. "I wouldn't mind being Mrs. Patrick Mulvaney."

Then the expressman mounted his wagon and moved away; as he disappeared down the road Norah sighed and went back to her work, but half-heartedly. The contest of the morning had revealed to her heart her heart's own unsuspected secret.

She loved Patrick Mulvaney.

It was 7.30 in the evening, and again the front-door bell rang.

"What!" cried Norah as she opened the door and saw Mulvaney standing before her. "You here again?"

"Yes," he replied, softly. "Yes—Miss O'Brien—Norah—I am."

"Well?"

"I have come to ask you if you mean it," he whispered, hoarsely.

"Mean what?" she asked, curiously.

"This," he replied, pointing to the signature she had written.

Norah looked, and her face burned with blushes as she read the words. She hid her blushes in her hands, murmered a soft "Yes, Pat—I do—I will be," and slammed the door in his face.

What she had written in the morning was this, "Mrs. Patrick Mulvaney."—Harper's Bazar.

"It was Sydney Smith," said the quotatious boarder, "who said that Daniel Webster was a steam engine in trousers, wasn't it?"

"I don't know whether Sydney said anything of the kind or not," chipped in the Cheerful Idiot, "but everybody knows that a steam engine of any kind has loud pants."

The lone fly who had been trying to live through the winter gave it up and plunged headlong into the cream gravy.—Indianapolis Journal.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles of LeGro & Lynde, Palmer; G. L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware.

L. Keeney, Monson; F. A. Spencer, Ware

Spring Medicine

Is a necessity because the tonic of winter air is gone, and milder weather, increased moisture, accumulated impurities in the blood and debilitated condition of the body, open the way for that tired feeling, nervous troubles, and other ills. The skin, muccus membrane and the various organs strive in vain to relieve the impure current of life. They all welcome to assist Nature at this time when she most needs help, to purify the blood, tone and strengthen the laboring organs and build up the nerves.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"Two years ago I took several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla when I was in poor health, and it increased my weight to one hundred and ten pounds, the most I ever weighed. Last winter after an attack of the grip I was left in a weakened condition in the spring. I had no appetite and I fell off in weight to ninety-four pounds.

Purifies The Blood

I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla again, and after taking two bottles I have gained eleven pounds in weight." P. ISABELLE BENTLEY, West Millbury, Mass.

NEW LIFE.

Breck's "New Life" Pea is similar to the once famous Stratagem of which so much was expected, having all of its merits, but none of its faults. While the Stratagem, not being a fixed type, deteriorated, the "New Life" has advanced wonderfully, until now in its perfected state we do not hesitate to recommend it as the best main crop pea for market or private use in existence.

Chronic Nervousness

Could Not Sleep, Nervous Headaches.

Gentlemen:—I have been taking your Restorative Nervine for the past three months and I cannot say enough in its praise. It has

Saved My Life,

for I had almost given up hope of ever being well again. I was a chronic sufferer from nervousness and could not sleep. I was also troubled with nervous headache, and had tried doctors in vain, until I used your Nervine. MRS. M. WOOD, Ringwood, Ill.

"I may be in bad odor," chuckled the aged egg, "but I'm hard to beat just the same."—Philadelphia Record.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advise is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means to not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will releive the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left should er had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well-known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamderlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three application of it," he says, "and have since been free from all paln." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted.

forms of Consumption can be cured. You have been told otherwise? Yes; so have others. But facts disprove the statement. This is not an age of impossibilities. Scientists have discovered the cause of Consumption, and how it can be prevented and cured. It is a contagious disease, and it is caused by a germ. It can be cured by destroying the germ.

Ozomulsion

TRADE MARK.

does this. It is a scientific compound of Cod Liver Oil, Ozone and Guaiacol. It is unlike any other preparation of Cod Liver Oil, because it contains Ozone and Guaiacol, the destroyers of germ life. That is why it cures consumption and all wasting diseases. It does not treat symptoms, but strikes at the cause—the poisonous germs. It kills them first and then builds up the wasted tissues. The Cod Liver Oil does the building—that's all. It can't destroy the germs; Ozone and Guaiacol do that. All the Cod Liver Oil in the world couldn't kill a germ. He would simply live on it—and grow fat. Ozomulsion cures because it first destroys the cause of disease and then restores the wasted body to a healthy condition. It is not an experiment. Thousands of people attest its value. Good results are always proof of merit. It is

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy,

The Spring is your most dangerous time!

Get your blood pure and your nerves strong.

Guaranteed Purely Vegetable and Harmless, IS THE GREATEST AND BEST

Spring Medicine!

Are You Prepared for Spring?

S. W. NOURSE, Esq.

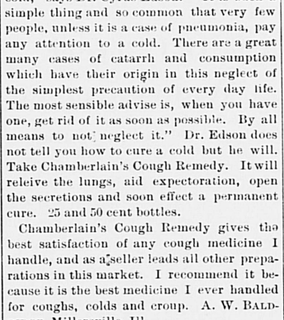
It is necessary to prepare yourself for the advent of spring by taking a spring medicine. Use the remedy which cured S. W. Nourse, Esq., of Hudson, Mass.

"From constant worry over business matters," he said, "I suffered from the loss of sleep, and became so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business. In fact, I feared insanity. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep, mental composure, appetite, and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results."

He was Cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

How to Get Well and Keep Well.

Do You Feel Weak, Tired, and Nervous?



MRS. OLIVER WILSON.

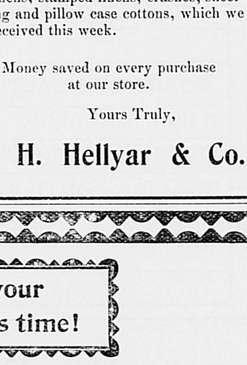
The wonderful cure of Mrs. Oliver Wilson, of Northboro, Mass., will interest you.

"I was suffering from nervousness," she says, "caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and was troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and have obtained my old elastic step around the house, to the surprise of my friends. After creeping around for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly. I know of many others whom it has cured and who speak most highly in praise of it."

Everybody Should take a Spring Medicine.

Read this and You Will Know What to Use.

Mrs. Elmer Craig, of LeRoy, Ill., tells you how you can be well and strong:

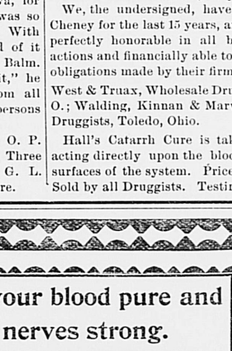


MRS. ELMER CRAIG.

"I was stricken with nervous disease," she says, "which affected my heart, head, and stomach. I doctored with physicians of our town, but got no relief from the terrible sick headaches, pains in the heart and stomach until I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Before I used this wonderful medicine the nerves in my eyes were so affected that I feared that I would lose my sight. I would get so nervous and weak I could not walk across the room without terrible palpitation of the heart. I had not taken one bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy before my head and eyes were cleared of their dull achiag, and I am growing stronger every day. I cannot do half justice in the praise of this medicine."

Is Your Blood Pure, Are Your Nerves Strong?

Mr. Seth E. Parsons, of 22 Park St., Albany, N. Y., one of Albany's most prominent business men, states:



MR. SETH E. PARSONS.

"I was very nervous. I could not hold my hands still, especially my left hand; there was an involuntary contraction of the muscles and movement of the fingers.

"My food troubled me very soon after eating. My kidneys and bladder were affected so it was difficult to urinate freely.

"I used the celebrated medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and without being tedious reciting my experience, I can say that these difficulties have left me, and my nerves are quiet and my food does not distress me.

"I feel without hesitation in saying that I think Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has produced these favorable results."

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Cured Him.

To get well and to keep well, take

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

It is the discovery and Prescription of a successful Physician.

DR. GREENE, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle. Accept no substitute. This remedy has no equal.

The Winds Of March.

Up from the sea the wild north wind is blowing
Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling, I watch the shaken elm-boughs, knowing
It is the wind of March.

The stormy farewell of a passing season
Leaving, however rued
Or sad in painful recollection, reason
For reverent gratitude.

Welcome of weary hearts its harsh forewarning
Of light and warmth to come,
The longed-for joy of Nature's Easter morning,
The earth arisen in bloom! breaking;

In the loud tumult winter's strength is
I listen to the sound,
As to a voice of resurrection, waking
To life the dead, cold ground.

Between these gusts, to the soft lapse I harken
Of rivulets on their way;
I see these tossed and naked tree-tops darken
With the fresh leaves of May.

This roar of storm, this sky so gray and lowering,
Invite the airs of spring;
A warmer sunshine over fields of flowering,
The bluebird's song and wing.

Closely behind, the Gulf's warm breezes follow
This northern hurricane,
And, borne thereon, the bobolink and swallow
Shall visit us again.

And in green wood-paths, in the kine-fed pasture
And by the whispering rills,
Shall flowers repeat the lessons of the Master,
Taught on His Syrian hills.

Blow, then, wild wind! thy roar shall end in sighing,
Thy chill in blossoming;
Come, like Bethesda's troubling angel, bringing
The healing of the spring.

—John Greenlief Whittier.

A TEST OF LOVE.

"I hate her," cried Maysie, "yes, I do!" John laughed as the little fist clinched until the palm was pink and the brown eyes flashed fire, and as he laughed Maysie's anger grew.

"I hate her so I can't sleep at night, and all because she is making a fool of you, John Stratton, the—the white-faced witch." Now, that was a different matter to what he had looked on as only a pretty ebullition of jealousy on the part of Maysie Bruce most gratifying to his vanity, but to be told that another woman was simply making a fool of him was hurtful to that same vanity, and it was now his turn to feel the blood rush to his sunburnt cheek.

"Miss Lawrence is a refined and cultured woman whose society I enjoy, and who is good enough to seem to enjoy mine," was his stiff reply to poor Maysie, who felt singularly rustic and ignorant as he said it and fell to stirring up the snow with her pretty foot. A moment before she had been so pleased to meet John, for it had been a long week since he had come to see her, and she had heard from 20 busy tongues like so many pin pricks of his visits to the big white house on the hill, where the beautiful Miss Lawrence, the belle of Youngtown, was staying with Mrs. Ross, the judge's wife. But Maysie was loyal and put aside the pain in her heart to smile at him when he had overtaken her on the way from the village, hoping to wile him back to his allegiance by the winsome ways that had bound him before.

She had been a gay enough little coquette until now, but all the joyous caprice and fascination was gone with the coming of this sorrowful conviction that John was growing away from her. At his sharp words now the tears rose to her eyes, and she grew intent on her task of stirring up the powdery snow, but John paid no attention to the small, well booted foot which he had praised in happier times, nor, what was worse, to the tears, but turned back pettishly with a short good-by, leaving Maysie to go on her way home alone, while he walked hastily up the hill to where his enchantress waited in the warm scented drawing room, beside a glowing fire of coals, and who welcomed the stalwart young fellow with a languid smile that yet had in it something of appreciation of his handsome face and well-knit figure.

Miss Lawrence had grown blasé in the several years that lay between her and her school days, and had struck most of the chords in the men's hearts, but even her jaded fancy was taken by John Stratton's admiring blue eyes and his gentle deference to her as a creature too fair and dainty for everyday life, and she exerted herself with an anxiety that surprised her more than any one else to keep him by her side. She had heard of Maysie, and with all the cruelty that lurks in the feminine breast had found new zest in the affair in consequence.

While John sat and talked and admired in that warm parlor beside Miss Lawrence, poor Maysie walked slowly home, finding the world a sad place, and feeling for the first time in her short, bright life that death was not a terrible thing after all. With a pathetic honesty she acknowledged that the woman that had stolen her lover was very fair, and did not doubt her many charms to hold him by her side, and as she thought of the pale golden locks of that rival and the violet eyes she felt that she hated her own soft, brown hair and her eyes, that John had once said were like woodland pools. As she choked up at this remembrance a voice hailed her: "Why, Maysie, going to walk right over a fellow? On your way home? Well, I think I had better go with you or you will be getting lost if you are so oblivious of a six-footer like me."

Maysie started guiltily with a cry. The speaker was Trueman Ellis, who worshipped her ever since her babyhood, through tyranny and discouragement on the part of his ladylove. She had accepted his devotion as she had other of the good things of life, without a thought of what it cost, and to-day, with a petulancy foreign to her sweet nature, she tore her arm from the one in which he had placed it and cried:

"Oh, how you startled me! No, I don't want company, thank you." Then as she saw his face fall her tender heart prompted her to add: "I—I am not very well, I think, and I would be poor company for you, Trueman. Good-by." The young man stood still in the path where she left him, his own heart sore for the little creature who had been so bright and gay, for he, too, had seen how often John Stratton had gone to the judge's of late, and he knew why poor Maysie was "not very well, and would be poor company" for the first time in her life. But what could he do? So with a sigh he stood and watched the little figure in the brown cloak walk wearily on to the old farmhouse by the river, where she was the petted darling of the elderly father and mother, who had only her left of the crowd of little ones that had once made bright the low, wide rooms and old-fashioned garden.

That night the judge's home was brilliant with many lights, for Miss Lawrence had organized amateur theatricals to enliven her time in Cloverdale, and the elite of the place was to assist in them. To John Stratton had been given a part with the beauty herself, and he was full of pride and pleasure with never a thought of the pathetic face that had looked into his that snowy evening. In the old farmhouse Maysie sat disconsolate with her thoughts far away at that bright scene in which she had no share, picturing Miss Lawrence more beautiful than ever, and in John's blue eyes that look of devotion that had stolen her own heart away. The old people nodded before the fire, and at last Maysie could stand it no longer, but throwing on her long brown cloak with its close hood made her way to the hill on which stood the judge's mansion.

Her only thought was to see for herself what John was doing and to pierce her own heart with the sight of her rival's charms. So she never saw the figure that followed her, amazed to see her out in the cold night. On she went, and reaching the house took her place close to one of the long windows opening on to the snow-covered lawn, there to press her small, pale face close to the glass and peer in at the busy figures who, the theatricals over, were dancing to the music of the band, the notes of which Maysie never will forget to the end of her life. Once she came near being detected, for Miss Lawrence, leaning on John Stratton's arm, opened the window by which she crouched, saying aloud that the air of the room was oppressive for all it was so cold outside. But, hiding under a rose tree that gripped her with its thorns, Maysie was unseen in the brief moment it pleased the capricious belle to stand in the icy air.

They went away after that, and the poor girl saw John, who did not dance, leaning against the wall looking after Miss Lawrence, waltzing with another man, with his heart in his eyes. But all at once the unseen watcher saw the lady clasp her hand suddenly about her throat, with the gesture of one who had missed something, and then the dance came to an end, while every one joined in the search for the lost object. Miss Lawrence went hastily to the window, and throwing it open said in her high, clear voice, "I must have dropped it when I stood here." And then before Maysie could spring—a movement all the company saw—she was seized by the arm, her rival's fingers closing on the tender flesh with a strength that held her fast.

"You have my diamond cross, girl, and are now trying to run away with it," and dragged the terror-stricken child into the midst of the gaily dressed assembly.

"Give it to me at once, and you can go free for all I care," said Miss Lawrence, pitying in spite of herself the white-faced little creature whom she had often seen gazing after her with such wistful eyes that could not, however, touch her into leaving her lover. Maysie turned her face to John, who stood amazed and bewildered, looking from one to the other, for he thought that Miss Lawrence must have some grounds for her accusation, but never darting to Maysie's side, as she half expected him to do. The poor girl turned sick and blind and would have fallen to the floor, but at that moment an indignant voice behind caused her and all the company to give their attention to Trueman Ellis.

"How dare you accuse that young lady of theft! Do you not know who this is? This is Miss Maysie Bruce, who is as incapable of the act as an angel in heaven. And look, is not that your cross caught in the lace of your bosom?

Miss Lawrence looked down, and flushing all over her face disengaged the jewel from the torn place in the lace, then stammered out an apology to fainting Maysie, but Trueman Ellis paid no heed, and passing his arm about his poor little love led her from the room. John Stratton followed and would have taken her from him with tender words of contrition, for in that moment he had found out that he loved Maysie and that the glamour thrown over him by Miss Lawrence was but for an hour, but Trueman sternly put him aside, and Maysie, burying her face in her true lover's breast, would not look at him, but, clinging to Trueman, let him lead her home.

Miss Lawrence found to her chagrin that she had lost her whilom lover, and went home in a few days, carrying a memory with her that did not fade soon. John sought Maysie the next day and pleaded with her to give him back the love he had slighted, but though she forgave him readily enough, for her nature was too sweet to bear resentment, the recollection of his averted face in her hour of need was too fresh for her to ever restore him to his old place in her heart, and in the spring she married Trueman Ellis, who had won her that dreadful night.—Willa Lloyd Jackson, in Philadelphia Times.

FIRST TIME HE HAD SEEN A LOCOMOTIVE.

Recently a very enthusiastic Republican candidate for Congress, in endeavoring to show his hearers that he had unknowingly predicted the outcome of the last election, by being misquoted in the papers, told this story:

On Sand Mountain, in the northern part of Alabama, dwells a class of people who know very little of the outside world, and a great many of the young men never leave the farm until they reach manhood. Tom and Bill were of this class, and upon their 21st birthday resolved to go to Chattanooga and see the sights. Early in the morning they started on foot, and at about 4 in the afternoon reached the track of the A. G. S. railroad, just north of Collinsville.

"This 'ere must be a railroad shoo nuff," exclaimed Tom, "fur I done seed pichers look 'zactly like this in their almnack."

"Yes," says Bill, "but whar's them steamcars?"

"Dunno," was the reply, "but let's walk 'long this 'ere road and maybe we done found some."

Up the track towards Chattanooga they started. They walked until dark without finding any "steam-cars" or reaching a town, and being tired out, they decided to lie down by the side of the track and wait until morning, which they did, and soon fell asleep. About midnight the through express came thundering along, and as she struck the grade, just ahead of where the boys had camped for the night, the engineer put on all steam and the fireman threw the coal into her as fast as he could handle the shovel: the great head-light flashed, the sparks rolled out of her stack in clouds, while the fire flew from her wheels as they slipped on the heavy grade. As she went tearing by Tom awoke, and, sitting bolt upright with his eyes bulging from his head, gave Bill a kick and cried: "Bill, Bill, for God sakes wake up; the'r movin' hell and the first load has just gone by."

TRIBUTE TO FREDERICK DOUGLAS.

A Washington pastor, in an eloquent sermon on the life of Frederick Douglas, said: "We had hoped that the remains of Frederick Douglas would have been buried here at the national capital, under the shadow of the dome, within sight of the Goddess of Liberty; but ere his death, like Joseph of old, he gave commandment concerning his bones. It was his wish to be buried in the land of freedom, of equality before the law, where a man is not judged by the color of his skin, but by his manhood and by his merits. The action of the New York Assembly and the great honor done to his remains by distinguished citizens of Rochester justify the wisdom of his choice. New York in honoring Douglas honored herself. So did the nation; so did the world. He was listened to in his life-time as no other negro was. His death has touched the American conscience as the death of no other negro could. He has made the road smoother and easier for those who are to follow him, and when the illustrious dead of all nations shall stand in the presence of God and the roll of earth's great men shall have been called, prominent among them will be the name of Frederick Douglas."

A PENSIONER OF THE WAR OF 1812

Living in Monson. She Talks About Her Life to a Journal Reporter.

There has recently moved into the village from what is familiarly known as the Butler district, in the west part of the town, an old lady by the name of Mrs. Deborah Cady, whose husband, William Cady, served in the little unpleasantness which arose in 1812 between our ancestors and Mother England. A JOURNAL representative called upon Mrs. Cady a short time ago with a view to obtaining some of the interesting reminiscences of her life for publication, and found her to be a sprightly little body albeit her eighty-three years, with sharp blue eyes and an abundance of snowy hair, but a face which shows the ravages of time. Although not unwilling to speak of her life, which has been one of ups and downs, she was a trifle nervous at first. The reporter, however, was prepared for this and had taken along a small package of snuff, for which Mrs. Cady, like many other elderly people, have a weakness. This put the two on most excellent terms at once, and Mrs. Cady told her story very entertainingly, speaking in short, crisp sentences. She first spoke of her late husband.

"He was eighteen years old," she said, when he was drafted into the war, and he lost two fingers and all his property by going. He was a private in Captain James Clark's company, Connecticut Militia." Then she spoke of herself, saying: "I was born in Tolland, state of Connecticut, the ninth day of February, 1812, about the time William went to war, but I didn't know there was such a person for years afterwards. I experienced religion when I was only ten years old, and the Lord has blessed me ever since. I joined the church when I was sixteen." "What church?" was asked. "The Methodist church, or Christ's church, I call it, for we are all Christ' schildren, aren't we? I attended a private school until I was fourteen, when I went to live with Nathan Eaton and his wife over in Somers. I stayed there till I was seventeen, and I used to pull and spin and swindle flax and spin wool, and do lots of other things," she quaintly said. From there I went to Ludlow, up here in Massachusetts, to work in a factory, but I didn't enjoy that very well so didn't stay long. Then I went to Chaplin, Ct., where I engaged in the silk business. I made in that more money than any one else around there, and I liked the work, too. I used to bring the eggs out of the cellar in the spring and put them on newspapers, where they would be warm and dry. The eggs were about as big as mustard-seed, and I moved them about with the point of a pin. In a little while the worms began to hatch out, and I scattered lots of fresh mulberry leaves all around for them to eat. Had to grow the mulberry tree on purpose, you know. When the worms got a little larger I put them on fresh paper on shelves where they would be protected, but still have the warm sunlight. Of course I had to keep adding fresh all the time because the worms ate so many. When the worms were full grown—about two inches long—I put bushes on the shelves and the worms crawled on those and wound themselves up in balls of silk, and finally came out moths. The moths I put down cellar for seed the next spring. I steamed the balls of silk to soften the gum which was at one end, and then reeled the silk off on patent reelers. Then I spun and skeined it ready for the mills. I knit three pairs of silk stockings for myself, and kept them until the house I lived in burned down and they went with all the rest. That was twenty-two years ago. I was twenty-six when I married Mr. Cady at Brooklyn, Connecticut, and he was forty-four and a widower. His son, Henry Washington Cady, was as good a boy as ever lived. He was ingenious, too. He patented a dress binding and made money on it. He was killed, poor boy, in the last war. His widow lives in Chaplin now. Mr. Cady owned a farm and run a grist and saw mill when I married him, but he sold out after a while and we went to Ellington. He died there in '55. I lived there for thirty years. When my house burned, that I told you about, I bought one at Square Pond, or Crystal Lake, they call it now, and went there to live. About ten years ago I sold that house and moved to Monson, over in the Butler district. This winter I came up here with my daughter, Mrs. Barnes. My other two children, Mrs. Mary Knapp and Jarvis E. Cady, live in Stafford. I lost all my money in a bank failure a few years ago, and my pension, three dollars a month, is all I have to live on. Can't you help me get it raised? Don't you think the government ought to give me a little more than that?"

The reporter paid Mrs. Cady a second visit on the 4th of March, and found that she had had a severe attack of the grippe, but was very anxious to get down street and have her pension voucher made out, also to have her photograph taken for the JOURNAL, which she did next day.

ART IN THE OCCIDENT.

The following is said to be a verbatim account of the introduction of an eminent violinist to a far Western audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen," began Colonel Handy Polk, the well-known real estate agent, stepping to the front of the stage and addressing the audience, "it is my privilege this evenin' to interduce to you Signor——, the notorious furrin fiddler, who will endeavor to favor us with some high-class and A No. 1 violin-playin'. The signor was born and raised in Italy, where fiddlin' is not merely a fad, but as much of a business as politics is in this country, and when it comes to handlin' the bow he emphatically knows whur he is at. He hasn't dropped into our midst by accident, but comes under the auspices of the Literary Society, which is payin' his wages and backin' him to the last gasp. So let it be understood that if you happen to have any criticisms to offer, you are to do your kickin' to the society, and not to the signor. I'll just add that if you expect him to swing the fiddle around his head or play it under his leg, like we used to skip stones across the swimmin'-hole when we were little boys and girls, you may just as well go right now and git your money back from the doorkeeper, for the signor hain't that kind of a player. That's all I have to say at present. Start her up, signor."—Harper's Magazine.

PALMER NEWS.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING.

An Unusually Large Vote. Complete Schedule of the Returns.

In spite of the cold and windy weather and the rough roads, the vote at the annual town meeting on Monday was a great deal of a surprise to every one, for out of the 1150 names on the voting list 907 were checked as having appeared at the town house, the largest vote ever recorded in the history of the town. About 180 went from this village on the first train in the morning, many were already present from the other villages, and as soon as the polls were opened the voting began, and only three times up to the closing of the polls at 2.30 in the afternoon was the line clear. But little was heard regarding town officials, the main interest being centered on the license question, and every voter possible was hustled out. The counters began work soon after 1 o'clock, and were ready with result soon after six. The votes for the different candidates can be seen by the following table, a star (*) indicating election:

As soon as the voting was under way it was moved that a committee of fifteen be appointed to consider all articles in the warrant not relating to election of officers, and report at an adjourned meeting, as has been the custom for several years, and later in the day the moderator, W. W. Leach, appointed as that committee D. L. Gardner, H. P. Holden, J. F. Twiss, C. H. Hobbs, F. A. Upham, J. C. Greene, Rev. W. H. Hart, L. E. Moore, Maurice Moriarty, H. T. Bishop, F. F. Marcy, T. W. Kenefick, H. C. Strong, J. S. Loomis and R. L. Bond. The adjourned meeting will be held next Thursday at 9 o'clock a. m.

A YOUNG MAN POISONED.

Supposed A. P. A. Man Made Ill by Croton Oil, Thought to Have Been Put in His Coffee.

Henry Stimson of Palmer Center, employed in the mill at Thorndike, has had a narrow escape from death by poison, though whether it was administered in fun by some one who thought to drive him from his place in the mill, or given with serious intent, is not known. At all events an overdose was instrumental in saving his life. The day after the Republican caucus some of the operatives in the mill accused Stimson of being a member of the A. P. A. and voting against the nomination of Rev. W. H. Hart for school committee. Stimson made no attempts to deny the charge, but when they made the same statements about his father, with other remarks of a like nature, he made an emphatic denial, asserting that his father had voted for Mr. Hart's nomination. Some of the employes seemed to harbor an ill-will against him, however, and one of the women operatives told him the mill would be made too hot for him. Several attempts were made to force him into a quarrel, and on one occasion a Polander with whom he was talking through an interpreter (whom Stimson thinks did not interpret his sayings correctly) attacked him, and in defending himself his opponent got a severe choking.

Stimson has been carrying his dinner with him to his work, and last Friday he did not drink all his cofiee at noon, but finished it when leaving the mill at night for home. He ate his supper as soon as he reached there, and soon after complained of severe pains. Drs. Bell and Desmarais attended him, and agreed that he had been poisoned with Croton oil, which it is supposed was put into his coffee at the mill, possibly with the intention of scaring him away from the place, though there is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage. Stimson is out of danger, but is not yet able to return to work.

The State's Turn Now.

Walter H. Williams, living on State avenue, just over the line in Monson, who last week refused to allow an inspector from the State Cattle Commission to kill one of his cows—which had been condemned as affected with tuberculosis—until the animal had been paid for, locking up the barn and refusing to allow the officers to enter, was arrested last Saturday afternoon on the complaint of the cattle commissioners, and bound over to the hearing, which is set for Saturday, the 30th, at 11 a. m., in the sum of $1000, which was furnished by Sherman and Merrill Stebbins. There are ten counts against Williams, including interfering with an inspector by preventing him from entering a barn for the purpose of inspecting an animal; the preventing and obstructing an agent of the board from taking possession of an animal which had been ordered killed; breaking quarantine and slaughtering a cow which had been condemned; selling for food the carcass of two cows which had been condemned. At the same time Merrill A. Stebbins was arrested on four counts,—breaking quarantine and removing a cow which had been condemned; disobeying the order of the inspector by removing a condemned cow; selling a diseased cow while knowing her to be diseased; knowingly concealing a cow while knowing her to be diseased. Bail in his case was fixed at $500, and was furnished by Sherman Stebbins. Great interest is manifested in this matter by the farmers, many of whom are of the opinion that the state has no right to kill an animal until it has been paid for, holding that a law which compels the farmer to do a trust business is not constitutional, and the court room will very likely be crowded at the trial.

Injustice to a Palmer Family.

A dispatch from Nashua, N. H., to the daily papers of last Friday announced the death in that place of a woman whose name was said to be Mrs. Daisy Cobb, daughter of Mrs. W. F. Whitcomb of Palmer, and her 18-months-old child, through want. The story was that Mrs. Cobb, accompanied by her brother, had come to Nashua after being turned out of the home of her mother in Palmer; that the brother found work there, but when his sister was taken sick was compelled to stay with her and so could earn nothing, and his money soon gave out, the woman dying after giving birth to a child.

The facts are that "Mrs. Cobb," as she called herself,—though she was never married,—who was a daughter of Mrs. Whitcomb by a former marriage, wrote her mother some time ago asking permission to come to her at Palmer, but was told not to come, as the mother could not afford to keep her and the child; she came from Boston, however, on the 26th of February, accompanied by her brother, and remained until the 4th of March, when they were given $10 with which to get to New Hampshire, where they said they had friends; the rest is told in the dispatch to the daily papers. The blame which is laid on Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb is unjust, however. When they were married Mrs. Whitcomb had three children, who were all adopted into good families, the girl Daisy by a man by the name of Bickford at Piermont, N. H. She lived here with her mother for a while a couple of years ago, when her waywardness was known, and after all attempts at reformation had failed Mrs. Whitcomb did not feel called upon or able to support her this time.

Death of John Foster.

The town has lost another worthy and respected citizen in the death of John Foster, who went to his rest Tuesday night, after a short illness of two weeks. He was born in Palmer, July 5, 1810, and consequently had nearly reached the rounded age of 85 years. He married, Sept. 4, 1838, Miss Mary Sedgwick of Palmer, with whom he lived in happy companionship for nearly 57 years. His great-grandfather, Solomon Foster, came to Palmer from the Brookfields in 1790, since which time the name has been an honored one both in church and civil affairs of the town. His mother was Prudence Brown, a descendant from one of the pioneer settlers of Palmer. Mr. Foster was one of eight children born to Dea. Abel W. Foster, only two of whom survive him, Mrs. David P. Bidings of Ware and Dea. Freeman S. Foster of this town. The surviving members of his own family are his wife and adopted daughter, Mrs. W. R. Milligan.

With the exception of one year spent in a store in Ware, Mr. Foster has been a life resident of Palmer. He devoted his earliest years to farming on the old Foster homestead in the north part of the town, where by frugality and industry he acquired a competency which enabled him some 25 years ago to retire to a well-earned home in this village, where he has since resided in the enjoyment of a serene old age, with the full retention of his mental faculties to the last moment. Mr. Foster always took a lively interest in the progressive affairs of the town, and when the Palmer Savings Bank was organized he was elected one of the first trustees, a position which he held several years. He was never ambitious for office, and never held any official civic position, thereby escaping the many annoyances which always attend the possessor of public trusts. He was content with the blessings which the fireside afforded him, and there greatly enjoyed communing with the many friends who called upon him, especially in his later years. He was a life-long Republican, but he quietly voted his ticket, and was willing others should do the same.

There are lives which glide along like the silent river through green meadows, gathering to themselves the genial sunshine of each day's journey, seemingly exempt from the storms and vicissitudes which mar and vex the progress of others. Something like this seemed to be the life of Mr. Foster, who possessed that happy faculty which allowed his life to pass serenely on to the final consummation. He was a man of dignified bearing, yet of unassuming manners; of grave conversation which impressed one with the deep sincerity of his heart. He was not given to demonstrative profession, but he possessed a deep religious conviction which was the anchor of his life; he devoted much time to his Bible, which was the guide to his actions, and when health permitted was an interested attendant at the Congregational church, the doctrines of which he had received as his own in early life. If a worthy example and an irreproachable life is of any value, then such a life as Mr. Foster lived was a grand success, and must leave its impress for good upon the community.

The funeral was held this afternoon at the late residence of Mr. Foster, Rev. Frank E. Jenkins officiating.

Funeral of Dr. W. H. Stowe.

The funeral of Dr. W. H. Stowe was held Tuesday afternoon. After a prayer at the house by Rev. H. F. Moulton the body was taken to the Universalist church, where long before three o'clock, the time announced for the services, every seat was filled. After singing by the choir and reading of the Scriptures by Rev. Mr. Moulton, pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. Eaton of New York, a former pastor of the church and warm friend of the deceased, spoke feelingly and eloquently of the departed, alluding to his constant endeavors for the good of the town as a whole, being at the front in every good work; of his special love for the young and his many plans for their welfare; and of his tender care and thoughtfulness toward his aged mother. The front of the church was nearly filled with flowers, which Dr. Stowe particularly loved. Among them were pieces from the Eastern Hampden Medical Association, the W. C. T. U., the Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church, and from the grammar school scholars in this village, this bearing the words "The children's friend—a token of love." Seats were reserved in the church for the medical association, and many of the members were present, as were also many friends from out of town. The stores of the village were closed during the services, and many of the employes in the mills were present. The bearers were Drs. Ballard of Hampden, Hannum of Ludlow, Gibbs and Berry of Chicopee Falls, Perry of Amherst and Webber of Wilbraham.

H. L. Holden was home from New York over Sunday.

The selectmen have organized with J. F. Twiss as chairman.

Mrs. G. F. Lord has gone to New York for a visit of a couple of weeks.

The interior of the new Odd Fellows' building will be plastered next week.

The bicycle club will move to new quarters in Lynde's block the first of April.

Dr. L. H. Hendee spent Sunday and a part of this week at his home in New York state.

G. H. Justin will to-morrow complete 25 years of service for the Boston and Albany railroad.

A portion of the tin roof on Holden & Fuller's woolen mill was blown off by the wind Tuesday.

Rev. S. T. Frost is moving his household goods to Long Plain, where he has secured a pastorate.

Mrs. Charles Edgerton of North Brookfield is spending the week with Mrs. C. F. Grosvenor.

The interior of W. F. Whitcomb's restaurant on Central street is being newly painted and papered.

At St. Paul's Universalist church next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "The All in All."

The Dr. J. K. Warren place on the corner of Central and Park streets has been sold through the D. F. Holden agency.

H. P. Holden's pacer "Roscoe," with a record of 2.12¾, was sold at auction at New York Wednesday, and brought $975.

Mass at St. Thomas's Catholic church next Sunday morning will be at 10 30, with Sunday school at 3 p. m. and vespers at 7 30.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a special meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

S. S. Nichols has leased the Plumley farm on State avenue, now occupied by W. H. Williams, and will take possession April first.

The first robin of the season was seen on Main street one day last week, and a number of bluebirds were seen on Wednesday of this week.

Rev. A. M. Hills of Oberlin, O., an evangelist, will hold a series of meetings in the Congregational church, commencing the first week in May.

A dog owned by W. H. Williams on State avenue, which had a habit of running out and barking at passing horses, was shot by some one the other evening.

A. E. Fitch accompanied his mother to New York on Monday, from which place she sailed on Wednesday for Guatemala, where she will reside with a daughter.

The large plate glass window in C. N. Blake & Co's. shoe store in Holden's block was smashed Monday afternoon by the breaking of the awning by the wind.

The carpet mill made a record for production in the week ending March 9th, turning out 6447½ yards, the greatest amount ever turned out in one week in the history of the mill.

R. J. Henry of Burlington, Vt., formerly of Palmer, is in town this week, and will very likely return here to live, going into business again, though in what line he has not yet decided.

There will be a prize speaking contest among the scholars of the high school in the school room next Friday morning, to which all parents of the scholars and friends of the school are invited.

Rev. Frank L. Ferguson will preach in the Congregational church next Sunday morning, and in the evening there will be a stereopticon review of the Sunday school lessons of the last quarter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Sexton are to leave their residence on Park street and will board with Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Knox. H. W. Smith will move from Converse avenue to Mr. Sexton's house.

The members of Palmer Lodge of Odd Fellows are requested to meet at the lodge rooms to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock, to make arrangements for the funeral of George A. Ramsden of Thorndike.

Mrs. Charlotte Brooks of Greenwich Village passed away last Friday at the age of 81, her husband having preceded her by several years. She leaves two daughters and one son, and several grandchildren.

J. W. Molloy expects to have his new steam laundry on Central street in operation early next week, and will probably deliver the first work from it next Thursday. All of the machinery put into the plant is new and of the most improved design.

There is always more or less "kicking" among the voters after the adjourned town meeting over the matter of the appropriations. The right way to do is for every interested voter to be present and express his opinion regarding the several matters as they come up, not to stay at home and then growl if things do not go just as they would like to have them.

At the last meeting of the trustees of the Palmer Savings Bank it was voted to change the business hours, which have been from 9 a. m. to 12 m. and from 1 to 4 p. m., and keep the bank open continuously from 9 a.m. to 3 p. m., thus giving persons who are employed during the day an opportunity to do business during the noon hour. The change will go into effect the first of April.

About 40 candidates for the office of census enumerators in the various towns around Palmer met here yesterday, and in the hall at the engine house took the examination given by the officials to determine upon the applicants most fit for the place. Twice as many names are sent in from each town as there are to be enumerators. From this town were sent in the names of Stever Knox, C. E. Dewey, J. K. Knox and J. K. Farrell.

At the meeting of the Quaboag Literary Circle last Friday evening J. H. Woolrich read an interesting paper on the ancient city of Chester, Eng.; Miss Flora Studley read one of Longfellow's poems, and the Round Table was in charge of Miss E. M. Pierce. H. C. Strong, G. P. Allen and W. A. Lawson were appointed a committee to draw up for the Circle suitable resolutions upon the death of Dr. Stowe, one of its founders and active members.

The barber shop of Joseph Provost has been entirely reconstructed within the past few weeks, and presents a much improved and very pleasing appearance. A new floor of different colored woods has been laid, the pieces so arranged as to give it the effect of being made of tiling; new bevel-edged plate glass mirrors extending almost the whole of the way across the side of the room have been put in, also a new cup rack and a rack for hats, etc., while fresh paint of a light shade enlivens the whole interior.

Engine No. 255, which has drawn Conductor Sedgwick's morning train north over the Ware River road for a long time, has been replaced by No. 201, which made the run yesterday morning for the first time. No. 255 was too light for the work required of her, and has been sold; No. 201 comes from the east end of the line, where she has been running on the suburban circuit, but was too light for the work there, but having larger cylinders and a boiler than No. 255, with smaller driving wheels, will give the additional power needed for the Ware River trains.

Delegates from Monson, Warren, Spencer, Worcester, Webster, Stafford Springs, Amherst and Springfield were present at the Western Massachusetts conference of the Y. P. C. U. in the Universalist church yesterday. Rev. T. C. Druly of Stafford Springs opened the morning session with devotional exercises, and was followed by Rev. W. W. Gleason of Warren with a paper on "Enthusiasm in Christian Union Work." The devotional exercises of the afternoon session were conducted by Rev. Harry Blackford of Monson, after which Rev. H. L. Canfield of Boston gave an address on "Methods in Union Work," he being followed by Rev. J. Harry Holden of Amherst on "The Relations of the Union to the Church and Parish." Supper was served from 5 to 6 by the Ladies' Social Union of the church. In the evening Rev. Dr. Almon Gunnison of Boston gave an address on "The Cost of Making a Boy."

District Court.

In the civel court last Saturday judgment for the defendant was rendered in the suit of replevin brought by Ella A. Brown, et al, against C. E. Shumway; plaintiff appealed. The case of Ella A. Brown against P. E. Bard, an action of contract, was heard, but judgment was reserved until to-morrow. These cases were entered: Wharton Butler of Wrentham against H. A. Northrop, action in tort; D. B. Kendrick of Palmer against C. H. Clark of Ludlow, action of contract.

In the criminal court Tuesday, John Peytko of Thorndike paid $10 for an assult on Rosa Zlotek. On Wednesday Fred Woodward and Fred Dockery paid $2 each for disturbing the peace on Walnut street Tuesday night; Louis Nephew was assessed $5 for drunkenness.

A Word of Caution.

Editor of the Journal:—One fact ought to be in the minds of our citizens. The plan will be tried at the adjourned town meeting, if its friends see any chance of carrying it through, to cut off all appropriations they possibly can this year, with the hope of running them up next year, when the town will probably vote no license, and making it appear that license causes a great difference in taxes. All citizens who believe in appropriations that are fair all around and truly economical, license or no license, should be on hand. These license people will find, by and by, that Lincoln uttered a truth when he said: "You may fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time." One man who has been talking A. P. A. doctrine privately to Protestants to accomplish one purpose at our coming town meeting, and anti-A. P. A. publicly (and in private to Catholics) to aid the license cause, has already found it true and is politically dead in this town.

Yours truly, FRANK E. JENKINS.
Palmer, Mass., March 21, 1895.

The Palmer High School Alumni.

The list published last week in the JOURNAL has brought to light the fact that I was in error in making the statement that the first class graduated in 1879, for a friend has brought me the official graduating exercises of 1887, which I gladly give herewith. I have also discovered the official class paper of 1889. Now if any one has the printed high school exercises of 1875, 6, 8, 1880, 1885, I shall esteem it a favor to be permitted to see them, for verification of the statement made that none graduated during these years, for if we are still lucky in having a complete list we wish to correct it.

GRADUATING CLASS OF 1887. E. G. BALDWIN, PRINCIPAL.

Inez B. Burleigh,	Sarah E. Knox,
Alice L. Holmes,	Carrie E. Lacey,
Martha L. Knox,	Jessie E. Parks.

CLASS OF 1884.

Lena M. Brown,	Helen L. Robinson.

I would suggest the above be pasted in the school report, with the list there given, to make it complete. O. P. ALLEN.

Why Is It?

Editor of the Journal:—The question is asked, and is a very proper one, "Why is it necessary to have between $300 and $400 abatement of taxes recorded every year?" In former times, when the collection of taxes was sold to the lowest bidder, at about half the price now paid, the collector hustled around with teams and collected the taxes, and small abatements were asked for. Since we have adopted the system of a high-priced collector who does not collect, it reminds one taxpayer of the Maine prohibitory law which does not prohibit. We also note the large amount of $8000 paid out in the settlement of one or more petty law suits, which report says could have been settled for a few hundred dollars if the finance board had worked in unison for a settlement. Now this is a bad precedent to set up, when parties by their own carelessness run off a sidewalk or into a ditch and bark their shins can collect thousands of dollars from the town, proving to be a bonanza for lawyers but an extra large assessment on the taxpayers, which should be avoided if possible. If the finances of the town are to drift on in this way we shall not only be the banner town for the highest tax rate of any in Western Massachusetts, which is now true, but shall want all the revenues from license and from all other appropriations.

ECONOMY IN APPROPRIATIONS.

PALMER CENTER.

Mr. Nelson of Worcester has taken possession of the Hurley farm, which he purchased recently.

Josiah Gates has removed to Thorndike this week, and A. H. Gates has taken possession of the farm.

A little child of George and Abbie White died Tuesday morning at the home of its grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Trumble.

BONDSVILLE.

Harry Ryther is preparing to close out his grocery store.

Mrs. Butler died yesterday and was buried at "Skeeterville."

Silas Collis, who sustained a slight shock yesterday, is somewhat better.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Fred Collis next Thursday afternoon.

Ray Morse of Belchertown was the guest of his cousin, Olin Parent, over Sunday.

Mrs. Samuel Millen, who has been on the sick list for the past few weeks, is recovering.

Charles Crouch of West Warren was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller Tuesday.

Miss Ora Parent of Smith College spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Parent.

Several from this place attended the funeral of Dr. W. H. Stowe at Palmer Tuesday.

Robert Smith, who has had charge of James Fuller's farm, has taken a position in South Hadley.

Prof. M. J. Sullivan of Chicopee, who is forming a class in vocal culture in this place, is meeting with good success.

An unusually large number of voters from this place attended the town meeting Monday, and the W. C. T. U. furnished a 'bus to carry the no-license voters.

St. Patrick's Day was appropriately observed in the Catholic church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Cruse spoke on "Virtues of the Irish Leaders" and "The Life of St. Patrick."

Owing to the inclement weather last Friday evening only a small attendance was present at Miss Cleveland's reception. Refreshments were served, and all who attended report a very enjoyable evening.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss M. L. Johnson will display to the ladies of Palmer and vicinity, a full line of Millinery, including trimmed hats and bonnets, THURSDAY and FRIDAY, April 4th and 5th.

Mrs. Amos Olds is quite ill.

Miss Addie Walker of Belchertown spent this week in town, visiting friends.

Mrs. White has returned from Worcester, where she attended the funeral of her sister.

Miss Addie Walker of Belchertown is spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Lavine.

Charles Prince, a former resident of this place, visited a number of his friends here yesterday.

The W. C. T. U. held its annual business meeting at the home of Mrs. S. B. Barnes this afternoon.

Mrs. F. W. Lavene and family will go to Centreville, Ct., next week, where they will spend a three weeks' vacation.

Mrs. Nutting, who has been spending several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Barnes, has gone to Brimfield to visit relatives there.

The public schools closed to-day until the 15th of April, on account of the prevalence of scarlet fever in town. Miss Helen Sweet, the principal, will go to her home in Shelbourne; Miss Lewis will go to Lee and Miss Crane to Hanover.

The veteran voter who went to the polls last Monday and waited for half an hour to obtain a vacant booth, felt as though he would like to administer to himself a severe castigation as he saw his ballot enter the machine an absolute blank, while he was indulging in absentmindedness.

Arthur Grise, Jr., has opened a store in one of the vacant rooms adjoining Trudeau's market, and intends to keep a choice selection of candies, stationery and fancy articles Mr. Grise is known to be an exceptionally fine young man, and his enterprise merits the patronage of his many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ruggles have the sympathy of the entire community in the death of their little daughter, Louise, aged three years, who succumbed to pneumonia Tuesday night, after a few days' illness. Three others of the family, Nellie, John and Hattie, are ill with scarlet fever, but are doing as well as can be expected.

The Y. P. S. C. E. will hold its monthly business meeting in the vestry of the Union church next Tuesday evening, and after the meeting an entertainment will be given, to which all are invited. The exercises will be of a musical and literary nature, and are sure to be interesting. Among those who are to participate are: Miss Eva Forte, Miss Louise White, Miss Mattie Gothen, F. A. Upham and Gilbert Forte.

The operetta given by the children of St. Anne's church last Tuesday evening was a successful undertaking. The children were trained for the occasion by the teachers of the parochial school, and the affair certainly reflected credit on every one concerned in its arrangement. A large audience was present and all were delighted with the admirable manner in which the participants performed their parts. Especially did the gorgeous costumes, which were intended to represent the Spanish court costume of the 16th century, elicit praise from everybody, and the tableau which was given at the close of the play was a suitable climax to so excellent an entertainment. A large representation from the other churches was present, and a handsome sum was netted for the benefit of St. Anne's church.

THORNDIKE.

Mrs. A. P. and Mrs. J. Q. Adams are visiting in West Gardner.

H. M. Dean of Webster, formerly of this place, was in town Wednesday.

Miss Katie Fleming returned Saturday from the openings in Boston and New York.

Mrs. Oliver Irens of California is visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. E. Bixby, for a few days.

The auction held on Saturday by Robinson & Taylor to clear out the stock here was well attended.

Mrs. Shield left Tuesday to attend the millinary opening in New York, and will return to-morrow.

Tickets for the Foresters' concert and ball will go on sale in a few days, and can be had of any member of the society.

About 30 young men from this place went to Palmer last Friday evening to here Rev. B. F. Conaty speak on temperance.

The social held at Rev. E. B. Blanchard's by the Y. P. S. C. E. last Friday evening was largely attended and much enjoyed.

Mrs. A. B. C. Deming of Springfield, and Mrs. C. Gibbs of Orange, have been the guests of Mrs. George and Mrs. Charles Mooers during the week.

The subscription list to raise money for Fred Bonville and family, which was circulated in the village this week, was liberally signed, and a neat sum will be realized from the same.

The announcement of the death of Dr. Stowe last Friday was a general surprise to the people of the place. The Doctor had many friends in the village who mourn his loss deeply.

Died from the Effects of a Fall.

George A. Ramsden, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ramsden, died at the home of his parents on Commercial street about 5.30 yesterday afternoon. The news of his death was a great surprise to the community, as he was seen about the streets only a few days ago. Mr. Ramsden had been confined to the house most of the time since Feb. 15th, having received a fall on the ice while skating, from which he never recovered. The deceased was well known in town, being a young man of good habits and possessing many friends. He was a member of Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows, also of Agawam Encampment of Springfield, and a member of the American Mechanics of the same city. He was very popular among his brother Odd Fellows in Springfield, where he lived for a number of years, having been employed in a button shop, and also working at bicycle repairing. The funeral will be in charge of the Odd Fellows of Palmer, and will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsden have the sympathy of the community in their deep sorrow; it is only a few years since they lost another son, who was drowned while bathing.

35 Years of Married Life.

Last Friday evening about 40 of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Bixby met at their home on Pleasant street, to remind them that it was 35 years since their wedding day. The affair was a genine surprise to Mr. Bixby, and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Rev. E. B. Blanchard, in behalf of their friends in Thorndike, presented them with a handsome chair and table. Other presents were received from friends in Springfield, Hartford and Bondsville. Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Blanchard, Rev. F. J. Hale and wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bond, E. E. Kendall and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, E. J. Fuller and wife, A. A. Houghton and wife, N. W. Bond and wife, Mrs. George Mooers, Mrs. George D. Mooers, Mrs. A. P. Adams, Mrs. Nathan Talmage, Mrs. Lucy Knowlton, Mrs. H. E. W. Clark, Mrs. H. T. Bishop, Mrs. Andrew Parker, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Gerald, Mrs. R. K. Houston, Miss Jane Walker, Mrs. L. Morse of Hartford, Ct., a sister of Mrs. Bixby and a neice, Mrs. Irons of California, and "Betsey Bobbett," whose only care seemed to be that she had forgotten her poetry, and had to call on "Tirza Ann" to help her remember it.

HOW ABOUT YOUR COFFEE?

Eminent authorities in this country and in Europe agree that coffee, when pure, is one of the most healthful of beverages, but it must be pure. When mixed with chicory it is most injurious to the system, causing many disorders of the stomach, etc. We have been most successful in our efforts to encourage the use of pure coffee. Our sales of 35c pure dry roast and 40c Java and Mocha have reached an enormous amount. We have no hesitation in recommending them as the best values in coffee offered in Palmer.

In Canned Goods We Offer

Canned Dandelion, (W. K. Lewis pack)	20c
Canned Clam Chowder, (W. K. Lewis pack)	20c
Canned Corn, (equal to any 10c can) 4 cans	25c
Canned Tomatoes,	8c
Golden Drip Syrup, with Jug,	43c gal.
Olives in bulk,	35c a quart

Closing Reception of Mrs. David's Dancing Class.

Mrs. David's dancing class closed their lessons for the season with a grand reception Tuesday evening in Memorial Hall, to which more than 300 invitations were issued. The Philharmonic Orchestra of Springfield furnished music, and it is unnecessary to say that it was well worth hearing. There were 20 numbers on the programme, and all round dances with the exception of one or two. There was some very pretty fancy dancing on the stage by members of the children's class and Mrs. David's four-years-old daughter. Miss Blanche Cushman was the first of these, and played the "bones" as an accompaniment. Master Dwight Ellis, Will Flynt and Ralph Morris danced the Fisher's Hornpipe. The costumes of the ladies were exceptionally handsome. Among them were: Miss Minnie Gilligan, pink silk, Miss Alice Parke, light blue lansdowne, Miss Alice Crossman, white silk, Miss Mabelle Flynt, light blue faille and Lapoint lace; Miss Flynt carried a beautiful bunch of white roses sent her from California; Miss Letha Potter, pink silk and chiffon, Miss Gertrude Gage, white silk henrietta, chiffon trimmings, Miss Pirrinton, fancy India silk, Miss Helen Tucker, myrtle green silk, Miss Mabel Tucker, green and striped silk, Miss Emma Merrick, heliotrope crepon, Miss Helen Fitz, pink India silk, Miss Manchester, white silk, Mrs. David, blue crepon and blue ribbons, Miss Maud Stacey, light changeable silk, Miss Cora Stacy, light challie, Miss Lena Babbitt, white silk, Miss Musa Babbitt, gobelin blue silk, Miss Blanche Cushman, cardinal satin under cardinal chiffon, Miss Lula Vaile, pearl silk, Miss L. N. Lee, corn colored silk, Misses May and Minnie Anderson, white muslin, Miss Mary Anderson, white wool, Miss Idella Anderson, white silk, Miss Catherine Fay, light blue crepon, Miss Winnie Cook, cream colored silk, Miss Mary Bliss, figured India silk, Miss Grace Cushman, pink faille, Miss May Phillips, light figured silk, Mrs. William F. Crew, white silk, Miss Julia Ketcham, corn colored silk, baby blue ribbon trimmings, Miss Carrie Flynt, light challie, old rose silk trimmings, Miss Effie Aldrich, white silk, Miss Nellie Mixter, black skirt, white silk waist, Miss Florence Smith, changeable silk, Mrs. W. Ellis, black skirt, blue silk waist, Mrs. L. C. Flynt, black skirt, fancy silk waist, Miss Louise Ellis, combination pink and white silk.

Democratic Caucus Nominations.

A Democratic caucus was held in Memorial Hall last evening. John P. Herlihy, Jr., was chosen chairman, but to the evident consternation of the majority present Mr. Herlihy did not respond. In fact he was not on the scene. In a few moments one of the faithful "silently stole away," and a death-like stillness prevailed for ten or fifteen minutes, at the end of which time the faithful returned, but, alas! alone. Omar E. Bradway was then chosen chairman and the following nominations were made: Carlos M. Gage, town clerk; Arthur D. Norcross, William H. Bugbee and Lyman Miller, selectmen; Edward D. Cushman, treasurer; John P. Herlihy, Jr., Richard N. Hayes, Omar E. Bradway, assessors, John Leahy, unexpired term, William Sutcliffe and Albert M. Guilford, three years, school committee; Joel H. Thompson, Michael Kennedy, George Aldrich, Edward P. Newton and David D. Meany constables; Carlos L. Peck and Frank L. Bliss second, auditors; Charles M. Webber, T. Gaylord Carew, Fred L. Skinner, fence viewers; Ralph Clifford, tax collector. The attendance was the largest for some years.

Death of Miss Catherine Parker.

Miss Catherine Helena Parker passed away early Sunday morning, after a long illness. She was the daughter of Mrs. Ellen and the late Thomas Parker. One brother, Robert, of Lisbon Falls, Me., and five sisters, Mrs. Peter J. Ward, Misses Hannah, Lizzie, Nellie and Sadie, survive her. She was a member of the senior class of Monson Academy, and the class attended the funeral Tuesday morning at St. Patrick's church, acting as escort from the house to the church, and from the church to the cemetery. Their floral tribute to their much-loved friend was a panel of bride roses crossed with ribbon, with three Greek letters, their class motto, inscribed upon it. On one corner of the panel was a bow of lavender ribbon, the class color, bearing the words "Class of 95." Among the other beautiful flowers were a wreath of pinks, two baskets of Marechal Neil roses, one basket of bride roses and a bunch of pinks. The bearers were Daniel Gallivan, Richard Gavin, John Pendergast, William Quinn, Patrick Brannick and Dennis Murphy. Rev. Thomas O'Keefe celebrated requiem mass. Miss Parker was a very lovable girl, of sweet disposition, and a favorite with all who knew her.

Miss Letha Potter gave a whist party last Saturday evening.

Andrew Coleman is to open a dental office in the bank block.

A. E. Parsons of Springfield is visiting his brother, J. P. Parsons.

Master Robert Fuller gave a birthday party Monday afternoon.

Dr. G. E. Fuller was confined to the house with rheumatism this week.

Next Friday evening there will be a public meeting of the Philo society.

A meeting of the Academy Athletic Association was held yesterday afternoon.

The winter term of the Academy closes next Friday, and opens the 8th of April.

Mrs. Arthur Bennett will entertain a whist party of six tables at her home this evening.

The Current Events club will meet next Wednesday afternoon with Miss Alice A. Morris.

John P. Herlihy, Jr., has been appointed a justice of the peace, and was qualified yesterday.

Mrs. G. H. Newton spent a part of the week with her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Fitch of Palmer.

A collection will be taken at the Methodist church Sunday morning for conference claimants.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Ellis returned last week Thursday from their wedding trip to the South.

Neighborhood meetings have been held this week at Mr. Horton's, Mr. Morris's and Mrs. Farrell's.

Mrs. William Whittemore of Athol, who has been visiting Mrs. Ansel Shaw, returned home yesterday.

The Misses Coyle are to open a millinery store in the building owned by G. L. Keeney, on Main street.

Miss Margaret A. Dineen has been appointed administratrix of the estate of the late Jeremiah Dineen.

James R. Cooley and Nellie Warren were married Tuesday evening by Rev. W. H. Marble, at the parsonage.

E. J. Hines has purchased the lumber for two houses on Park avenue, and will doubtless begin building at once.

A large number of young people attended the conference of the Y. P. C. U. at Palmer yesterday afternoon and evening.

The Evening Whist Club will meet one week from to-morrow evening with Mrs. Ketcham, at the Cushman House.

Francis E. Wood has donated to the museum at Flynt Park a pair of square-toed, pressed rubbers, the first ever manufactured.

Father Coyle of Stafford preached the Lenten sermon at St. Patrick's church Tuesday evening. Father Gilfeather of Boston preaches next Tuesday evening.

The chapel of St. Patrick's church is being frescoed and brightened, and will be finished in time to be used on Holy Thursday. Electric lights have been already put in.

The Dorcas Society will give its annual chicken pie supper and sale of useful and fancy articles next Tuesday evening, in the parlors of the Congregational church.

G. H. Newton sold at auction yesterday afternoon the four-tenement house north of the depot, owned by Mr. Dalton, to Joseph Giddings of Hartford, Ct. The price was $1540.

Orin M. Brown of Flora, Ill., formerly a workman in the Merrick and Fay straw works, has returned with his family to this place to spend a few months with his brother, E. H. Brown.

Monson lodge of Odd Fellows celebrated the fourth anniversary of its organization last evening by giving a whist party. There were about forty present; the Monson orchestra furnished music.

Rev. J. E. Tuttle, D. D., pastor of the Amherst College church, will preach the fifth of the mid-week Lenten sermons in the Congregational church. His subject will be, "The Revealing God."

Rev. F. S. Hatch's fourth Lenten lecture at the Congregational church Sunday evening at six o'clock will take up "The Teaching of Jesus Concerning Truth," a subject likely to attract attention.

Mr. Gillette of Hartford has been at the Congregational church two evenings this week, much to the pleasure of the young people. Boys' and girls' meetings have been held daily during the past week.

The Fitzpatrick Family of Ware, bell ringers and comedians, gave an entertainment in Memorial Hall Monday evening, in celebration of St. Patrick's Day. The proceeds are to go towards paying for the new statues for the altar of St. Patrick's church, which will be in place May 1.

One of our patriotic law-and-order loving citizens fired a cannon shortly after 12 a. m. Tuesday, to show his joy at the license victory in Palmer. It has been said that if Palmer went no-license Monson would have to fight hard for it, and would probably lose. This probably accounts for the jubilee mentioned.

There is a great demand for tenements just now. Among the changes are these: Henry Wood has bought the A. J. Robbins farm and will move there, R. C. Millar will move into the tenement now occupied by Mr. Wood, Fred Thayer will move into the Levi C. Bates house, and John O'Brien will take Mr. Thayer's tenement.

The case of Joseph M. Allen of Palmer, in a suit for damages against the town of Monson, came before the court in Springfield Wednesday, and defects in the plaintiff's paper caused the case to be put over to the June term of court. It will be remembered that Mr. Allen met with an accident on the quarry road about two years ago.

John R. Anderson of Boston, the most eloquent Scotchman who has ever visited this town, will speak on temperance at Memorial Hall Sunday evening at 7.30. It is desired to have a large chorus choir. Mr. Anderson was here in the autumn, and gave great satisfaction. If the night is pleasant the hall will doubtless be filled.

The body of Mrs. Parke, widow of Harvey Parke, was brought here from Keene, N. H., the latter part of last week for burial in the Center cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Parke were former residents of the town, keeping the hotel which is now the Cushman House. Mrs. Parke leaves three children, Frank C. of Monson, Mrs. John Thayer and John Parke.

Monson is to have a shooting club. The idea originated in the Heimann and Lichten shop. The matter has been canvassed, and about 20 sportsmen have agreed to go into it. There has been no business meeting as yet; but one will be called shortly, when a captain will be chosen and other points decided upon. It is expected that the first shoot will take place on town-meeting day.

There will be a meeting of the Lino to-night. Programme: "News for the week ending March 15," J. F. Lambert; "News for the week ending to-night," Clarence Murphy; debate, "Resolved that the Proposed Electric Road running from Palmer to Monson will be a Detriment to the Town of Monson," affirmative, Edward Cushman, negative, Bert Anderson; reading, George Tucker; recitation, W. C. Moulton.

The senior class of the Academy are to be congratulated on the success of their drama, "Enlisted for the War, or, The Home Guard," at Memorial Hall last Friday and Saturday evenings. They were greeted both evenings by large audiences. The parts were all well taken and learned. The vocal solo by F. Orcutt and cornet solo by Thomas Sault Friday evening, and the banjo duet by Messrs. Stone and Royce and cornet solo by Mr. Sault Saturday evening, were well received and heartily encored. The class expects to present the drama at Stafford Springs shortly after Easter.

The Monson Granite Company has just built a polishing house at its quarry which is to be equipped with a steam polishing machine of the largest type, the arm of which will have a radius of 7 feet, capable of polishing a surface 12x4 feet. This will be supplemented by a lathe for polishing circular monuments and columns. These two machines will be worked by an eight-horse power steam engine, which has just been put in, and when complete will form one of the best equipped polishing plants for either marble or granite in this part of the state. The company has also added a steam hoisting apparatus to its largest derrick at the quarry.

The adjourned meeting of the Historical Society was held at Memorial Hall Wednesday, with Dr. G. E. Fuller chairman and Rev. Harry Blackford secretary. The committee chosen at the preliminary meeting presented the following report: "It is recommended that the society be incorporated under the state law; that it be named the Monson Historical Society; that the object of this society be the collection, preservation, illustration and publication of all records and productions pertaining to the past, present and future history of Monson; that the membership shall consist of resident and corresponding members, any resident of the town over 20 being eligible; that the annual dues be $1 and that the payment of $50 constitute a life membership; that the officers shall consist of president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, historian, assistant historian, and a board of three directors. An application for a charter was signed by Rev. James Tufts, G. H. Newton, Dr. G. E. Fuller, E. F. Morris, Rev. Harry Blackford, C. M. Gage, Dr. F. W. Ellis, W. L. Ricketts, G. C. Flynt, A. D. Norcross, Carolyn L. B. Cross and Rev. F. S. Hatch. The meeting adjourned for two weeks.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Miss Jennie M. Smith of Holyoke was the guest of Mrs. E. W. Wall last week.

The Democratic caucus will be held in Foresters' Hall this evening, to nominate candidates for the various town offices.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Robert Darrah slipped on the ice one day last week, breaking both bones of one leg above the ankle.

Rev. M. S. Howard, who has been confined to the house as the result of a fall on the ice, has so far recovered as to be out once more.

GLENDALE.

Mrs Ella Seaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Benedict, died at her home Monday of pneumonia. Besides her parents she leaves three sons, her husband having died about a year ago. The funeral was held at the church Wednesday and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Miller of Wilbraham officiated.

WEST WARREN.

Father Madden officiated at the Catholic church last Sunday. Father Wrenn is still confined to his bed.

Rev. Mr. Ellis of West Springfield preached at the M. E. church in exchange with Rev. Mr. Dockham last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tongue have the sympathy of the community in the loss of their son Robert A., 8 years, who died last Sunday morning. His was one of the fatal cases of scarlet fever in this village.

Mrs. Edwin Ryecroft died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hosea B. Smith, Wednesday. Mrs. Ryecroft has been a resident of this village for over 40 years, and was the widow of Frank Taylor who died in 1866. Mrs. Ryecroft has lived for many years on the corner of Main and Albany streets. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Wilson of Ware, Mrs. Bert Ellerson and Mrs. Hosea Smith of this place, with whom she has stayed during a lingering illness of over a year.

BELCHERTOWN.

Daniel Packard, 84, an inmate of the town farm, died last Saturday morning of paralysis.

After the first of April, milk will be reduced to three cents a quart, owing to a brisk competition between milk dealers.

The officers and executive committee of the Board of Trade met Monday afternoon, and received the report of the committee appointed to investigate the canning industry. The next regular meeting of the board will be held April 1st.

Mrs. Horatio Rice, 76, died Saturday night after a short illness. She leaves a husband and two children, Arthur Rice of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Nellie Rice of this place. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon, Rev. V. C. Harrington officiating.

Ansel Moody, an old resident of this place, died last Friday night at the age of 72. Mr. Moody had been a resident of Belchertown about 30 years, and was much respected by all. His death was due to pneumonia, from which he had been suffering several days. A widow and three children survive him, Mrs. Mason of Chicopee, George Moody and Miss Hattie Moody of this place. The funeral was held at 2 p. m.

WARREN.

Allen Burbank is seriously ill with paralysis.

Alice Freeman has taken a position in Rice & Co's. store.

The grippe still lingers, many families suffering from it.

Dr. Robert Hastings of Boston spent Sunday at his home in town.

Miss Alice Plummer of Mattapan has been engaged to teach the school in district No. 5.

The Blake pump works are doing a good business, and most of the help have returned to work.

The high school will not commence until April 1st, on account of the illness of Miss Burbank's father.

Mrs. Eliza Barnes of North Andover and Miss Gay of Boston were guests of Mrs. Mary Hastings over Sunday.

The Republican town committee has organized with J. W. Chadsey chairman and George Bliss secretary and treasurer.

The ladies of the Universalist church gave a "honey tea" in Brigham's Hall Wednesday evening, and a large number was present.

The case of Mrs. Julia Bennett, wife of Henry Bennett of West Warren, came before Judge Tyler last Saturday. Mrs. Bennett was arrested on a charge of obliterating a posted notice of contagious disease. She admitted the fact, but it was shown that she had been largely influenced in her actions by others, so she was given a minimum fine.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary B. Carpenter was held in the Congregational church last Saturday afternoon, Rev. Harris Hale officiating. Mrs. Carpenter was much respected by all who knew her, and will be greatly missed in her home. She leaves a brother and two sons. One of the sons and the brother were ill with the grippe at the time of her death.

WALES.

H. A. McFarland has purchased an imported male Holstein calf.

The prize speaking contest given by the Hitchcock Free High School will be held in the town hall this evening. There will be ten contestants, and four prizes are offered by friends of the school. The following are the participants: Lola B. Andrews, Winnifred B. Sawyer, Helen L. Wells, Nellie M. Haley, Mabel E. Williams, Ernest G. Barnes, Charles A. Edgerton, Richard Macallister, Paul Atherton and Cheney F. Newton.

The Tuesday Evening Club held its third historical meeting at Mrs. J. W. Morgan's this week. The topic for discussion was "The Puritan and The Pilgrim." Papers were read distinguishing the religious reforms, customs and lives of the two peoples. Historians have confounded the two names, and it is often difficult to differentiate. Later, the talk drifted to local history; it could not be learned which is the oldest house in town, but interesting facts were related regarding many of the ancient homes. One gentleman was present who for 20 years played the bass viol in the old church.

Grocery Store and Barn Destroyed by Fire.

Frank G. Hitchcock's grocery store and barn were entirely destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The family live on the second floor of the store, and awakening about 1 o'clock discovered the building in flames. Mr. Hitchcock sprang from the window to the roof of the piazza, then jumped to the ground, found a ladder which he raised to the roof and rescued his wife and two little children. The people of the town were quickly aroused, but too late to quench the flames. A small building, once the pride of the eccentric and well-remembered Gregory A. Upham, now belonging to Dr. R. V. Sawin, was also burned, and fears were entertained lest his house must go too. The store was a landmark of the town, converted into such by N. F. Robinson from a shop belonging to the Jones estate. C. B. Brown was the first merchant there, then it was used by the Protective Union, afterwards sold to Silas T. Herring and later to George M. Hitchcock, who kept a grocery and dry goods store for 14 years. Since then it has had several owners, and for the past two years F. G. Hitchcock has carried on a successful business there.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, March 20, 1895.

Such crowded committee hearings as we are having in these March days, and such interest by large numbers of both men and women in matters of public concern, was never seen before. The notable feature of it is that it is in the regular development of certain lines of progress, and the result of certain efforts at reform. Take the leading hearings of the session, those on tuberculosis, woman suffrage, metropolitan water supply, Norwegian license system, child life insurance, punishment in dark cells, Boston municipal reform, children's aid bureau, and so on,—there never has been an approach to it in any previous year. Of course Butler's Tewksbury investigation in 1883 was a sensational exception, but for regular business there has been nothing like this year. Yet some people believe that this can all be hurried through, with an immense mass of other pressing business, and the Legislature go home early. And some would have biennials. Just look at the facts and see how impracticable biennial sessions would be!

An appropriation of $300,000 has been voted for the state highway commission, and $150,000 for cattle slaughtered for tuberculosis.

Senator Bill of Worcester county, who represents an agricultural district, has surprised the public by his earnest support of the enormous appropriation of $500,000 from the state treasurer for the use of the state highway commission in building public roads. It would naturally be supposed that the farmers, with their jealous eyes and comparative unfamiliarity with money by the hundred thousand, would criticise such lavish expenditure of the public money as this, but the senator is a very shrewd politician, and knows on which side his bread is buttered. So it is pretty certain that the road communities, which must travel over a great deal of road according to their population, are perfectly willing to have their roads paid for by the cities, which have a small proportion of road compared with the number of their people.

Committee traveling is as much indulged in by this Legislature as by its predecessors. The committee on mercantile affairs has been to Atlanta, the committee on street railways is going to Bellport on Long Island, Baltimore and Washington, and the committee on manufactures to Philadelphia and Richmond. Each committee makes out a case of vergency for the public good.

The House voted on Tuesday upon the constitutional amendment for the election of presiding officers of the Legislature by the people, and defeated it by a decided majority, without a count, after Dr. Irwin of Northampton had spoken for it and nothing had been said against it. The incidents connected with the action of the House illustrate forcibly the very evils against which the amendment is aimed, but of which the general public is not aware. One member who said that the amendment was right and that he should vote for it, said that he could not well speak for it because he had a matter coming before the committe on rules, and he did not wish to get the speaker down on him. Another who recognized the soundness of the amendment said that if he should speak for it and should come back to the House next year, the speaker would surely "turn him down" and not give him a good committee position. The fact is that the speaker is an autocrat, if so disposed, and the members are so much in his power that they fear to oppose him, though they know that they are on the right side. No charges are made against the present speaker and president, but there have been presiding officers who have abused their power shamefully, and the dangers that such men will be candidates at any time again. Most people know nothing of this matter, for the members are not likely to complain and the business is done in the state house out of sight of most of the people. The question is large, so is the danger, and it would be well for the people to elect these officers.

It is said that the House has the right to elect itsown presiding officer, and that 240 men could pick out a much better parliamentarian than the state at large. Of course there are dangers inevitably inherent in a popular election, to which one's eyes should be open, but, after the experience of the state in recent years, it is not too much to much to say that the risks in a popular election are less than under the present system by which committee positions may be given in return for votes for speaker, and the despotic power of the speaker may be used for the upbuilding of private political fortunes.

By a unanimous vote the committee on the liquor law has given leave to withdraw on the petition for the Norwegian liquor license system. But this action was to have been expected, for one of the committee, before the hearing opened, told one of the leading petitioners that the committee was unanimous against the bill. There will be a hard fight over the measure in the House, and the example of last year, when the committee was adverse and when the House substituted the bill, (but only to have it killed in the Senate) will surely give encouragement to the petitioners. At the same time, there seems no good reason to expect that the bill will be passed this year. An interesting bill is pending to restrict the sale of liquor in a license city or town so that it shall not be made within a quarter of a mile of an adjoining no-license city or town. The case which brings up the matter is that of Brookline, which is a no-license town, but suffers from a row of liquor saloons just across its line in Boston, opened there for the special purpose of gratifying Brookline's liquor appetite. An order has been presented in the House for asking the opinion of the supreme court upon the constitutionality of such a law, for it is argued that it is an infringement upon the right of the seller after the city or town has voted to grant the licenses. It is said on the authority of Mr. Henry Faxton of Quincy that this House is one of the strictest upon temperance measures which had been elected in recent years. The fact is that the liquor sentiment of the state is growing stricter all the time, as it would seem from the doings of the Legislature. Anything which is in the interest of a genuine restriction of the liquor traffic and promises to be practical has a pretty good chance of going through, while no favor is shown to the liquor trade as such. I believe that to-day, if it could be proved satisfactorily to the Legislature that there would be less drinking under a strict prohibitory law than now, such a law would be passed promptly. The purpose of the Legislature is right. It is merely a question of satisfying their judgment as to the best practicable means. There is no quarter to the liquor business, as such. It is regarded as disreputable by a majority of the members, and as to be squeezed down whenever an effective turn can be taken against it.

Demolition of the Bryant addition to the Bulfinch statehouse is progressing rapidly, and dry mortar dust is flying freely about the old halls. The commission to examine the old part have begun their work and are doing it in a very thorough manner, taking up floors and finding out the condition of the timbers. Of course this is the only sensible way to do. Some of the occupants of the old part are getting nervous over their personal safety. While it is admitted that the outside walls are in good condition, yet it is said that the floors are settling in the council chamber and in the adjoining rooms, and that it is a wonder that the floor of the Blue room has not before this crashed through into the Senate chamber. Doubtless there is exaggeration from fear, but the public will soon know officially just the condition of the old structure.

There is sure to be a great contest over the same taxation questions as occupied much of the time of the House last year. The committee is divided, and there is sufficient division in the House to sustain a warm debate.

LANDON.

CARD.—We desire to extend to our neighbors and friends, and to the Woman's Relief Corps, our heart felt thanks for the assistance and for the many kindnesses rendered to us and ours, during our late affliction.

Health in Your Vest Pocket?

A box of Ripans Tabules can be stowed away in your vest pocket. It costs you only 50 cents, and may save you as many dollars' worth of time and doctor bills.

A Chance to Save Money.

There is not the slighest reason why you should not feel well and strong. That great offer of Dr. Greene's is proving the best friend that weak and delicate people ever had. A letter sent to him at his office, 24 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., telling the symptoms you are suffering from, will be immediately answered by the Doctor, describing your complaint minutely, and making you understand perfectly just what ails you. And all this costs you nothing. You don't have to leave your home and you don't have to pay any doctor's fee to learn exactly what your complaint is and how to get well and strong, from Dr. Greene, the greatest living specialist in curing nervous diseases. The Doctor makes a specialty of curing patients through his great system of letter correspondence, and is having wonderful success. Thousands of weak, delicate men and women are writing him about their complaints, and are being permanently cured. It was he who discovered that world-renowned curative, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nervura remedy. Write the Doctor at once and see what he says about your complaint. It will probably be the means of your getting back your health.

You're Losing Something every day that you try to worry along without Pearline. And what's the use? What do you gain? You can't have washing done more safely than it's done with Pearline. And it can't be done more cheaply—if it's done safely. You lose in time and labor. Pearline saves half of both. You lose in clothes, too. You can't rub them clean in the old way on the washboard, without rubbing them to pieces. All these things that you lose are money.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back 350 JAMES PYLE, New York

Waterproof collars and cuffs that you can clean yourself by simply wiping off with a wet sponge. The genuine look exactly like linen and every piece is marked this way:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK

They are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid," and are the only waterproof goods made with an interlining, and the only goods that can stand the wear and give perfect satisfaction. Never wilt and not effected by moisture. Try them and you will never regret it. Ask for those with above trade mark and refuse any imitations. If your dealer does not have them we will mail you a sample direct on receipt of price. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair. State whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

A GOOD TESTIMONIAL.

"I have had for 27 years past, a badly diseased ankle bone. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Salt Rheum Cream healed it when all other medicines had failed, and medical authority had said the limb could never be used again.

A sore broke out on the ankle bone, and for 10 months the aged writer suffered day and night beyond the power of words to express.

A friend advised me to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I had no faith that any medicine would help me, but suffering as I did I thought I would try it, and purchased some, also a box of Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream. I used these medicines but a short time when my limb began to heal.

I will further add, among the many medicines I have tried for a diseased liver and kidneys, none has ever proved so helpful to me as Favorite Remedy. By stimulating and strengthening the enfeebled organs, even the encroachments of advanced age seem to be checked by its invigorating power.

I have thoroughly tested its true worth, and I know whereof I affirm, hoping all who read this will profit thereby, as the aged writer has, by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, been given very comfortable health for a person 70 years of age. Favorite Remedy is an invaluable medicine for children, as well as adults.

This testimonial is given from my own experience of these invaluable medicines." Mrs. Belinda Hodsdon' Haverhill, N. H.

No tribute to the efficacy of a medicine could be greater than these words of Mrs. Hodsdon, who voluntarily tells the story of her recovery. Thousands of men and women whose daily life is making severe draughts on their vitality, need Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. None are too old to be helped by it. It permanently cures dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney, liver and urinary troubles; for the ills peculiar to women it has no equal.—Haverhill, N. H., Courier.

Vassar Pie.

Give me a spoon of oleo, ma,
And the sodium alkali,
For I'm going to make a pie, mamma,
I'm going to make a pie.
For John will be hungry and tired, ma,
And his tissues will decompose—
So give me a gramme of phosphate,
And the carbon and cellulose.

Now, give me a chunk of caseine, ma,
To shorten the thermic fat;
And hand me the oxygen bottle, ma,
And look at the thermostat;
And if the electric oven's cold
Just turn it on half an ohm.
For I want to have supper ready
As soon as John comes home.

Now, pass me the neutral dope, mamma,
And rotate the mixing machine,
But give me the sterilized water first
And the oleomargarine,
And the phosphate, too, for now I think,
The new typewriter's quit,
And John will need more phosphate food
To help his brain a bit.

ANIMAL LIFE IN WINTER WOODS.

The bears and the raccoons have at last gone to sleep. Long ago the chipmunks and the woodchucks began their hibernation. The woodchuck sleeps in burrows in the ground, the chipmunk in logs, 'coons in hollow trees, and bears in the cavities left by roots of fallen trees.

They had to sleep or starve. No grass, no meat, no tasteful food could they find in the deep snow left by the first howling blizzard of the year which piled more than two feet of it on a level, and in the burnings tumbled heaps and drifts 10 times as deep. The beech-nuts were covered with a mass of snow.

It is a comfortless kind of senselessness that is called hibernation, because there is a drowsy feeling of the cold, and a part awakening when warm days come, and the animals rise and wander forth seeking food that is difficult to obtain, and then are driven back to their beds, hungry and thin, to sleep again till the storms pass and once more they can go forth. That is why the bear looks for his shadow in February, and why the woodchuck comes out to peer around. He can no longer sleep in his hole, and hunger drives him forth till a kindly nature sends a long sleep to his eyes. It is on these rambles that the bear becomes the vicious beast so often told about. It is then that he kills a sheep or robs a pigeon.

This great storm means death to many deer, for when deep snow comes woodsmen will strap on their snow-shoes and go to the yards, and with unsparing hands strike down the buck, the doe and the yearling fawn, leaving too often great piles of flesh to freeze and become the food of foxes, martens and other flesh eaters. Down into the snow will dive the partridge; and, deep though it is, a fox, should one come that way, will dig there, and only a few feathers will tell the tale in spring time. Likewise will the spiteful weasel, the mink, and the fighting marten live high on partridge breasts. Then, too, if a rain should come atop this fluffy snow, a crust would form over it, and the partridge would peck in vain to reach the air above; while the deer would cut their legs fleeing, perhaps from stray wolves, but surely from hounds turned loose by woodsmen and guides to roam at will through the woods.

To one beast, though, a snow means a great amount of food. It is the woodsman's rabbit. He is a great, shy creature, three times as large as the simple little rabbit of Long island, not to be kicked out of brush heaps and bowled over with No 1 shot, but to be followed for hours by dogs and at last shot while going like a deer, in long, graceful bounds. No. 6 shot will do, but the experienced woodsman uses No 4 oftener, for so strong is this rabbit that he runs rods with broken ribs. His food is the buds of trees. Two feet of snow lifts him into a different region almost, for seldom do the birches branch so low as to give the rabbit a chance at the buds when the ground is bare, and there are other trees as well that give in this way to this game beast. He is too swift of foot to be run down by fox or wild cat, though both stalk him. And he is a fighter of his kind. The bucks draw blood often in their love quarrels.

The snow-storm is likely to prove fatal to much game, but it is to be hoped that the birds will not die as they did last winter. Seldom have partridges been so scarce and wild in the Adirondack region. It is well that the birds are by some instinct so wild after these thinnings-out, that but few are killed, and these by long, difficult shots. —Adirondack Letter in New York Sun.

SHE KNEW HIM.

"Madam," said the tramp, sadly, "have you a single spark of human pity in your heart?"

The madam replied that she thought she had several.

"Then," continued the wanderer, "pity me. You see before you the most completely isolated, friendless man in all these United States."

He apparently intended to say much more, but the woman broke in with:

"Come right in, sir. We are poor, unpretentious people, but such as we have is at your disposal. Of course, you understand, we don't approve of you politically, but we respect your office."

The tramp smiled contentedly, and as he walked into the parlor, he said:

"Madam, your kindness overpowers me. This will be a day to be marked with a white stone, as DuMaurier says. But, if you will pardon my dullness, I do not quite understand what you mean by this reference to my politics and to my great office."

"Why, sir, from your description of yourself, it is plain to anybody who reads the newspapers that, in spite of your present disguise, you can be no other than Secretary Gresham."—Buffalo Express.

A HIGH ROLLER.—"Those two seats next to you," said the usher at the crowded theatre, "seem to be unoccupied. Please let these gentlemen sit down in them."

"Those seats, me good man," responded Cholly, languidly producing his checks and looking at the usher through his eye-glass, "belong to me ovahcoat. Please stand a little to one side. You obstwuct me view of the stage."—Chicago Tribune.

Palpitation of the Heart

Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Legs and Feet.

"For about four years I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and swelling of the legs and feet. At times I would faint. I was treated by the best physicians in Savannah, Ga., with no relief. I then tried various Springs without benefit. Finally, I tried also his Nerve and Liver Pills. After beginning to take them I felt better! I continued taking them and I am now in better health than for many years. Since my recovery I have gained fifty pounds in weight. I hope this statement may be of value to some poor sufferer."

E. B. SUTTON, Ways Station, Ga.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

MAINE MAN'S LAW EXPERIENCE.—There's a man in Island Falls who knows something about the fun—and profit—of going to law. A few months ago he placed in the hands of an attorney for collection a bill for about $30 for work done on a building. Recently he wrote to the disciple of Blackstone to see if the bill had been collected, and received word that it had, but the cost of collection was so great that the bill lacked 68 cents of being enough to cover the expenses. He then hired another lawyer to investigate, who sustained the first verdict. The experience has cost the man just $5.68 thus far.—Lewiston Journal.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advise is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means to not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will releive the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well-known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three application of it," he says, "and have since been free from all paln." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndlke; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

In one of his preludes, Dr. Cook, in speaking of the Salvation Army, said: "It is now strong with its 30 years of service. It has an organization in 42 nations and colonies. It circulates 27 papers of over 100,000 a week in fifteen languages; it does not have a single commercial advertisement, thus refusing an income of $100,000 a year. The Army wishes to be above reproach of being a muck rake. It teaches the New Testament doctrine and needs no defense. It is an advocate of temperance, all its officers being total abstainers. In most cities the Army is in high standing. Gov. Greenhalge at the farewell meeting in Boston for Gen. Booth called him the Great Bishop of the established church of the poor, and also said there cannot be too much religion in the world."

DEATH IN THE AIR.

A changeable climate is the most exciting cause of pneumonia. The mild to-day, cold to-morrow, weather is a prolific breeder of the disease. It is contracted by exposure to wet and inclement weather, from standing or sitting with cold feet; by going from hot and over-crowded rooms into the keen night air, and by sitting in draughts.

The proper way to treat pneumonia is to prevent its development.

Have a care that you are sufficiently clad to meet inclement and changeable weather. See that the wet feet and exposure to draughts do not result in cold. If a cold is contracted check it at once before pneumonia is developed; for it is a well known fact that a protracted cough may suddenly develop into pneumonia, with a slight additional cold. Don't let the disease make any headway. Fortify the system against it by rich, nutritious, liquid food. This can be accomplished in no other way so well as by the liberal use of Ozomulsion, an ozonized preparation of Cod Liver Oil with Guaiacol, prepared by T. A. Slocum Co., New York, and sold by all Druggists. Taken early, when the first symptoms of the cold appear, it cures it promptly and prevents the development of pneumonia. It is a rich, liquid food, and it is a well known fact that strong food is the most formidable foe of pneumonia. It keeps the blood well nourished and puts the tissues in such a condition that they throw off the cold and thus resist the disease.

Dr. Greene's Nervura

Guaranteed Purely Vegetable Blood and Nerve Remedy, and Harmless, is the Greatest and Best

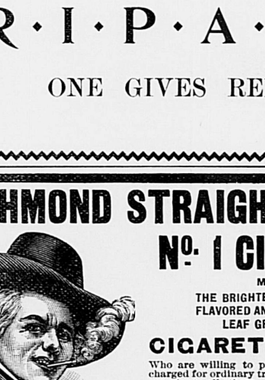
Spring Medicine.



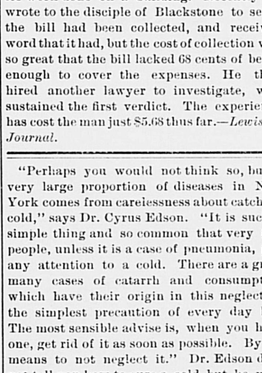
HON. L. P. STRICKLAND.

Are You Prepared for Spring?

It is necessary to prepare yourself for the advent of spring by taking a spring medicine. Use the remedy which cured Hon. L. P. Strickland, of 58 Taylor Street, Cleveland, O.

"I have taken Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy," he says, "and I feel like a new man. It has cured me of chills, hot flashes, bloating after eating, cold feet, and shortness of breath. I have also had a fistula for over twenty years, and it is almost gone now. I cannot express how thankful I am that I used this wonderful remedy."

He was cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.



MRS. J. M. EARLE.

How to Get Well and Keep Well.

Do You Feel Weak, Tired, and Nervous?

The wonderful cure of Mrs. J. M. Earle, of North Calais, Vt., will interest you.

"I had a scrofula sore on my breast," she says, "and was very short of breath, and was terribly nervous. I commenced taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and soon perceived a wonderful improvement in my condition. The scrofula sore entirely disappeared, and my general health was greatly benefited. I think that it saved my life. My heart used to be so bad that my husband was obliged to jump up and go for the doctor in all haste, and he did not think I would be alive on his return. But this is now all gone, thanks to Dr. Greene's Nervura. I am as well as I ever was, and as tough as a bear. Let all who are sick take this wonderful medicine."

Everybody Should take a Spring Medicine.

Read this and you will know what to use.

Mrs. Granville A. Sweetland, of 16 Miller St., West Quincy, Mass., tells you how you can be well and strong:

"I was troubled for a long time with sleeplessness, constipation, pain in the back, and great weakness and debility. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and after taking four bottles it had helped me wonderfully. The pain in my back was relieved, I could sleep better nights, my constipation was overcome, and my skin was much clearer.

"I never could have done the work I have accomplished if I had not taken Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. My father also uses it, and thinks it benefits him more than any other remedy he has taken."

MRS. G. A. SWEETLAND.

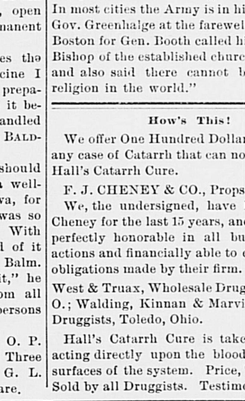
Is Your Blood Pure? Are Your Nerves Strong?

Mr. John Mather, of 433 Broadway, Lawrence, Mass., one of Lawrence's most prominent business men, states:

"For years I was unable to do any work and suffered torture with the pains in my back. My nerves were in such a state that I could not take hold of anything, as I could not keep it in my hands, but would drop it. I was very weak and trembling.

"I expected to die, and have no doubt but for the aid of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I should have been in my grave. I began taking the Nervura, and at once noted the change. The pains left me and my nerves were greatly strengthened. To-day I am a well man, and can do a hard day's work. I have the greatest faith in Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I heartily recommend it, and am confident that it will cure."

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Cured Him.



MR. JOHN MATHER.

To get well and keep well, take

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

It is the discovery and prescription of a widely known Physician.

Dr. GREENE, 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Sold by all Druggists. Price, $1 per bottle. Accept no substitute. This remedy has no equal.

Sometime.

Sometime the veil will be lifted, sometime the glorious light
Will come and banish the shadow—come and follow the night.

Sometime the word will be spoken, potent with untold power,
And life will be filled with sweetness, when cometh its fateful hour.

Sometime the wonderful mystery will be to our eyes revealed,
For deep in our hearts the fountain of loving has been unsealed.

Sometime the marvelous wisdom of God will at last be plain,
And we shall know why we suffered—know the blessing of pain.

Sometime the long-sought guerdon, beloved of love's sweet rest,
Will be given into our keeping after our long, long quest.

Sometime the clouds, beloved, will part and the skies will smile,
And then we shall find the sunshine, after a little while.

For sometime the weary waiting will end at last one day,
And all the pain and heartache be over for aye and aye.

—Syracuse Post.

THE FIRST AMERICAN PLUM-PUDDING.

Not many years after the Mayflower brought its freight of stern Puritans to Plymouth, a shipload of more opulent Pilgrims from the mother country made landing at Boston and traveled through dangerous ways to the place called New Haven, where many of them settled.

But Master Frothinghame, and perhaps a score of others, with Roger Ludlam as their leader, came on still further to found a settlement called in the Indian tongue Umguowa.

The goodly store of pelf these wealthier colonists brought with them gave them some comforts which the Plymouth settlers lacked, but clearing lands for tillage, building rude but substantial houses of logs or stones and opening roads through the forests, fell equally to their lot. Their earlier lives of ease had ill-fitted them for such unaccustomed work, but freedom to think as they liked and to worship as they pleased compensated them for toil and hardships. Oneness of purpose and congeniality of interest made the social life of the small community very pleasant. It was like one large family, with Roger, the good man who worked with them on week days and preached to them on Sundays, for its head.

One of the most remarkable women in the little colony was sweet Mistress Frothinghame, who for love of her husband and the hope of future good to her little sons, came willingly from a home of great luxury to the unknown perils of life in a wilderness. If she ever repented of the step she had taken, no word of regret passed her lips, and her struggles as the years went on to make up to growing boys the advantages of education they had lost, are matters of record. But brave wife, devoted mother and industrious housewife though she was, she had in some inadvertent way given offense to one family.

It might have been because her farthingales and kirtles, made or remade by her own deft fingers from the store of raiment she had brought with her from England, had a style and fashion that no other one's clothes acquired, or it might have been a nameless something in her which showed that she never forgot her noble extraction, but whatever the cause, Mistress Jonas Crief and her sour-visaged husband had long ceased to think of her with affection.

Good Master Frothinghame, with his head full of projects for the betterment of the colony, knew nothing about this slight break of harmony. In fact, so great was his abstraction from common affairs that unless reminded he would leave his home in the morning all unconscious that he had not broken his fast. It was to him that Roger Ludlam and Jonas Crief, an elder, came one Christmas morning, as he worked in the field, with a grave complaint that in his house the Popish holiday, as they termed it, was kept with unholy observances.

"Feasting and gluttony and gayety of apparel is not what one would look to see in the home of one whose godliness is a strong stay in our midst; and yet such customs are said to rule each year under your roof," said Roger, with a mingling of acerbity and mildness.

"And we look to you to pluck out heresies and make an example of evildoers, even if the blow strikes one of your own household," said Elder Jonas, sharply.

"Dark riddles have no meaning to me," said Master Frothinghame, looking puzzled and worried. "To my wife, Lois, I leave all family affairs, she being most capable; and, like a good wife, willing to spare me to her own cost. In the matter of observances her belief is one with mine, and I can stake my credit on her practice."

"You are willing, then," said Jonas, "to take us to your dwelling now with no notice given, and let us see for ourselves this day, the 25th of December, what manner of preparation it is that wafts rich odors of spice, in the smoke of burning, to offend the noses of believers?"

"Most willingly, truly," replied Master Frothinghame, leading the way to his house. Entering with his guests into the large room, he found his wife cooking dinner and listening to her second son, who was reading well, in his pleasant boyish voice, from a much-thumbed "Life of Columbus." The younger boys were attending to the reading while they quietly set the table for the midday meal, and the little maid Margaret, the one daughter born since their life in the new country began, sat in her oldest brother's lap, quiet as a mouse, listening to the reading, and keeping bright eyes on her mother's movements.

The house-mistress gave a cordial, if somewhat stately, greeting to her husband's friends, who seemed to feel their errand awkward till Master Frothinghame, in a few words, explained their purpose to his wife.

"Some light bread, turnips boiled and sauced with cream, as my lads like them, and fish caught by Johnny, the lame Indian, who takes his fare for his fee, is the feast which I give my good lord and his children to-day, and if it please him to ask his friends to share it, there is enough for all." Good Roger bowed in courteous appreciation, but his elder, not so easily placated, turned a prying nose toward the fire, saying: "There is a savory smell from yonder pot, good dame, that minds me of the snares by which Satan pampers the lusts of the body in the countries where this day is made a season of sinful idolatry. What boileth in that great pot of thine?"

"A quick poultice for an aching breast," was the answer.

"And what aches it, and who is it feels the hurt?" —this with an ugly sneer, quite unworthy the saintly character of an elder.

"It is mine own heart that aches with pity for those who let evil spite poison them against the neighbors whom they should love with all tenderness, as children of one Father."

Voice and tone were moderate, but there was a flash in the dark eyes which made the mother's children look at her curiously, and Oliver, the oldest boy, drawn by that and by the hateful look in the elder's face, put down the little maid and came to her side, standing there straight and tall as herself, with an air which showed he would defend her if need came. But no more words were said then, and the dinner being served, the master signed to his visitors to take their places at his table, and after the boys had gathered thereat, the long fervent blessing was solemnly asked by Roger, at the host's request, and they all quietly took their seats.

The master tried to maintain some conversation as he filled the plates handed him in silence by his wife, but there was a great constraint, and all subjects fell to the ground after a brief trial.

It was considered a privilege to eat of viands cooked by Mistress Frothinghame, so greatly was her culinary skill esteemed, but to-day none had appetite, except the boys. Their stomachs, unlike their elders, came under no sway of mental disturbance, and they feasted as hungrily as if no adverse judgment menaced their mother. At last even their knives rested, and their father turned as if to give the signal to rise, but Jonas's eyes, as pying at his nose, saw plainly expectancy writ on all the young faces before him, and delaying like the boys to rise, he turned ill-boding looks of question upon the master, saying:

"Forgive me, as my errand is righteously one of appointed search, if I wait as your sons do, for what cometh next."

"Surely, friend, what is for them is for thee, but more have we not than thou seest, for on days when God's mercy sends us fish we cook no meat, counting the one enough for strength."

At a modern table, where conversation is likely to be kept in the hands of the youngsters, there would have been eager explanations from the boys, but in those rigid days, in their parents' presence they spake not unless first spoken to, so now they were silent, although Jonas looked at him in a steady way which made their father turn to question them. Before they could answer, Roger interrupted.

"Cease," he cried, "would you make a son commit his mother and give him that to remember which might put upon his life a burden that could have no surcease?"

"Then," cried Jonas, nothing cowed, "I ask Dame Frothinghame not to cut us short, but give us all the dinner she has provided for this particular—ahem—yes, this very particular day."

With her handsome head lifted defiantly and a most scornful curl to her delicate lips, the lady, who had not yet found time or inclination to take a chair at the table, raised from the great bubbling iron pot a covered tin pail, and eagerly eyed by the young lads and the little maid Margaret, handily turned its contents upon a shining platter, where it rested, a sight for men and boys, a bold, undisguised pudding, brown and luscious, with fat sides quivering, as if in dread of the inimical regards it had to face. Carrying the platter high and bearing herself like a queen the dame set it down upon the table in front of her astonished husband and, stepping again to the fire, brought a skillet of hot sauce, which she poured lavishly over the pudding, unheeding the trouble in her husband's eyes, as gasping the one word, "Lois!" he sank back upon his chair. She did not mind the deep, bitter sigh that came from good Roger's sorry heart, or the malicious glee with which Jonas rubbed his bony hands together and wagged his bald head. Roger gazed gloomily at the light and toothsome pudding, the first his eyes had seen for many years, then gathered himself together for his duty.

"This is matter for counsel," he said. "Woman, hast thou, unknown to the husband who has the rule over thee, made laws for thyself, and this day, which of a purpose it is commanded to ignore, commemorated with feastings? Speak if thy fault is unknown to thy husband, and keep the sin on thine own head."

"There is more than seems on the surface," interrupted Jonas, rudely, with a greedy eye on the pudding. "We know well sweet spices and plums can only be had by supernatural agencies. There must have been strange dealings before all these foreign sweets could come at hand."

"No witchcraft, if that is what you mean, friend Jonas, but a woman's invention. Raisins, it is true, are not to be had, but in the summer sweet berries grow on the bushes about, and them I dried with care and to-day used where plums should have been. And to flavor the sauce that is innocent of wine I used a precious stick of cinnamon and bits of candied lemon that were in the box my sister sent me from England. I had not suet and other rich things wherewith we made our puddings in my father's house; but with slices of bread buttered and sprinkled between with berries and spices and left to soak all night in a custard of eggs, and then boiled with might all the hours of this fair morning, did I strive to make even a poor imitation that should please my sons and make them note this day."

She took her seat as she ended, and drawing the pudding toward her, began to cut it with a hand that did not tremble.

"Stay," cried Roger, rising and putting on a judicial and ministerial majesty that should make evildoers quake, "you dare to say that you wish to note this day, "here his tones grew awful—"this day which we all, freed now from the yoke of superstition, have elected should be forgotten. Why, why should you wish to remember it?" His voice fell suspiciously as he ended; it was cruelly hard for him to have to condemn the wife of his own particular friend.

"Because," she said, with the defiant fire in her eyes softening, and sweet, tender curves coming to her lips as she looked over to her husband and then at the wondering children, and from them to her stern old pastor, "because my children must never forget that this was their parent's wedding day sixteen years ago. The cares of a hard life crowd it out of their father's memory, but a little better dinner, to make the children glad it has come around again, can do no harm, I think. We can do but little here in the wilderness, but even a little gives the children a reminder of their mother's life before she changed it for a still happier one as their father's wife."

She had routed her enemy. The minister turned a reproachful look on Jonas, and Master Frothinghame, though stern and undemonstrative by nature and the teaching of the times, stepped quickly to his wife's side and clasped her hand in his, then thundered a scathing rebuke, which made that mischievous hypocrite, Jonas Crief, shrink from the house.

And, ever since that time, the numerous decendants of the Frothinghames disdain on hristmas Day to eat of the orthodox English plum-pudding, with its chopped amalgamation of ancient indigestible richness, but copy the acnient recipe, with a substitution of berries for raisins, which has descended from their proud and beautiful ancestor, who made, so far as known, the first American plum-pudding.—Mary C. Hungerford in Romance.

"I don't see why people come here for their health," growled Barker. "It strikes me as being very unhealthy."

"It is now," said the landlord. "So many people have come here for health and got it that our supply has been exhausted."—Harper's Bazar.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, March 27, 1895.

An incident has occurred in the House which will probably have a salutary effect upon the disposition of the members to bow to authority when that authority is not identical with reason. The committee on rules reported against concurring with the Senate for the admission of a matter of much interest to New Bedford and Fairhaven, and it looked as if the representatives of those places would be beaten. Mr. Searls of Worcester, supporting the committee on rules, said that the speaker of the House was at the head of the committee, and he thought that the House should "bow" to the decision they had rendered. But the House voted by 153 to 18 to suspend, and thus refused to "bow" to the committee on rules and the speaker. The members are in need of displaying such independence as this if they are not to be the puppets of a small ring around the speaker.

The committee on agriculture, Senator Bill of Worcester dissenting, have reported a bill which appropriates $150,000 for the extermination of the gypsy moth. This is less than the board of agriculture asks for, but it ought to go a long way in getting rid of these dangerous pests. Quite a number of agricultural bills are on the table of the House, among them those relating to the suppression of tuberculosis and the sale and inspection of milk.

Senator Whitcomb of Holyoke has carried through the Senate his bill for the establishment of a board of police for the city, but it is not so sure that it will pass the House. Holyoke's leading citizens are seriously divided over the issue, which is of much importance in local politics.

It looks as if the constitutional amendment for popular election of legislative presiding officers would receive more attention in the Senate than in the House, for, on motion of Senator Lawrence of Berkshire, it has been laid on the table in order that the members may have more time to look into the matter. Senator Corbett of Suffolk entered his dissent from the report of the committee. Since the matter has been acted upon by the House, Speaker Meyer has said that he is not opposed to it, but thought that he ought not to declare himself upon it, for it might either influence his successors or be regarded as a reflection upon some who have occupied the chair before him.

The Sunday observance bill is sure to go through the House, but it has been modified so as to permit free concerts for philanthropic or educational purposes, and literary or musical entertainments whose proceeds are to be used exclusively for charitable, philanthropic or benevolent purposes. Mr. J. H. Mellen of Worcester was the only member who objected seriously to the spirit of the bill, for he thought that the half of the population who go to no church have their rights as well as those who are church-goers, and that it ought to be left with the aldermen of the several cities to license such shows as they might approve. But the restrictive purpose of the bill was approved by the members generally.

The committee on election laws has reported a bill which makes clear a part of the caucus law, so that two sets of caucuses must be held for delegates to state, councillor and congressional conventions on one hand, and for county, senatorial and representative on the other. Last year the Republican state committee directed that one set of caucuses should be held by the Republicans, and this act has led to this bill to make the purpose of the law beyond doubt.

The dinner of the Republican members of the Legislature at the American House Tuesday evening was a highly enjoyable occasion, and it is worth a passing note as a type of the practice of Republicanism, which is superior to that of the Democrats. There are the well-known political clubs, the Middlesex, the Norfolk and the Essex, which have dinners every month or two at Young's or Parker's (usually Young's) during the year, except in summer. There is also a younger Plymouth club, which is of the same class, though it is not yet a permanent. These clubs are professedly for the discussion of politics. They secure the attendance of the best speakers on the issues in the state, and not infrequently engage some prominent speaker from another state, often a man with a national reputation. The consequence is that the issues are kept before the members, and a point in favor of annual [illegible] which ought not to be overlooked. The leaders confer together. They lay their plans for the good of the party. They know each other and keep in touch with each other. They develop personal good feeling. They learn to pull together and realize that they must subject their private whims and plans to the good of the party. Such a course as this cannot but have its effect upon the party, and there is no doubt that Republican supremacy in Massachusetts has been greatly fostered by this practice of frequent meetings and discussions. The speeches are printed in the newspapers and get before the public at all times in the year, thus keeping the party well posted on the current [illegible] and giving the voters points upon the [illegible] timent in the party.

Now the Democrats have no [illegible] ever corresponding to this practice. For a while the Young Men's Democratic Club has a dinner with speeches, but not often. When the Democrats are not so ashamed of their party that they shrink from showing their heads in public they have a dinner on the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans and glorify the principles of Jefferson and Jackson. Sometimes the Democratic members of the Legislature have a public dinner. But, taking together all of the Democratic occurrences of this sort, they are but few compared with the constant succession of Republican meetings, with their discussion of the events and men of the [illegible] sure, there are not as many [illegible] there are Republicans, nor can [illegible] nearly as many interesting [illegible] they might do vastly better [illegible] now, if they made more of the principles of their party and were more concerned for the agitation of those principles before the people. The effect of Tuesday night's Republican dinner will be felt all over the state, and will bear fruit in the next election.

The issue over the tuberculosis [illegible] sharp, and it cannot be regarded as [illegible] until the measure is finally thrashed [illegible] branches. There is strong support [illegible] position that the use of tuberculin as a test for ascertaining the presense of [illegible] should not be permitted without the written consent of the owner, nor until the public [illegible] of the disease has been determined by [illegible] physical examination of the suspected cattle. But the great objection made by those on the other side is that if this were to be the law then the other states around us would be perfectly free to send into Massachusetts any of their suspected cattle. Vermont [illegible] the use of tuberculin, whether the state permits it or not. If Massachusetts should leave a clear market for cattle which are not so far gone as to be detected by a physical test, then Vermont would be pretty sure to send in here all of her cattle which might be suspected, but had not been examined, and the people of Massachusetts would be exposed to the fatal disease much more than would be possible if the states stood on an equality with their laws. And so it would be with other states near us, and our condition would be lamentable. Of course the owners of cattle hate to have their herds inspected and disease found among them, would show that they had been supplying milk and butter from diseased cows. But how much better would it be for the truth to be known than for the people to shut their eyes to it. With all the failures of tuberculin, it is the best diagnostic of tuberculosis know.

An agreement has been reached by a majority of the committees on railroads and street railways, sitting jointly, for a bill to abolish grade crossings of steam and electric roads. It is in the nature of a compromise and does not apply to existing cases, but it gives a foundation for proceeding in the future which will prevent a multiplication of these crossings which are so dangerous to both the passengers in steam and electric cars. This matter has been the subject of sharp legislative contests before this year and, as two of the committee dissent, it is possible that there will be a lively contest over the matter this year. It will be remembered that the famous conflict between the officials of the Consolidated road and the people of North Abington was over the question of a grade crossing of these kinds of roads.

The House has had a longer debate than usual over the bill for two-cents-a-mile fares on steam roads, and has finally defeated it by 102 to 61 on a roll call. Mr. Grover of Canton led the attack upon the bill, and Mr. Bliss of West Springfield and Mr. Young of Springfield were the chief defenders of the measure. The question is whether roads shall retail transportation as cheaply as they wholesale it. For the bill it was asserted that they should do so, and that it was right for the people to demand their equal consideration with those who can afford to buy tickets in large quantities. It was replied that the roads could not afford to retail as cheaply as they wholesale, and that they are reducing fares as fast as they can afford. The arguments for the bill and against it were not new, nor does it appear that the cause has gained strength since last year.

PALMER NEWS.

THE ADJOURNED TOWN MEETING.

No Opposition to Anything Recommended by the Committee of Fifteen.

The bad travelling and the raw March weather combined to keep many of the voters away from the town house yesterday, and it was a comparatively small number that gathered there for the adjourned town meeting. Contrary to expectation the meeting was a most harmonious one, and the recommendations of the committee of fifteen were, without exception and almost without opposition, adopted. The meeting was called to order a few minutes after nine o'clock by the moderator, W. W. Leach, and proceeded to dispose of business with a rush, dissolving just before noon.

The first business transacted was the election of H. P. Marcy, H. T. Bishop, G. W. Lyman, J. A. Palmer, C. P. Haynes and B. L. Rond as surveyers of lumber and measurers of wood and bark; Dennis Mahoney, E. E. Ryther, Maurice McCormick, Patrick Hurley, J. R. Wellman and W. A. Lawson were chosen field drivers, and James B. Shaw sealer of weights and measures. The list of jurors as prepared by the selectmen was then adopted, the reports of the various town officers accepted and article 5 of the warrant taken up. L. E. Moore moved that $5000 be appropriated for contingencies, the money now in the hands of the town treasurer, about $3400, to be used as part of this sum, and the balance to be raised by taxes. It was also a part of his motion that $1500 of the appropriation be used for police in the different villages. This latter clause started a discussion that was rather lively for a few minutes, but the motion was finally carried. The sum of $4500 was then appropriated for care of the highways, and upon motion of Dr. Holbrook it was voted that $2000 of this be for permanent improvements. Then followed in rapid succession appropriations of $1000 for bridges, $300 for railings, $300 for sewers and culverts, $6000 for support of the poor and $500 for contingencies; teachers' salaries $13,000, contingencies $1700, fuel $1300, text books and supplies $700; repairs on school buildings $300, janitors $1000, transportation of school children $1600, instruction in drawing $400, discount on taxes $2200, interest on town debt $800. It was voted to construct sewers in Three Rivers, Bond's Village and the Depot village, and the necessary appropriations were made; $200 was placed at the disposal of the board of health. The Young Men's Library Association was given $1000, and L. L. Merrick post, G. A. R., received $600 for the relief of soldiers and sailors. There was some opposition to the town's building a foot bridge across the river at Bond's Village, as it was to be on private land over which the town has no right of way, but after some debate $150 was appropriated. Then $500 was voted for the suppression of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, and the matter was left in the hands of the selectmen, as was also that of the preserving of shade trees and of the manner of repairing the highways and bridges. The selectmen were instructed to purchase the cemetery at the Depot village by condemning such land as they might think necessary, and if they should not be able to purchase to take it by right of eminent domain. Control of the cemetery for one year was given to the Palmer Cemetery Association. It was voted to buy about twelve acres of land near the poor farm for a sum not exceeding $600, and $2000 was appropriated for heating apparatus and repairs at the poor house. The selectmen and overseers of the poor were appointed a joint committee to have the repairs made. The sum of $600 was also voted for some badly-needed repairs upon the town-house. Six per cent discount will be allowed upon all taxes paid on or before September 1, and interest will be charged after that date. The compensation of the collector was fixed at $350, and he was instructed to have all taxes paid over to the town treasurer by February 1. The treasurer was authorized to borrow, with the approval of the selectmen, a sum not exceeding $10,000 in anticipation of the taxes. The opposition to the electric lights did not show quite the strength expected, and after a short discussion the recommended appropriation of $5000 was voted, it being understood that the company is to furnish as much light this year than last. Hereafter there will be precinct voting in the three precincts, as it was voted yesterday to adopt the system. Below will be found a list of the appropriations:

Honor for a Palmer Boy.

Cyrus F. Stimson of Palmer, a junior in Yale Theological Seminary, has received a unanimous call from the West End Congregational church at Bridgeport, Ct., to be its pastor. The church has been looking for a pastor for nearly two years, and Mr. Stimson won the favor of the congregation by two Sundays' preaching—four services. The church is quite an important one, numbering 250 members, with a Sunday school of about 300. Mr. Stimson will accept, but is to be allowed to finish his studies this year, and also to continue another year of study if strong enough. Mr. Stimson has many friends in Palmer who will rejoice at his good fortune.

No Board of Health.

Owing to an oversight the town is without a board of health, or will be after next Monday. A law passed since the annual town meeting of last year provides for the election of three members of the board, one for three, one for two, and one for one year; the old board admitted of the election of a new board each year, and the local board was voted for on this basis, so are not legally elected. To guard against such possibilities the statute says that the selectmen shall serve as the board of health in the event of the failure to elect such officers, or they may appoint a board. It is probable that the selectmen will serve this year, and that a board will be properly elected next spring.

H. A. Northrop is painting his house on Central street.

The school committee has organized with Rev. J. H. Hart as chairman.

E. Cleveland is moving from Walnut street to L. Davis's house on State avenue.

Mrs. Norman Rice of Belchertown has been spending the week with her son, G. A. Rice.

The schools of the town will close next Tuesday afternoon for a vacation until April 15th.

W. H. Blanchard is in town again, back at his old place in the employ of W. H. Hitchcock.

Rev. F. E. Jenkins is taking a rest of a week, and is visiting his father in New York state.

Mrs. H. E. Huntley of Amherst, formerly of Palmer, spent Sunday with friends in town.

Mrs. L. E. Carpenter will have her spring millinery opening next Wednesday and Thursday.

The annual meeting of the Baptist society will be held in the church vestry next Monday evening.

It is expected that the new steam laundry on Central street will be ready for business next Monday.

L. L. Merrick post of the G. A. R. has voted to meet monthly hereafter, instead of twice a month.

A. E. Maxwell is moving from State avenue to the house next west of the Advent chapel on Park street.

Miss Carrie Tuthill has been home from Brown University during the week, but returns to-morrow.

The selectmen announce that all applications for license must be in their hands on or before next Thursday.

Rev. G. Wakeman Andrews of Dalton will preach in the Congregational church next Sunday, morning and evening.

H. C. Strong has rented G. M. Atkins's house on Converse avenue, and will move there from his flat in Strong's block.

Miss Julia Cook has returned after an extended visit to her home in Terryville, Ct., and will reopen her kindergarten soon.

Mrs. Ella Sedgwick will open dressmaking rooms in the house on the corner of Thorndike street and Converse avenue April first.

Rev. H. F. Moulton, pastor of St. Paul's church, will be assisted in all of the services next Sunday by Rev. J. J. Lewis of Boston.

Miss Hattie Blanchard has resigned her position as bookkeeper for E. A. Buck & Co., and will finish her labors there to-morrow night.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Taylor were called to East Hartford, Ct., yesterday by the death of Mrs. Taylor's grandmother, Mrs. George Risley.

Holden & Fuller's woolen mill has been shut down this week on account of a lack of orders, but will probably start up again next Monday.

Next Sunday will be the Sunday of the Passion at St. Thomas's Catholic church, with mass at 9 a. m., Sunday school at 3 p. m. and vespers at 7.30.

The first thunder storm of the season came Monday afternoon about 5 o'clock, accompanied by a hard hail storm, though the thunder was not very heavy.

Commencing with next Monday the Palmer Savings Bank will be open from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., instead of from 9 a. m. to 12 m., and from 1 to 3 p. m., as formerly.

J. P. Eastman, who has been supervisor of the Ware River road for the past three years, leaves that place the first of April, and will have a position on the main line.

E. B. Gates will sell at auction next Tuesday at 10 o'clock a. m., at his farm near Palmer Center, several cows, hay and grain, wagons, carts, farming tools, etc.

E. W. French has returned to Palmer in the interests of the Singer Mfg. Co., and will make his headquarters at the Weeks House, with a full line of sewing machines.

Principal Thayer of the high school went to Brimfield last Friday night to act as one of the judges in the prize speaking contest of the Hitchcock Free High School.

Three new cases of scarlet fever have been reported from Thorndike, where one death has resulted from the disease, and four new cases are reported from Three Rivers.

There is a young man in town who evidently believes in having something laid up for a rainy day, for out of his weekly wages of $9 he regularly deposits between $5 and $7 in the savings bank.

Mrs. L. E. Carpenter returned last Saturday from an inspection of the millinery styles in New York, accompanied by Miss Cora Peebles, who will remain with her during the millinery season.

A break in the West Main street main of the Palmer Water Company deprived a portion of the residents of that street of water during a part of Monday afternoon and nearly all day Tuesday.

E. C. Sexton's house on Park street, recently occupied by him, has been sold, through the D. F. Holden agency, to N. S. Ingraham, who has charge of the signal tower at the railroad crossing.

F. A. Royce will take charge of the post office next Monday morning. He will retain Mr. Knox as head clerk, and C. M. Kempton, who has been Mr. Knox's clerk, will remain in the office for a short time.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Palmer Club will be held next Friday evening, when several names proposed for membership will be acted upon. The club is arranging for a ladies' night, Sept. 9th.

H. McGilp, who has been confined to his home about three weeks by a severe injury to the bone of his leg, occasioned by being thrown from a wagon, is recovering, and will eventually recover the use of his limb.

The Smith Tea Co. is to move from the Commercial block to the store on the north side of Main street formerly occupied by Mrs. L. E. Carpenter, and the business will be conducted under the name of H. W. Smith.

G. F. Lord has sold the Converse House to W. A. Fitzpatrick, who will hereafter be the proprietor, J. F. Fenton being retained as manager. Mr. Fitzpatrick is paying all claims against the old firm as fast as presented.

J. H. Tuthill was taken ill at his blacksmith shop on Pleasant street late yesterday afternoon, being attacked with dizziness and faintness. A physician was summoned and later he was removed to his home, and soon recovered.

The Quaboag Literary circle will meet this evening in the public library rooms. W. A. Lawson will have a paper on "The Period of the War of the Roses in England;" Miss Pierce will have charge of the Round Table, and Miss Hattie Coleman will give a reading.

Mrs. Rufus Flynt will have charge of the choir at the Congregational church again next year, the personnel of which will be: Mrs. Rufus Flynt, director and contralto; Miss Georgia Packard, soprano; Robert Handyside of Springfield, bass; Joseph Walker of Chicopee Falls, tenor; Mrs. W. H. Small, organist.

The law will allow the catching of trout next Monday, but judging from present indications but few will be landed. The water has not become warm enough yet for them to run up from the ponds and rivers; besides which, the frost is hardly out of the ground sufficiently to admit of the bait working its way up to where the would-be angler can get at it.

The probate court has granted administration in the estate of Mary S. Healey, late of Palmer, Nathaniel G. Healey administrator. It has approved wills of—James C. Burnham, late of Palmer, Frank Henry Johnson executor; Lyman Dimock, late of Palmer, Frances W. Dimock executrix; Willard H. Stowe, late of Palmer, William W. Leach executor.

H. A. Northrop bought at auction Tuesday 25 acres of meadow belonging to the King Knox estate, on the north side of the road leading from the Thorndike road to Shearer's Corner, the price being $400. He will build a dam on the brook which flows through the property, and make a pond which will enable him to cut ice of the finest quality in the winter.

H. E. W. Clark of Thorndike was taken suddenly ill with acute indigestion in Springfield Tuesday afternoon, and returned to Palmer on the 3.14 train, but was so much worse on reaching here that he was taken to the Converse House until somewhat recovered, when he was carried to his home, where he has since been quite ill, but is now recovering.

W. E. Stone is introducing a new tea to the people of this section, called "Ceylon orange tea," being the same which was served at the Ceylon building at the World's Fair. It has a delightful fragrance and a pleasant taste, and will no doubt become quite a favorite with users of the leaf. The consignment received by Mr. Stone is the first ever brought to Palmer.

The firemen were called out for practice last Saturday afternoon, and to give an opportunity for testing the hose belonging to the department, some of which has been in use a considerable time. In all 1000 feet were tested, and 150 found to be worthless. The remainder, about 550 feet, will be tested before the fire district meeting, and more is expected to be found in an unfit condition for service at fires.

There were several typographical errors in the article in last week's JOURNAL regarding the Palmer high school alumni. The word "lacking" should be substituted for the word "lucky," to give the sense intended by the writer. The class graduated in 1877, instead of 1887. It may also be stated that the high school building was completed and first occupied in the spring of 1889, instead of 1890.

O. P. ALLEN.

Rev. J. J. Lewis, twenty-five years pastor of the Universalist church in South Boston, will give his famous illustrated story of the Passion Play of Oberammergau, as witnessed by him Aug. 10, 1890, in the Universalist church next Sunday evening. Mr. Lewis has given this lecture more than seventy-five times in Boston, and is called the "Apostle of the Passion Play in America." A silver collection will be taken. All are invited.

There will no doubt be a large attendance at the trial of Messrs. Williams and Stebbins in the district court to-morrow morning at 11, in the matter of preventing an agent of the state cattle commission from killing a cow which had been condemned as affected with tuberculosis, and also for other violations of the law regarding diseased animals. The case is attracting considerable attention among the farmers' as the claim is made that the state has no right to take the farmer's property without paying him for it.

The Lenten services at St. Paul's Universalist church next week will be as follows: Sunday, at 10.45 a. m., preaching, "Is His Spirit in Us?" Tuesday at 7.30 p. m., preaching, "Lifting Up the Standard," Rev. Charles Conklin of Springfield; Wednesday at 7.30 p. m., conference of the church members, Roll Call, "What are you doing for an Increase of Church Membership?" Thursday at 7.30 p. m., preaching, "Manhood—Its Duty Toward the Church," Rev. J. F. Farnsworth of Charlton; Friday at 7.30 p. m., preaching, "Youth, Its Duty Toward the Christian Church."

The fifth entertainment in the high school course will be given in the Congregational church next Wednesday evening, by the Harvard Male Quartette, assisted by Miss Alice Johnson, reader. The programme will be:

"Awake the Day" ..... Abt
Harvard Quartette.
Recital—"The Fair Schemer" .....
Miss Johnson.
Solo—"The Devoted Apple" ..... Roeckel
Mr. Pugh.
"Douglas, Tender and True" ..... Marston
Harvards.
Recital—"Light from Over the Range" .....
Miss Johnson.
Solo—Sea Song ..... Jude
"When I Was a Little Boy" ..... Macy
Harvards.
Recital—"The Convivial Controversy" .....
Miss Johnson.
Solo—"Love's Sorrow" ..... Shelby
Mr. Boyd.
"Good Night" ..... Buck
Harvards.

The admission will be 35 cents, with 50 cents for reserved seats, which may be secured after 9 a. m. to-morrow at LeGro & Lynde's.

In the civil session of last Saturday's district court judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in the case of E. A. Brown, et al., against P. E. Bard, in the sum of $50.50, and the defendant appealed. In the case of Richard L. Saville of Boston against W. A. Fitzpatrick of Palmer, judgment was rendered for the plaintiff, and the defendant appealed. In the criminal court on Tuesday Daniel Biley of Three Rivers paid $5 for drunkenness. Martsy Kazlosky paid $10 for the larceny of clothing from another Polander at Bondsville; Martsy had bought an overcoat of his friend, but later becoming convinced that he had been cheated in the purchase decided to help himself to other articles to an extent which would about make up the difference. On Wednesday Timothy Riley of Three Rivers paid $6 for having been drunk; he was arrested about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, but was too full to know much about the matter when brought before the court, so his case was continued 24 hours, and that evening he had a narrow escape from the jim jams in the lockup, but was finally straigthened out by the janitor, and swears he'll drink no more.

Joseph Jefferson, who will play "Rip Van Winkle" at the Court Square Theater in Springfield next Wednesday evening, will no doubt attract many people from Palmer, a number of whom have seen him before. Jefferson was once asked by a lady why he didn't have a dog in the play, as he continually speaks of "my dog Schneider." Mr. Jefferson replied that he disliked realism in art, and realism alive, with a tail to wag at the wrong time, would be abominable.

"But don't you think the public would like to see Schneider?" she asked.

"The public could not pay him a higher compliment, for it shows how great an interest they take in an animal that has never been exhibited. No, no; hold the mirror up to nature if you like, but don't hold nature up—a reflection of the thing, but not the thing itself. How badly would a drunken man give an exhibition of intoxication on the stage; who shall act the madman but one who is perfectly sane. We must not be natural, but appear to be so."

"One question more, and I have done," said the lady. Why do you not refuse the cup that Gretchen offers you at the end of the play?"

"Should Rip refuse the cup," replied Mr. Jefferson, "the drama would become at once a temperance play. I should as soon expect to hear of Cinderella striking for high wages, or a speech on woman's rights from Old Mother Hubbard, as to listen to a temperance lecture from Rip Van Winkle. I would prefer that the impression on the audience as the curtain falls should be suggestive, so that they might terminate it in a manner most agreeable to themselves. If Rip Van Winkle had been treated in a realistic manner, it never would have lived so long."

BONDSVILLE.

Mrs. H. Fletcher will have her spring millinery opening of the latest New York styles in hats and bonnets, next Thursday and Friday, April 4th and 5th.

Mrs. J. B. Paige and daughter Beryl of Amherst are spending this week with Mrs. Paige's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell.

Miss Bridget Murphy, an old and respected resident of this place, died last Saturday.

The funeral was held at the Catholic church Monday, and the interment was at Thorndike.

THREE RIVERS.

Miss M. L. Johnson's spring opening Thursday and Friday, April 4th and 5th.

Mrs. F. L. White is quite ill this week.

William Bell has returned from East Chatham, N. Y., after a few days' absence.

N. R. Story has recovered sufficiently to attend to his duties in the machine shop.

Ephrem Gonvouloir will open a blacksmith shop next week in C. P. Haynes's new building.

Rev. F. S. Hatch of Monson will preach in the Union church next Sunday in exchange with Rev. G. S. Butler.

Miss Hayes of Bondsville and Mr. Hillman of Northampton were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hillman this week.

Stephen Gauthier and W. Twogood are the latest additions to the cycle men of this place, as both have purchased new machines.

O. A. LaRiviere & Co. are having their meat market remodeled and renovated, which will make it, when completed, a very commodious apartment.

Miss Lizzie Korffe, while at work in the cloth room one day this week had the misfortune to badly lacerate her hand. The wound required the services of a surgeon, and four stitches were necessary to put the injury in a healing condition.

THORNDIKE.

Mr. H. Randall of Amherst is the guest of J. W. Miller for a few days.

Charles Mooers is confined to his home with an attack of the grippe.

Mrs. A. W. Robbins of Nashua, N. H., is visiting Mrs. E. B. Blanchard.

Miss Agnes Grady of Monson has been the guest of Misses Nellie and Josie Riley during the week.

Mrs. Jane Garland and daughter Eva have returned to their home in Merrick, after a few days in town.

H. E. W. Clark was taken suddenly ill on Tuesday, and at this writing is confined to his home on Commercial street.

Mrs. Frank Burnham of Maine, who has been in town for several weeks caring for her sister, Mrs. Johnson, who has been very ill, returned to her home on Wednesday.

At a meeting of Court Hampden, Order of Foresters, on Tuesday evening, D. F. Sullivan and M. E. Keefe were elected delegates to the grand convention of that order to be held at Worcester.

M. J. Sullivan of Chicopee, teacher of music in the public school, who is giving instruction in the place, is to give a musical, followed by a social, at Union Hall sometime in May, and will be assisted by his pupils in Bondsville and Warren.

John Fay, who has been in the employ of the Thorndike Company for several years, has accepted a position in a mill at Wilkinsonville, as boss carder, and will leave for his new field on Monday. Mr. Fay has a large circle of friends here, who wish him every success in his new home.

Veerland's Operatic Minstrels are to play here in Union Hall next Monday night. The company is spoken of as carrying artists of the first rank. They are not in the habit of playing in such small places as this, but having an open date they decided to come here from Ware, where they will show on Saturday night.

The whist party met at the house of Miss Beatrice Andrews on Wednesday evening for the last time. The first prizes were awarded to Miss Mary Bushman and Fred Bishop, the former receiving a silver bon bon dish and the latter a handsome stand calendar; the booby prizes were won by Miss Mary McFarlane and Thomas Chapman, being a pencil case, and gentleman's initial strap.

The operetta given on Tuesday evening at Union Hall by the children of St. Anne's parish was a very creditable performance, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The Temple Male Quartette of Holyoke, which will appear here for the first time at the concert to be given by the Foresters at Union Hall April 18th, will be assisted by Prof. Ruhl, pianist. E. J. Longtine will have charge of the floor, assisted by William Gerald and Charles L. McCarthy.

Funeral of George A Ramsden.

The funeral of George A. Ramsden was held from the house of his parents on Sunday afternoon, and was attended by the village people in general, besides representatives of the different societies to which he belonged. The funeral was in charge of Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows, which attended in a body and marched from the house to the cemetery. The floral tributes were numerous, among them being a pillow from the American Mechanics of Springfield, wreath from Amity lodge of Odd Fellows of Springfield, camp emblem from Agawam Encampment of the same city, three links from Palmer lodge of Odd Fellows, emblem from the Social Club of Springfield, wreath from family. Rev. E. B. Blanchard of the Congregational church officiated. The bearers were two members each from the Palmer lodge, Agawam encampment and American Mechanics. The interment was in the Four Corners cemetery.

◆ HOW ABOUT YOUR COFFEE? ◆
Eminent authorities in this country and in Europe agree that coffee, when pure, is one of the most healthful of beverages, but it must be pure. When mixed with chicory it is most injurious to the system, causing many disorders of the stomach, etc. We have been most successful in our efforts to encourage the use of pure coffee. Our sales of 38c pure dry roast and 40c Java and Mocha have reached an enormous amount. We have no hesitation in recommending them as the best values in coffee offered in Palmer.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Miss K. M. Coyle will hold her spring opening of millinery next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, at her millinery rooms in Keeney's block.

Reports of the Town Officers.

The annual reports of the town officers were ready for distribution yesterday noon, and from them the following figures are taken: The account of the treasurer shows payments of $28,469 for town purposes, $646 for state family aid, $112 for military aid and $126 for firemen; the debt of the town is now $48,150, having been increased $43,352 during the year by the construction of the water works. The selectmen and overseers of the poor have paid: For highways and bridges, $3087; poor away from town farm, $926; town farm $1933; miscellaneous, $3050; town water committee, $446; Cushman fountain, $37; Flynt fountain, $10; town hall, $580 (480 was received for rent of the town hall); state aid, $643; military aid, $112; street lighting, $1520; discount on taxes, $1379; liquor prosecution, $10; special repairs at town farm, $178; G. A. R. post, $50; sidewalks, $817 ($308 was received from sundry persons as sidewalk assessments); cemetery commissioners, $1075; fire department, $69; Cushman sewer, $657; Monson Free Library, $250; teachers' salaries, $5740; school books and supplies, $805; fuel for schools, $659; school janitors, $451; superintendent of schools, $1050; high school tuition, $1924; school committee, $160; school transportation, $84; insurance of school houses, $30; repairs of school houses $494. The inventory of the property at the town farm, exclusive of land and buildings, is $2102. The whole number of inmates at the farm has been 24, the present number being 14; 733 weeks' board have been furnished, at a cost of a little more than $3 04 per week. While in some departments of town affairs the expenses have exceeded the appropriations, yet as a whole the expenses were $87 37 less than the appropriations.

No important changes have been made in the management of the schools during the year. The removal of Rev. J. F. Lee from town has caused a vacancy in the school committee, which has been left to be filled by the voters next Monday, while the committee expresses its appreciation of Father Lee's interest in the schools and of his efforts to promote their welfare. With the exception of Nos. 14, 7 and 3, all the schools have been kept in session 36 weeks. No. 14 has not been opened, the three scholars in the district having been carried either to No. 7 or to the brick school house in Brimfield. No. 7 has lacked only two weeks,—on account of the illness of the teacher,—and No. 3 was closed during the winter term on account of the small number of pupils. While the number of scholars in the whole town is increasing, the number in the outlying districts is decreasing, and the committee is faced with the alternative of sustaining a school at an expense of $300 for four or five pupils, or transporting them to other schools, and has made a rule to suspend any school whenever the average attendance falls below four, and provide transportation for the remaining pupils.

The reports of the water commissioners, overseers of the poor, superintendent of schools, cemetery commissioners and other town officers will all be found interesting reading.

Death of David Anderson.

David Anderson, a much-respected citizen, died at his home at North Monson Saturday at the age of 80. He was born in this town and the greater part of his life was spent here. When a young man he went to Stafford, where he married M. Henrietta Orcutt and remained at her home several years. They then came to Monson and Mr. Anderson purchased the grist mill now owned by Harrison C. Day. After selling the mill Mr. Anderson devoted his attention to farming. He and his wife celebrated their golden wedding two years ago, giving a reception. About a year ago Mr. Anderson had a slight stroke of paralysis, from the effects of which he never entirely recovered. He had a second one about a week before his death, and did not rally. The funeral was held at the house Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. H. Marble officiating.

Eugene Cady has moved to his newly purchased farm.

Thaddeus L. Cushman gave a whist party Wednesday evening.

The crosswalk in front of Gage's store has caved in over the water pipes.

Rev. W. H. Marble will preach Sunday morning on "Sucession in Labor."

The warrant for next Monday's town meeting will be found in another column.

Misses L. and E. Williams have their millinery opening to-day and to-morrow.

Mrs. E. C. Sheldon spent a part of last week with her sister, Miss W. M. Tucker.

Misses M. and M. Gavin have their millinery opening next Wednesday and Tuesday.

Rodney Dunham has bought of Asa Smith of Belchertown the Burke farm on Moulton Hill.

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle met with Rev. W. H. Marble Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Wood have moved to the A. J. Robbins farm, which Mrs. Wood has bought.

Miss Helen Tucker, teacher in Monson Academy, is spending her vacation in Washington, D. C.

Joseph H. Carpenter and John P. Herlihy, Jr., have been drawn jurors for the April term of court.

The Evening Whist Club will meet with Mrs. Julia Ketcham Saturday night at the Cushman House.

Mrs. Howard and daughter of Stafford were guests of Mrs. Howard's sister, Mrs. G. H. Foster, Wednesday.

Mrs. Caesar Entwistle has moved into Arthur D. Ellis' cottage, recently occupied by John Coy and family.

Mark Noble has sold to John S. Bogan the pasture lot known as the Newton lot, near Daniel Carpenter's farm, for $225.

Mrs. Earle of New York was the guest of Miss Clara A. Wood, superintendent of schools, the early part of the week.

Miss Alice Ryan of Boston, lately with Madam Wilkins, is employed by Mrs. Frank H. Fenton in her dressmaking rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Moulton were given a surprise party by neighbors and friends in honor of the anniversary of their marriage.

Miss K. M. Coyle will hold her spring opening of millinery and fancy goods Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

Miss Helen Tucker gave a very enjoyable whist party last Saturday afternoon. Miss Gertrude Gage and Miss Maud Strong won the prizes.

Ralph, the little son of Rev. Harry Blackford, is very sick with membraneous croup. At 9 this morning the physician had more hopes of his recovery than he had entertained for two days.

The Current Events Club met with Miss Alice A. Morris Wednesday afternoon, and will meet with Miss Mabelle K. Flynt next Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. J. J. Lewis of Boston will deliver a lecture on the Passion Play this evening at Memorial Hall. The lecture will be illustrated by the stereopticon, and will doubtless be very fine.

A. W. Edson, agent of the Massachusetts Board of Education, and Miss S. E. Brassle, supervisor of science in the Quincy and Cambridge schools, will speak to the teachers next Friday afternoon.

Charles A. Bradway is exhibiting a Columbia wheel, model 40, weighing 21¼ lbs., at $100; the next best wheel is the Hartford at $80, $60 and $50, weighing 24 and 27 lbs. All are thoroughly guaranteed.

The Dorcas supper and sale at the Congregational church parlors Tuesday evening was very successful socially and financially. About one hundred and forty persons had supper; $61 was netted after paying all expenses.

Next Thursday evening Rev. D. A. Reed, D. D., of the School for Workers in Springfield, will preach the last of the mid-week Lenten sermons in the Congregational church, taking for his subject, "Assurance in Christ."

There will be no preaching in the Methodist church Conference Sunday, one week from next Sunday, owing to Mr. Marble's absence. Conference convenes at Salem at 10 a. m. Wednesday. Mr. Marble will leave here Tuesday.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Monson Historical Society next Wednesday evening in the selectmen's room at Memorial Hall at 7 30, when the committee appointed at the last meeting will report upon rules and regulations.

Rev. Charles H. Puffer of Salem, a former student at the Academy, will preach the third special Lenten sermon in the Universalist church next Monday evening. Rev. Charles Conklin of Springfield preached Wednesday evening.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Methodist church will hold a social in the vestry Wednesday evening. Supper will be served from 6 to 8, followed by an entertainment. As this is to be the last social before re-organiznation, a full attendance is desired.

The young people of the Universalist church repeated the drama, "Out of His Sphere," Tuesday evening with piano and banjo music between the acts. The young people of this church are untiring in their efforts to give good entertainments, and are very successful.

The wall of the water works collecting well is nearly completed. A cement rim two and one-half feet high is being added, as it was found that the wall in the original plan was not high enough. Water will doubtless be turned on by May 1, although the building covering the well will not be done at that time.

Memorial Hall was well filled last Sunday evening to listen to a rousing temperance lecture by John R. Anderson of Boston. Mr. Anderson's contempt for the man who does not vote either way on the license question, and his knowledge of the amount of money which would be spent to carry the town for license were very forcibly expressed, and it would seem from his argument that, in order to keep the town no-license another year, it behooves the voters on that side to be up and doing.

Town meeting comes next Monday. As yet everything is quiet, and the license question is probably the only one which will arouse much excitement. Matters have apparently gone on smoothly, and many of the present town officers are likely to be reëlected, especially the selectmen. The school committee vote is liable to be close.

The schools, with the exception of East Hill, began Monday with a good attendance. At the meeting of the school committee held last Friday evening, it was decided to close the Childs' district school, as there are but two pupils, and they will go to Moulton Hill. It was voted to open the Pease district school, as there are seven or eight children to attend. Miss Annie Cameron of South Hadley will teach at East Hill, and the term will begin one week from next Monday. Miss Minnie Moulton, also of South Hadley, teaches at North Monson, and Miss M. Esther Keep has the Silver Street school.

The body of Mrs. Harry Crosby of Milford, Ct., was brought here Tuesday afternoon for burial in the Center cemetery. Rev. F. S. Hatch made a prayer at the grave, the funeral having been held at Milford. Mrs. Crosby was before her marriage, which occurred four or five years ago, Miss Clara Clark, a graduate of Monson Academy class of '88, and had lived in town since her childhood. Mr. Crosby was for several years employed in the bleaching and coloring departments at R. M. Reynolds's straw works. The family left town last July. Mrs. Crosby leaves three children, the youngest but two months old. She was buried on her 26th birthday.

A meeting of the Athletic Association of Monson Academy was recently held to make preparations for the spring work. A committee was appointed to devise means for raising the necessary funds. Another banner has been offered by the Amherst College Athletic Association, but on the condition that all schools which apply shall be admitted to the league. While this makes the competition greater, it increases the honor of the winning team. The drama recently rendered so successfully by the senior class is to be repeated in Stafford early next term under the auspices of the senior class of the Stafford high school. This will aid the Stafford seniors and also fill out the amount necessary to meet the graduating expenses of the Academy class.

The atmospheric disturbances which occurred in Monson Monday were quite remarkable for this time of year. There was quite a variety of weather in the afternoon, and a terrific hail storm, accompanied by thunder and lightning, but the climax was reached about 10 o'clock at night, when it was rumored that a severe shock of earthquake was felt by many of the inhabitants in this district. Upon closer investigation it was discovered that the disturbance was caused at Memorial Hall by some of the dancing class pupils adhering too literally to the instructions for waltzing, viz: "Always keep close to the floor." Some of them did, and the shock was felt for many miles around.

The attendance at the Republican caucus Friday evening was the largest for a number of years. The meeting was called to order by E. D. Cushman, chairman of town committee. Henry G. Rogers was chosen chairman, and Freelon Q. Ball secretary. The largest number of votes cast during the evening was 109. There seemed to be considerable difficulty in settling upon all the candidates, who were chosen by ballot with the exception of Mr. Norcross for selectmen. These nominations were made: Selectmen and overseers of the poor, Arthur D. Norcross, George H. Fosket, Charles C. Keep; town clerk, Carlos M. Gage; treasurer, Edward D. Cushman; assessors, George H. Foskit, Lyman C. Flynt, Charles C. Keep; school committee for two years, Michael F. Moore; for three years, Alonzo M. Beebe, Horace Squier; cemetery commissioner, Dr. George E. Fuller; tax collector, Ralph Clifford; constables, Joel H. Thompson, Hiram Osborne, Samuel Closson, George W. Adams, Edward P. Newton; fence viewers, Lee Blanchard, Henry M. Rindge, A. Haskell White; auditors, Rufus P. Cushman, William J. Ricketts.

Marcus Keep Woman's Relief Corps will serve the annual dinner town meeting day in Grand Army Hall.

BRIMFIELD.

Edwin Webber, 76, died at his home the 20th, having been sick about a week. He was born in Holland, but most of his life was passed in this town. Of a quiet disposition, always cheerful, his home was one where everybody was welcome, friend or stranger. Beside a wife, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Mary Earle, in New Haven, and a son, Charles, in Boston.

Death of Frank R. Newton.

Frank R. Newton died Wednesday morning from peritonitis. Although he had been dangerously sick for ten days, yet his death was a shock to the community. Mr. Newton was highly respected and a man of good judgment, his opinions being often sought and quoted. For a number of years he has been one of the selectmen, and for several years first on the board. In these positions he was very efficient and his worth was appreciated. For a number of years also he has superintended the Elijah Sherman farm, resigning last fall and purchasing the Geo. Sherman place, where he intended building a home this spring. Mr. Newton was the son of Cheney Newton, and was born Feb. 28, 1853. He was married July 25, 1878, to Mary A. Callahan, who survives him, and also five children. The funeral was held at the town hall to-day at 2 p. m.

Which Man Wins?

The one with steady nerve and a clear brain. That means, in nine cases out of ten, the man with a good digestion. A Ripans Tabule after dinner may save to-morrow's business.

Dr. Cilley, of Boston, says Ayer's Hygienic Cof fee can be used freely by persons of nervous temperament and by invalids and children, it not only being agreeable to the taste, but highly nutritious as well. Grocers sell it.

For Over Fifty Years

Not a bit too early to let us have the order for the new hat. We shall be crowded with orders in a week's time.

DRESS STUFFS:

Wonder if we can keep all the dressmakers in town busy this week. Let's try.

Eight illustrated mixtures of an all wool beige stuff that cost 50 cents a yard last season, comes low enough to go at 37½ cents; 38 inches wide.

The same, 45 inches wide, little heavier weave, cost 75 cents last season, now 50; eight mixtures.

Seven combinations of a hair line stripe 45 inches wide, 58 cents a yard.

Several odd pieces of imported stuffs, that a little dickering with the importers gives us low enough to go at 58 cents a yard.

This 50 inch illuminated covert cloth actually cost you $1.25 last season; take it now at 75 cents a yard.

Left aisle.

SATEEN UNDERSKIRTS.

Figure the cost of black sateen by the yard, so many yards to a skirt; don't add a cent for making or trimming and you'll wonder how it is that they come for so little. Don't hardly understand it ourselves; we're not losing a penny. They're made full, not a bit of skimpness anywhere; and they're fast black!

At 50 cents—Fast black sateen skirt with deep flounce; always have cost you 75 before.

At 95 cents—Four different styles of fast black sateen skirts; used to cost $1.50.

And so on up to $5.

South store.

THE NEW DRESS STUFFS.

The display of the new things is more complete than ever. We have shelves and shelves of the choicest things of the two continents to be looked at. Might make your head ache to examine them all the same day. Extend the "looking" over several days if you wish.

Left aisle.

BABY CARRIAGES.

"Whitney" stands for excellence in baby carriage manufacture. We've a full line of his celebrated makes, $4.98 to as much as you'll care to pay, probably.

When the Spring has climbed the Mountain-tops the People of Springfield and Western Massachusetts Know Forsooth that

HAYNES & COMPANY

Are ready with all the latest, best and most desirable things for Spring wear for Men, for Young Men, for Youths, for Boys, for Children. They know this just as well as they know it's time to plow, and they know it because every time for the past 40 years that Spring has begun her annual climb, Haynes & Co. have been found ready and reliable with just the goods the people want.

Therefore, when Haynes & Co. bespeak that the Spring of '95 finds them better prepared than ever to show and supply just the goods the people want, the announcement has the unusual importance, significance and force that knowledge, character and reputation always give.

JUST A FEW HINTS TO-DAY:

SPRING SUITS.

The choicest fabrics in both foreign and domestic goods. Suits from $7.50 to $30. A multitude of wants are supplied between these extremes.

BLACK CLAY WORSTEDS.

Our great display of Black Clay Worsteds is admirable in every sense, especially strong on the side of good taste. Medium cut, dovetail effects, etc. The requirements of thousands are met from $10, $12, $14, $15, $20 and up to $30.

SPRING OVERCOATS.

Not more than a word to-day. The '95 stock is just a little ahead of '94. A little neater in design and finish; a better selection and nicer goods, we think. As inspection goes on we are getting an abundance of corroborative testimony on this point. From $7.50 to $30 is the ample range.

FANCY SCOTCHES.

These English effects in Fancy Scotches, fine, dressy, genteel mixtures, are popular favorites. They are the suits for business and wear. Twelve to sixteen dollars for them.

PANTALOONS.

Haynes & Co. have the banner Spring display. They control such great specialities as "The Duchess," "The Brummer," "The Paragon," "The King" and "The McMillan." This quintet of manufacturers furnish about everything desirable in the Pantaloon line. That's why they are represented at Haynes & Co's.

IN THE GREAT CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

The Spring lines show the Brightest, Neatest, Choicest Children's Clothing ever seen. Elegance, Richness, Durability,—all the strong points are included. Suits for dress and suits for school wear, evening dress or rough-and-tumble,—the many and varied wants of the boys and children are well considered. Choice Suits are "The Eaton," "Fauntleroy," "Little Captain," "The Governor," and "The Sandow," greatest of strength. One thousand pairs Short Pants from 50 cents to $1.50 a pair. These include the celebrated Jane Hopkins Pants.

JUST NOW IN THE CUSTOM DEPARTMENT

We are making our Spring Exhibit of Foreign and Domestic Woolens for Suits, Overcoats and Trousers. We have this to say, that we do not think the display is surpassed anywhere. In our long career we have scarcely equalled it. You are cordially invited.

Also to vote "Yes" or "No" in answer to the question, "Shall License for the sale of Intoxicating Liquors be granted in the Town of Monson for the ensuing year?" All on one ballot.

ART. 3. To choose all other necessary town officers.

ART. 4. To hear the reports of town officers and committees and act thereon.

ART. 5. To see if the town will accept the list of Jurors as prepared by the Selectmen.

ART. 6. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money to suppress the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, and appoint a committee to prosecute such illegal sale.

ART. 7. To determine what use shall be made of the "Dog Money" received from the County Treasurer the ensuing year.

ART. 8. To raise and appropriate such sums of money as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the town the ensuing year.

ART. 9. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for the Monson Free Library and Reading Room Association.

ART. 10. To raise and appropriate money for the discount on taxes.

ART. 11. To determine the method of collecting taxes, and direct in regard to payment of the same.

ART. 12. To determine the salary of the tax collector for the ensuing year.

ART. 13. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for sidewalks and direct how the same shall be expended.

ART. 14. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for lighting the streets.

ART. 15. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for cemetery purposes.

ART. 16. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money to Marcus Keep Post, G. A. R., for Memorial Day services.

ART. 17. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to contract with the Massachusetts Highway Commission for the construction of State highways in the Town.

ART. 18. To see if the town will accept a town way as laid out by the Selectmen, beginning at a point on State Street opposite the house of W. C. McMaster and running southerly to and intersecting with Cushman Street.

ART. 19. To see if the town will accept a town way as laid out by the Selectmen, beginning at a point on Main street near the residence of John Collins and running in an easterly direction about five hundred and eighty feet.

ART. 20. To see if the town will accept a town way as laid out by the Selectmen beginning at a point on Hampden Avenue near the house of E. P. Hynes and running in a northerly direction about two hundred and thirty-two feet.

ART. 21. To see if the town will pay members of the Fire Department thirty cents per hour for actual service, and raise and appropriate money for the same, or make any other provision for the payment of the firemen.

ART. 22. To see if the town will raise and appropriate one thousand dollars for an Engine-house, or make some other provision for the storing of the apparatus.

ART. 23. To see if the town will raise and appropriate money for the purchase of Hose, Hose Carriages and other supplies needed for the Fire Department.

ART. 24. To see if the town will authorize its Treasurer to borrow money when necessary for town use.

The polls will be open at quarter past nine o'clock in the forenoon and may be closed at two o'clock. And you are directed to serve this Warrant by posting attested copies thereof at each of the places designated by said town, seven days, at least, before the time of holding said meeting, and by causing an attested copy thereof to be published in one issue of the Palmer Journal.

Hereof fail not and make due return of this Warrant, with your doings thereon, to the Town Clerk at the time and place of holding said meeting.

You are hereby cited to appear at a probate court, to be held at Springfield, in said county of Hampden, on the third day of April, A. D. 1895, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

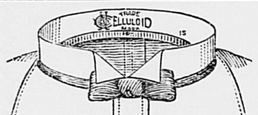
And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Palmer Journal, a newspaper published in Palmer, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said court.

Witness, WILLIAM S. SHURTLEFF, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eleventh day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

SAMUEL B. SPOONER, Register.

Try to Argue with some bright woman against Pearline. She uses it—most bright women do. You'll find the arguments all on her side—what can you say against it? We are willing to leave the case in her hands. You'll end by using it. The fact is, every argument as to the easiest, safest and best way of securing perfect cleanliness is settled by Pearline. If you use it, you know that this is so. If you don't use it, sooner or later you'll have to be convinced.

Beware of imitations. 351 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.



A Clean Collar

One that you can keep clean all the time—a collar that does not wilt when you get over-heated; that does not fray on the edge, or tear out at the buttonholes, and can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a wet sponge or cloth. These collars and cuffs are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with waterproof "celluloid," thus giving strength and durability. They are the only waterproof goods so made, and every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Ask for this, and refuse to take any imitation if you expect satisfaction. If your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us, enclosing amount, and we will mail you sample. Collars 25 cts. each. Cuffs 50 cts. pair. State size, and whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advise is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means to not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will releive the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well-known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamderlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three application of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted.

The above remedies are for sale by O. P. Allen, Palmer; Charles E. Mason, Three Rivers; A. P. Adams, Thorndike; G. L. Keeney, Monson; John D. Smith, Ware.

The Best Spring Medicine.

Everybody is looking after a medicine this spring that will do what it claims. They have tried all the Sarsaparillas, Nervines and Bitters that have been advertised, but have failed to get what they pay for; now Blood Wine will do all we claim for it, and more, too.

We are not afraid to have people try our goods before buying them, and we authorize Druggists all over the country to give you a free sample of

BLOOD WINE

A Railway Reverie.

She muses!—A far-way look
Steals into the hazel eyes,
And the untried wealth of the open book
At the window neglected lies.
Reposing, a slender hand reclines
Ungloved, with a careless grace,
And the languid swoon of the afternoon
Comes over the perfect face.

She sleeps!—and the full blown rose
Droops drowsily on her breast
And nods in the tremulous tide that flows
In the warm young life at rest.
Could the quivering smile on the cheek that plays
Be traced by the daring pen,
How the plaintive lays of a lover's praise
Might live in the hearts of men.

She wakes!—Did a dawn like this Ever yet on the dark earth smile?
Did a passing spirit stoop to kiss
The cheek that a saint would guile?
Divinely fair is the rose-blush there
Where the shadows of dimples play,
And my hungry gaze,—but I must not stare—
Reluctantly turns away.

Ah! Sweet are the thoughts that cling
To the picture in every line,
And my soul would sing on a buoyant wing
Of the vision that hath been mine.
God grant his care to the dear, sweet life,
And bright be the days to come:
But my reverie stops with the train. 'Tis my wife,
And I pay for the carriage home!

A recently published book on railway systems contains this new version of the old story of an aged lady's first journey by rail. As the train was pitched down an embankment, and she crawled from beneath the wreckage, she asked a passenger, "Is this Stamford?" "No, madam," replied the man, who was pinned down by a piece of timber, "This is not Stamford; this is a catastrophe." "Oh!" cried the lady, "Then I hadn't oughter got off here."

HER SHARE OF ECONOMY.—"My dear" said Mr. Darley to his wife, "we shall have to economize."

"Very well, love," replied Mrs. Darley, cheerfully. "Suppose you resign from your club, give up smoking and shave yourself."

"That's a pretty program, I must say. And what will you do as your share of our economy?"

"I will cut your hair."

Honest Gratitude

FOR

What Hood's Sarsaparilla Did.

"It is with pleasure and grateful heart that I write these few lines. I am very sorry that I cannot tell all I feel in regard to Hood's Sarsaparilla, Hood's Ointment and Hood's Pills. They have done so

Much Good in My Family

I cannot do without any of them. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla after the grip when I was so weak and good for nothing that it tired me to see any one move. It made me well and strong as ever. My little daughter 18 months old had a bad swelling

I began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla and rubbing the swelling with Hood's Olive Ointment. In a short time one swelling broke and discharged and both Tired, Weak, Nervous Could Not Sleep.

Prof. L. D. Edwards, of Preston, Idaho, says: "I was all run down, weak, nervous and irritable through overwork. I suffered from brain fatigue, mental depression, etc. I became so weak and nervous that I could not sleep, I would arise tired, discouraged and blue. I began taking and now everything is changed. I sleep soundly, I feel bright, active and ambitious. I can do more in one day now than I used to do in a week. For this great good I give Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the sole credit.

It Cures.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

NOTHING LIKE IT.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy Makes Another Remarkable Cure.

Four years ago Mrs. Markham, who resides on First Street, corner of North Swan, noticed a sensitive spot on her left limb. It was apparently nothing serious, but soon developed into a sore, and before long the limb was a mass of ulcers. Mrs. Markham employed some of our best physicians, but obtained no relief. In fact, was told that nothing could be done for her, so for four years she suffered with these dreadful ulcers, which had eaten their way to the bone.

A little less than a year ago an acquaintance told her about Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and that he believed she would find relief in using it. Mrs. Markham's four years of suffering had made her skeptical, the more so as she had obtained no relief from any of the physicians who had attended her.

The friend offered to send her a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy if she would try it. He did so, and there was such a decided improvement that she concluded to give the remedy a fair test. To-day, not quite a year after taking the first dose, the ulcers have disappeared, all that is left to show what she has suffered is a swelling on the ankle of the left limb, which is fast disappearing.

Mrs. Markham is naturally strong in her praises of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and feels that but for it she would now be a helpless cripple, if not a corpse.

Such a straightforward endorsement needs no comment, Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cures diseases when taken according to directions, it acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood. In cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism, ulcers, old sores, blood poisoning and Bright's disease, it has made pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed.—*From the Times Union, Albany, N. SPRING HINTS.

Some Good and Necessary Advise at this Season.

There Are Some Things That We Must Surely Do.

And This Thing Is by Far the Most Important of Them All.

Everybody needs a spring medicine—a remedy which will strengthen and invigorate the system, and tone up the action of all the organs. The change from cold to warm weather causes a depression of the vital forces, resulting in weakening nerves, impure blood, and inactive organs.

Our esteemed correspondent, Mrs. A. S. Gould, writes us from Garland, Me., some facts in regard to this subject which will be of great interest and value just at this season:

"Through the loss of my mother, the sickness of my husband, and the extra work which fell upon me, I was thrown into a condition of nervous and physical exhaustion. I grew constantly worse. I cannot find words to express that terrible feeling that existed through my whole system—a feeling of utter weakness and prostration, with strange nervous sensations.

"My right foot was so bad it was with great difficulty I could walk. I had to place my foot every way to keep from falling. My hands and arms were weak, numb and prickly. I was very tired all the time. There was a heavy dull feeling in my limbs. Nights they seemed like lead weights. When out riding a mile distance, they would feel as though I had lost the use of them. I would move my fingers and arms to see if I could. I expected any day to be found paralyzed.

"Then I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The first bottle did not seem to help me much, but the second bottle did, and made me better. I kept on using it.

MRS. A. S. GOULD.

"Now I am feeling well, can do all my work and sleep well nights. I feel as though a great burden had been rolled away from me. I am doing a great amount of work every day and often walk, besides, as much as two miles.

"I think I will pass for a smart old lady, so much for Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy! I can truly say it has done wonders for me. I cannot speak too much in praise of it, for it has been the greatest blessing to me.

"I only wish other people afflicted with disease would try it—not one bottle, but several, in order to give it a fair trial. I think they would never be sorry. My earnest prayer is that this wonderful remedy may go out into the wide world to sick and suffering humanity."

If you want to be perfectly strong and healthy, the best possible thing to do is to take this great curer and strengthener. You can be cured quicker in the spring than at any other season. You must take a spring medicine, everyone knows that, and Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the best and most certain, because it always cures.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. He has the largest practice in the world, and this great medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by any one at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

WOMAN'S WAY.

There is a perversity about the Wigglesworth furnace hardly less than diabolical. Under the tender administrations of Mrs. Wigglesworth it flourishes, but soon as her husband puts on some coal, out goes the fire. And, like most other men, Mr. Wigglesworth thinks he can run that furnace better than anybody, so there have followed numberless little family discussions on the subject. The other night Mrs. Wigglesworth awoke and saw her husband nervously getting into his clothes.

"Where are you going?" she asked calmly.

"Fire,' Mr. Wigglesworth retorted; "don't ye hear the bells ringing? Think I was going to a ward caucus? Biggest fire on record."

Mrs. Wigglesworth, being a woman, easily saw her opportunity.

"Hadn't you better take along a shovelful of coal?" she said sweetly.—Rockland Tribune.

It is the best nutrient known. By nutrient, is meant anything that promotes growth and repairs waste. Ozomulsion does this. That's why invalids like it. They like it also because it is easy to take, easy to digest, easy to assimilate. This makes it a perfect food. Then it does not nauseate like ordinary Cod Liver Oil. Does not cause eructations, that is, belching of wind from the stomach. It does nourish, refresh strengthen and fortify. That's another reason why it's an ideal food for sick people. But above and beyond all it is best, not because its basis is Cod Liver Oil, but because it contains Ozone and Guaiacol. That's the point. That's why

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BOSTON, April 3, 1895.

The House had a much longer debate than would have been expected upon the bill to prevent the sale of liquor on February 22 and July 4. It was opposed as being in the interests of monopoly, to give business to the hotels and to the wholesale places, which are said to do a brisk business when the retail places are closed. It was also said that it would greatly increase the sales in the kitchen bar-rooms. But the majority of the House seemed to believe the assertion, which was doubtless true, that the opposition came from the saloons, which do not want two of their best days cut off, and that the genuine temperance people were in favor of the bill. It merely extends to these two days the law which now applies to Sundays, Christmas and Thanksgiving, and which, for some singular reason, have not been included. The House gave a large majority for the bill, and it will doubtless go through the Senate.

The hearings upon child insurance have been prolonged at much length, and the companies which insure children have been given large opportunity to refute the testimony that children were practically murdered in order that the insurance upon their lives might be obtained. The officers of the companies have argued with much ability, and they have produced witnesses in abundance to back up their arguments and to discredit the testimony of the petitioners. Of course it is a vital matter with the companies, and they will spare no effort to convince the committee that they are right.

The treasury committee in the Senate is not in favor of the bills which have passed the House allowing $25,000 to the new normal school at Fitchburg and $40,000 for the new one at Lowell, for immediate use for temporary quarters until the new ones can be constructed. These bills have had much tribulation, and it is not certain that by this tribulation they will enter the promised land of enactment.

A very important provision has been inserted in the charter for the Western Hampshire Street Railway Company, which has been reported in the House. It is, that if the local authorities in the several towns in which it is proposed to exercise the right shall give their consent, the road may do the business of a common carrier. The provision is not prominent in the bill, but it would seem to be a very significant step in the development of the electric system in competition with the steam roads, and to indicate that the time will come before long when these roads will have the right to carry United States mails. We are making points very fast in our business development. Men do not seem to see very far in the future; at least, these steps are not foreshadowed more than a year or two before they become laws. But things which would not be thought of now will doubtless become law within a few years, and so the people make progress.

Sergeant-at-Arms Adams has sent to the house a statement of the committee expenses for March, including those for the trip of the committee on mercantile affairs to Richmond and Atlanta, which has become so notorious on account of the presence with them of Mr. Teamoah, the colored member from Boston, whose failure to secure social recognition with the others of the committee has made so much comment. The items of the expenses are these: Travel, $6339; hotel bills, $315; carriages, $77; telegrams, $9.60, book, $6; valise, $2; total, $1,049. On some cases there is a gain by the visits of committees in person to places where important experiments are being made, but there is no question that there is too much travel for the good of the state. In many cases nothing is gained which could not have been learned without leaving the state house. The visit of the committee was for the purpose of seeing what was the best course to pursue in regard to allowing Massachusetts cotton mills to build mills out of the state. This week they have reported a bill for the benefit of the Merrimack manufacturing company of Lowell, which permits it to increase its capital stock to $3,500,000, and to invest such portions of it in real or personal estate, within or without the Commonwealth, as may be necessary for carrying on their business. The company is also authorized to carry on the business of manufacturing cotton goods and other textile fabrics in any part of the United States. This is not a new departure in the policy of the state, for last year there was passed an act which enabled the Dwight manufacturing company of Chicopee to do practically the same thing. This bill will doubtless be followed by others in the same line for the benefit of other similar manufacturing companies.

Officials of the state board of health believe that there will be little or no practical difficulty in carrying through the Legislature their bill for taking the south branch of the Nashua river for a water supply. They base their belief on the ground that this is not like putting upon the tax payers a burden such as would be supposed from the cost of the enterprise, but that the interest on the money and, in time, the principal, will be paid by the water rates of those who take the water. Perhaps this will prove to be the correct view, but at the same time it is not to be expected that the mill-owners whose property will be taken, or the towns a large part of whose land will be submerged, will consent without a protest. It is not in human nature to yield so easily. Boston is likely to have a still further large sum to pay to Ashland for the taking of land to be covered by its water supply, and there is no reason to suppose that there will not be similar damages growing out of the proposed taking of the south branch of the Nashua river. Able counsel are engaged in the case, and Boston evidently is prepared for a hot struggle for more water. This, says the state board, she must have soon, at any rate.

Much opposition is being developed to the bill to give veterans of the war preference in appointment to public service in state and city departments. The Boston and Cambridge civil service reform associations have sent to the Legislature earnest remonstrances against it, and they have been timely. The bill has been checked in its passage through the House, and referred to the committee on public service, where it will receive further consideration. There is one honorably discharged veteran in the state house who refuses to belong to the organizations of his comrades, because he is disgusted with the efforts of some of them to make what they can out of the public. This bill proposes to give a veteran, no matter how lacking he may be in qualifications for the office to which he aspires, preference over any other aspirant, not matter how worthy. Of course this is all wrong, and such a bill ought never to be passed.

A scene occurred in the House on Monday whose like has not occurred for many years, and perhaps never. Mr. Moriarty of Worcester addressed the chair, but the speaker recognized Mr. Jones of Melrose, who was rising to speak, but had not yet addressed the chair. Mr. Moriarity tried to get an explanation for this preference, but the speaker rapped him down, refusing to hear him. Mr. Moriarty persisted and the speaker said: "The gentleman must desist or the chair will proceed and name him." "The chair may proceed and name," retorted Mr. Moriarty. The chair hesitated for a moment and then said, "The chair will not recognize the gentleman at the present time." This was the end of the incident, though Mr. Moriarty had defied the chair to discipline him. By "naming" it is understood that the chair gives the member into the custody of the sergeant at-arms, and the disorderly member cannot take further part in proceedings without consent of the House.

The Senate has given a favorable vote for the bill of Senator Wellman of Middlesex, which provides for submiting to the people the woman suffrage question. It calls for the votes of both men and women who are qualified to vote, in the case of women, who would be qualified were it not for sex. The idea is that it will be possible in this way to learn the opinion of the people of the state, and especially of the women themselves. The bill has yet to face the House, but there is a plausibility about it which is very likely to capture some of the members who are opposed to woman suffrage.

The House stands with the Senate in voting a large appropriation ($150,000) for the extermination of the gypsy moth. A strong effort was made under the lead of Mr. Bailey of Arlington to cut down the amount to $40,000 and to abandon the policy of extermination, admit that it has been a mistake, and try henceforth merely to keep the moth in check. By 68 to 93 the House voted down this proposition and determined to stand by the policy of extermination, being satisfied from the testimony of competent authorities that this is the only wise course to pursue and that there may be an absolute end put to this very dangerous pest.

The defeated bill of last year, which the shrewdest Republicans in the House tried in vain to pass when the notorious Ward 17 cases were pending, permitting an examination to be made before a local court of trial justice, at which the district attorney shall examine witnesses and the attorney general shall have the right to be present and take part at any time, has been reported to the House unanimously by the joint judiciary committee through Mr. Myers of Cambridge, the chairman of the committee in the House.

LANDON.

LAST OF THE STUMPF INQUEST.

No Indications that He Did Not Suicide, but Good Reasons Why He May Have Done So.

The inquest as to the cause of Frank S. Stumpf's death on the 4th of March was resumed Tuesday, Mrs. Stumpf giving her testimony. Her father and brother were present, as were also three brothers of Mr. Stumpf. Nothing new was brought out which would throw any light on the cause of his death, and there can be little doubt that the man suicided by laudanum.

Mrs. Stumpf testified that she and her husband came to Palmer to live in November, 1893, from Thomaston, Ct. Was married to Frank S. Stumpf on July 25th, 1889, in East Hartford, Ct., moving then to Thomaston, where he worked as a veneer cutter, getting $2.75 per day, which was all spent in the ordinary course of living. She had never been jealous of her husband, or he of her. He was usually of even mind and good control, but for the last few months, especially since the first of January, he had been very uneven, which she thought was caused by the condition of the business and financial troubles. She never saw him intoxicated and never knew of his being in that condition; he did not habitually use liquor, but as he was out on the team in all kinds of weather, when it was very cold he sometimes took whisky or Jamaica ginger to warm him up; he never did this till last winter. He was attentive to business matters and punctual, and did not associate with those who drank.

The business was owned by her and carried on in her name, it having been established with her money mainly, $400 having been borrowed of her father. A business of about $300 a month was done, but for several months had been running behind; large quantities of goods were out on credit, and very little money was coming in. There was very little store trade, by far the larger part of the business being done through the medium of canvassing on the road, which Mr. Stumpf did. He kept books of his orders on the various routes over which he traveled, and she had examined them, but could tell very little from them, and had made no effort to figure them up and find how much was due on them; thought it would be very difficult to do so, as they were so much mixed up. Since Mr. S's death persons had called to pay for goods, and on the books the charges were marked paid, though the customers knew they were not. Mr. Stumpf made little effort to collect what was due. She did the buying for the store, and he thought that a part of their trouble was due to injudicious purchases, though he was not inclined to be angry over the matter. She wished him to borrow money to help out through the hard times, and suggested that he apply to her father; latter she spoke to him again about the matter, and he replied that he had done so, but had been refused, though advised to sell out the business. This was denied by Mrs. Stumpf's father, who was present, though he stated that this would have been exactly his action had a loan been asked of him. Her husband also told her that he had tried to borrow from the Palmer Savings Bank. He also had a scheme to take out a 20-year endowment policy of insuance on his life, and then get money on that. On the morning of the day he died he went to Springfield to negotiate a loan, having the name of a real estate dealer whom he expected to get the money from.

On the Friday evening before the death of her husband Mrs. Stumpf left the rooms occupied by them bareheaded and in her stocking feet and went to the home of her brother, W. B. Davis, about three blocks away on the same street, through the snow and slush pursued by her husband; the reason for this was because he had pointed a pistol at her and had threatened her; she presumed that it was loaded, as it was the one he usually carried. She had been at home sick all day, and when he came home at night he scolded because the store was locked and no coffee on hand with which to fill his orders. She made a statement regarding the matter, when he drew the pistol and pointing it at her told her not to tell him that again; thereupon she ran out of the house and went to her brother's house. He had never threatened her before.

The last time she saw her husband alive was about 8 o'clock on the morning of Monday, March 4th, when he called on her just before he took the train for Springfield. Although he had complained of a headache the day before and was discouraged and disheartened, he appeared well that morning; he seemed in a hurry, but did not appear anxious or troubled, and she was greatly surprised that night when informed of his death. After he had gone, some time between 10 and 11 o'clock, she went to their rooms for her bank book and bills, intending to do business, but was too ill, and after lying down for a time returned to her brother's before noon, not going to the rooms again that day. There was no poison in the house that she knew of except a bottle of iodine, used for mediconal purposes. Mr. Stumpf had never directly said he would kill himself, but had said that if she ever had her brother balance the books, or tried to sell the business she would be sorry.

At the boarding house of Mrs. Taplin, where the Stumpfs took their meals, Stumpf remarked when he got his breakfast the morning of his death: "Oh, dear, if my wife hadn't gone to Ware last Friday this wouldn't have happened!" He also told Mrs. Taplin that he proposed to hire two men and put them on the road, staying more in the store himself, as his wife was neglecting the store and losing money.
